WPA Strikes Spread as A.F.L. Units Back Fight

Harrington Warns All Absent 5 Days Will Be Dropped From Wage Rolls

Despite a warning that all who quit WPA jobs will be discharged after five days of absence, additional thousands of skilled workers on relief projects yesterday laid down their tools in protest against the longer hours required in the new law.

American Federation of Labor building trades councils in various cities were backing up their members who quit. At New York the A. F. L. Council decreed a "strike to the finish." Similar action was taken in Cleveland, the Associated Press reported, while the Rochester (N. Y.) council voted "100 per cent support" of the walkout. In other cities, councils scheduled meetings to decide on action.

Harrington Firm

Other dispatches indicated that, at various points, the WPA strikers had been warned they would not be given home relief if they gave up their jobs.

In Washington, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, declared firmly:

"There can be no negotiation in such a matter as this. The 130-hour month is a law and not subject to discretion," he said.

In a telegram dispatched to State and local WPA administrators, Col. Harrington requested that all workers be notified by bulletin board announcements that "decision rests in their hands as to whether they desire to accept employment under the conditions under which the WPA can offer employment."

The walkouts were most serious in Minneapolis and St. Paul, where about 13,500 workers left their jobs, but were scattered in many States.

Total Unestimated

Col. Harrington refused to place a top estimate on the total of strikers, but expressed belief they were fewer than first-day reports indicated. Excepting the North Beach Airport, few projects were affected in New York, he asserted, although union leaders claimed approximately 95 per cent of the workers were "out in protest."

The Associated Press said that in Wisconsin, approximately 20,000 of the State's 58,000 WPA workers were idle. Forty of the 90 WPA projects in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area were closed, with 5,500 of the 12,500 employes inactive. In Illinois, 3,000 of 5,000 were on strike in Madison County, 1,250 of 7,685 in St. Clair County, 850 of 950 in Randolph and all of 1,100 in Perry.

Back-to-work movements were reported in other areas, and notably in the St. Louis area, the WPA director claimed that none of his 21,500 workers had quit.

The provision in new WPA regulations, raising the number of work hours from approximately 50 to 130 per month, with the security wage paid, followed recommendations he made to Congress, Col. Harrington declared. He explained:

"It has two distinct advantages. The first is that now everybody will be working the same number of hours. Before, the supervisor of a project had persons working all sorts of hours. The other is that it will be an incentive for WPA workers to find other employment.

Got Extra Jobs

"Working 50 hours, WPA clients could—and often did—get additional private jobs under assumed names. We were unable to check upon all this extra work."

Under the new wage provisions, WPA differentials will be abolished, except where supported by cost of living statistics. Such statistics are "incomplete" and will be difficult to follow, the administrator declared.

Providing immediate furloughs for approxmiately 600,000 WPA workers who have been on the rolls for 18 continuous months will work a hardship on numerous projects, he said.

Opponent's Charges

By Allen Raymond.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baton Rouge, La., July 6.—Charges that the last Congressional primary in this district was stolen on behalf of United States Representative J. K. Griffith by the machine administration headed by former Gov. Richard W. Leche by padding WPA pay rolls, wholesale intimidation of all voters on Federal relief, and fraudulent counting of ballots by the State police have been filed with the Attorney General's office in Washington, it was learned here today.

The charges were contained in several affidavits and a long summarizing statement by Joseph A. Sims, of Hammond, La., law partner of James Morrison, defeated candidate, sent to Assistant Attorney General F. John Rogge, in charge of the division of criminal investigation, yesterday.

Sims asked that a Federal inquiry into the primary be held, and asserted that such an inquiry would reveal "the most crooked, fraudulent and corrupt election of all

28 Places Closed, Driving Young To Street's Hazards

Two playgrounds for 7,000 children—that's the summer recreation and child-safety picture in Washington's Ninth Police Precinct, one of the city's most congested residential areas.

There are 28 other playgrounds available, but while youngsters play in the streets outside, targets for every lurking danger, these grounds remain enclosed with high wire fences, the gates locked and bolted.

Already this year, two children have met violent deaths in this northeast section—crushed beneath the wheels of autos while playing in the streets.

"We have 28 schools—more than any other precinct in the city," said Capt. Richard Mansfield, the police commander, "but not one of the playgrounds is open. All my appeals—and I've been urging use of the closed grounds for a long time—have fallen on deaf ears. It's tragic that our youngsters can't be afforded the safety of adequate off-street play facilities."

Narrow Squeak for 2 Boys

Capt. Mansfield was standing at the corner of Fifteenth and Rosedale streets northeast, looking at the fenced-in playground adjacent to the Webb School. As he spoke there was a screech of brakes at the intersection as two teen-aged boys narrowly escaped a trip to the hospital while in pursuit of an elusive baseball.

Capt. Mansfield called the boys to him.

"Why don't you fellows be more careful?" he asked. "Why do you play in the streets when you know it's dangerous?"

"Where else are we going to play?" asked one of the boys. "It is pretty far away to the nearest open playground and we might have to run an errand for our mothers."

"Would you use this playground if it was open?" asked the captain, indicating the barred gates to the Webb yard.

"Would we! Boy, that would be swell!" the boys responded in unison.

"You see," said Capt. Mansfield, turning to his interviewer, "these kids would be willing to play safely if given half a chance."

Recommendations Rejected

He pointed out that the Rosedale and Sherwood playgrounds, both operated by the District in widely separated sections of the community, are the precinct's only open recreation centers.

Capt. Mansfield said he had repeatedly advocated opening of all the school grounds, but his recommendations had been turned down

SSB Votes $184,000 For Immediate Use By Relief Agency

The Social Security Board yesterday acted to avert a crisis among the District's needy by advancing $184,000 for immediate use among dependent children, the blind and the aged—without funds since July 1.

At a special meeting late yesterday, the board members voted to exceed the $100,000 advance requested the day before by the District Commissioners.

Other developments due to the Senate-House deadlock on District funds were:

A substantial meal for 3,500 needy children—denied milk and bread since July 1—was guaranteed by Commissioner George E. Allen, as head of the WPA school lunch project.

Checks for more than 1,000 firemen and police on the pension rolls will be mailed out today by the District disbursing officer.

Food for more than 100 relief families was sent out last night by the District surplus commodities exchange.

Irate citizens due refunds on erroneous collections besieged District officials for their money due July 1.

The money advanced by the Social Security Board, corresponds to the total amount which would have been paid the District for July, August and September. Normally, the District matches the funds released by the board, but the members decided yesterday the money would be advanced because of the District's inability to meet the funds at this time.

Of the $183,609 advanced by the board, $131,943 will be expended for 3,300 aged; $8,874 for 210 blind persons, and $42,790 for 2,800 dependent children. The average monthly

Britain's Course

By the Associated Press.

London, July 6.—Great Britain today launched moves to strengthen the British-French front and at the same time to remove doubts as to the course she will follow in the event of new efforts to change the map of Europe.

These moves included:

Introduction of a measure in Parliament to provide a $234,000,000 credit fund to help her allies buy arms.

Announcement that the Continent would see a sample of the British air power next week when 52 Royal Air Force planes go to Paris for the Bastille Day exercises July 14.

Announcement that a number of air force reserves would be called up in the next three or four months as a test mobilization exercise.

Eden Warns Dictators

Although it was first reported that Prime Minister Chamberlain would make a statement tomorrow in the House of Commons, informed sources said later that he would not speak, since the government was anxious to refrain from making the international situation more difficult.

Athlete Returns $1,000 He Won On Bank Night

Bluefield, W. Va., July 6 (AP).—Marvin "Skeeter" Douthat, star Roanoke College basketball player, returned the $1,000 today which he won at a theater bank night—and it would have paid for his last year in college.

"Please don't you fellows make anything big out of this," Douthat, one of the college's "five smart boys" of basketball, asked newspapermen.

"Since I had no ticket I do not feel the money rightfully belongs to me," he sighed, "but it would have seen me through my senior year at Roanoke."

It happened this way:

"Skeeter" standing near the theater, was surprised when a friend rushed up and said "You've won the money."

The friend dragged Douthat to the box office, where another pal was waiting to cram a ticket into his hand. Douthat said he joined the crowd in the lobby and made his way to the stage to claim the prize.

William J. Gillespie, convicted with Buckner on seven counts of mail fraud and one for conspiracy, was sentenced to 18 months and fined $2,500.

Buckner and Gillespie in addition were given suspended sentences of three years each.

Mrs. Yarrett lives with her 84-year-old son, James, who doesn't get even a "wee drop" and isn't permitted to see his mother drink. Said Mrs. Larrett:

"I don't think it right for a son to see his mother with a whisky bottle. I have always been able to keep him away from the temptation of strong liquor."

Said James:

First Lady to Take Two-Month Rest

New York, July 6 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has called a temporary halt in her manifold activities and plans to spend two months with her family.

This was revealed today when officials of the United States Lines said they "still hoped" she would christen their new liner America here August 31. They said she had declined the invitation because she had promised her family she would accept no engagements in July and August.

Provincial police rushed to the aid of deputies and succeeded in preventing the demonstrators from marching, as well as compelling the women to don their clothes.

U. S., Not Axis, Is Japan's Best Ally, Sen. Schwellenbach Says

By Hedley Donovan.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 6.—The United States, rather than the Rome-Berlin axis, is Japan's "most important ally" in the invasion of China, Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, charged tonight before the Institute of Public Affairs.

In a bluntly worded address on the eve of the second anniversary of the Far Eastern war, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee member asserted that this country, "for the filthy profits involved, is cooperating in the destruction of Chinese independence."

"Every consideration of logic, justice and responsibility," he declared, "requires that we get out of this war in which we are so effectively participating."

To carry out America's "sacred treaty obligations in Asia," Senator Schwellenbach told The Post he will propose as an amendment to neutrality legislation now before the foreign relations committee "what amounts to an embargo against Japan."

The resolution, he explained, would require that "wherever we have agreed to respect the territorial integrity of one nation as we did for China in the nine-power pact, no products used by another nation for destroying that territorial integrity shall be shipped from the United States."

Another blueprint for American foreign policy was presented tonight's institute session by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., who warned

Conferees Give D. C. $6,500,000 Lump Sum, Restore Income Tax

New Reorganization Bill Introduced; Provides Manager Under Commissioners

Approved by President Roosevelt, a modified District reorganization bill was introduced in the House late yesterday by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, who will strive for Congressional enactment before adjournment.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who worked with Kennedy in ironing out some of the controversial provisions of the original Griffenhagen plan, explained the proposal to the President and stated that it has his indorsement.

The changes in the plans are a result of a compromise brought about by conferences and studies of District officials and many civic leaders who have been working on the proposals since the Griffenhgen report was issued.

City Council Scrapped

Major changes in the reorganization bill from the earlier Griffenhagen plan are:

The city council has been scrapped and the three Commissioners are retained but with much broader powers than at present.

The number of departments has been reduced from 17 to 14 as suggested by the President.

The education and library boards, which opposed the first plan, retain all of their present powers and the departments of education and libraries are placed under the District Commissioners instead of the Administration.

Appropriating powers are left in the hands of Congress, but provisions are included to give the District more control of its own budget.

The department of recreation is restricted in its control to the playgrounds department, the community center, and the task of coordinating recreation. National Capital Parks functions are untouched.

The Public Utilities Commission is left with all of its present authority despite the promotion of the secretary to the job of director of the department.

Manager Gets $15,000

Actually only 12 departments will be supervised by the District administrator or city manager, to be hired at $15,000 a year and responsible directly to the Commissioners.

They are the departments of finance, personnel, revenue, law, public safety, public utilities, insurance, industrial relations, health, public welfare, public works and recreation.

The industrial relations department is the only new agency not heretofore proposed. Devised at the suggestion of labor spokesmen, the department absorbs the functions of the Unemployment Compensation Board, the United States Employment office, the Minimum Wage Board and the Board of Adjustment of Labor Disputes.

Five on Labor Board

The board consists of five members, who shall be members of the Minimum Wage Board and the Unemployment Compensation Commission when the act becomes effective.

The reduction in the departments, as previously recommended, was effected by dropping the Departments of Occupational Standards and Title Records, and merging the Police and Fire Departments into the department of public safety.

D. C. Legislation At a Glance

Senate and House conferees yesterday agreed on a tentative compromise for the District revenue bill, as Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, introduced a modified District reorganization measure.

KENNEDY

Highlights of the tax measure accord are:

A United States lump sum authorization of $6,500,000.

Restoration of individual and corporate income taxes.

Repeal of the intangible personal property tax and elimination of the business privilege levy.

Retention of $1.75 realty tax rate.

Major provisions of the Kennedy reorganization plan are:

Retention of the three-man board of commissioners with broader powers.

Creation of a job of administrator or city manager who will direct the activities of 12 streamlined departments.

Present powers of school and library boards and Public Utilities Commission are retained.

No mention is made of suffrage.

Senate Group Favors 150,000 More Pensions

To Report Out Social Security Amendments To Cost $600,000,000

By Robert C. Albright

By liberalizing eligibility requirements, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday approved Social Security Act changes in effect permitting about 150,000 additional persons over 65 to claim old-age benefit payments after January 1, 1940.

The eleventh-hour change, removing some of the disqualifying so-called "arbitraries" in the House bill, was estimated to cost an ultimate $600,000,000 more than previously approved House liberalizations.

Turning aside proposals to increase the Federal contribution toward old-age assistance, and to vary contributions according to State per capita income, the committee completed action on the Social Security Act amendments and agreed to report the bill. Chairman Harrison said it will be made the special order of business in the Senate next week.

Fundamentals Unchanged

Although the committee voted increased authorizations for public health and for child and maternal aid, doubled authorizations for vocational rehabilitation and redefined agriculture labor to clarify the existing farm labor exemption, Chairman Harrison said the "fundamentals" of the House bill were left unchanged.

A House provision permitting States maintaining set standards to reduce their unemployment insurance taxes, estimated to save employers between $200,000,000 and $250,000,000 next year, was completely stricken from the bill.

Compromise Plan Drops Levies on Business and Intangible Property

By James D. Secrest.

The first break in the deadlock between the Senate and House over the lump-sum payment came late yesterday when conferees agreed tentatively to a $6,500,000 authorization and restoration of the income tax in the District revenue bill.

The accord also calls for repeal of the intangible personal property tax and elimination of the business privilege levy carried in the Senate measure.

Rates and bases of the income tax will be worked out today at another conference, according to Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, who called the parley. They will be fixed at whatever figure District officials believe necessary to make up the revenue deficiency.

Several Absent

The agreement was said to be tentative due to the absence of several conferees. The four House managers who were present, however, agreed to the $6,500,000 lump-sum payment, which was proposed by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee.

As the House has adjourned until Monday, the question of House acceptance of the compromise cannot be answered until next week.

The conferees agreed to continue the so-called temporary real estate tax at $1.75 as a concession to the House, and the Senate managers prevailed in retaining an amendment to give the District the same proportion of fines that it contributes to the maintenance of the United States District Court and the Court of Appeals. This is 60 per cent of the former and 30 per cent of the latter.

Corporate Tax Kept

The 5 per cent corporate income tax carried in the House bill is retained in the compromise draft as is a pro-rata personal levy on motor vehicles. The House tax on parking lots was abandoned.

Conferees declined to predict what rates will be adopted today for the income tax, but indications were that they will be low unless the entire local appropriations recommended by the Senate in the District supply bill are accepted by the House.

Attending the conference, besides Senator Overton and Representative Randolph, were Senators King, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, and Capper (Republican), Kansas, and Representatives Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland; Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, and Bates (Republican), Massachusetts.

Exemptions in Doubt

The conferees did not decide whether to exempt members of Congress from the income tax, as proposed in the House bill, but House managers indicated that unless the amendment is written in the entire compromise will be rejected.

Rough calculations by District experts last night showed that the District will lose more than $5,000,000 in present taxes under the compromise agreement and gain between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 in new levies plus $1,500,000 in the Federal payment.

This means that the income tax will have to raise at least $1,360,000 to equal present taxes and whatever more may be necessary to balance 1940 appropriations.

Retention of the $1.75 real estate tax will lighten considerably the burden on incomes as the House bill would have permitted the Commissioners to lower the realty levy possibly to $1.50.

The conferees still face the knotty

Senate Committee Votes Down Six-Year Limit on Presidency

A cautious Senate committee and a 100 per cent New Deal Senator yesterday raised to new heights the feverish interest of Capitol Hill in President Roosevelt's hypothetical third term.

Two resolutions limiting the Presidential term to six years were disapproved by the Senate Judiciary Committee; but the way was opened for further Senate consideration when the committee reported them both "without recommendation."

At the same time Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, emerged from a White House conference with the declaration that he thought President Roosevelt would be a candidate next year and would be re-elected.

Smathers, who recently announced that he would not accept a judgeship but would remain in the Senate if the President ran again, made public a letter to the Attorney General withdrawing his candidacy for the Federal bench.

However, a hint that the President might not seek another term was found in the statement of Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner of the Philippines, who declared on leaving the White House yesterday that he saw no reason why his friends should stop their efforts to promote his own candidacy.

McNutt has often said that he would support the President in 1940 if the President himself desired to run. The handsome white-haired Hoosier refused to state whether he and President Roosevelt discussed the third term question during their two-hour luncheon.

In reporting out the two proposed Constitutional amendments restricting the Presidential term to six years, members of the Senate Ju-

(As the son of the former United States Senator Kean, of New Jersey, Congressman Robert Winthrop Kean would attract attention in the House were he not well able to command attention in his own right. He was a lieutenant in the hard-fighting Second Division, won the D. S. C., and is a diligent and earnest lawmaker. In his guest column today he records the impressions of a freshman Representative and deplores the acrimony now in the air.)

BY THE HON. ROBERT W. KEAN
REPRESENTATIVE FROM NEW JERSEY

One of the first things a new Congressman must do is to learn the rules of the House. Otherwise, he can easily be made to look foolish by a more experienced member. However, as Cannon's "Procedure in the House of Representatives" takes up a mere 430 closely printed pages, a new member cannot at once be expected to perform brilliantly and in order.

Cong. Kean
. . . decries abuse

Another difficult thing which a new member must attempt is to memorize the names and faces of his 434 fellow-members of the House. What a help it would be if, for the first few weeks of the term, all could wear numbers on their backs as do football players; so that when the Speaker says, "For what purpose does the gentleman from New York arise?" it might be possible to know to which of the 45 members from New York he refers!

• • • •

An attempt to correct this is made at the Senate. Each Senator is assigned to a desk, and visitors to the gallery are given a diagram showing the seating. However, Senators rarely co-operate with this system and insist on sitting at desks other than their own, with the result that constituents often return home with startlingly misleading impressions of their Senators.

"—numbers for the members"

The heavy mail sent to a Congressman when there is a controversial bill on the calendar presents another problem. After receiving 4,000 letters on a certain side of the question, he wonders how the other 300,000 people in his district feel on the subject, and whether those who have written to him are a cross-section of the entire district or only a well-drilled minority.

One thing I soon noted was the absence of attention among the members when speeches containing material of real value were being made. However, I soon learned that it is much easier to get the meat out of these speeches while reading the Congressional Record in the comfort of one's own fireside.

• • • •

I think it was the elder J. P. Morgan, many years ago, who said that the trouble with the markets was "undigested securities." Today one of the chief troubles with our country is "undigested reforms." Was it not Talleyrand who declared, "Reforms to be effective must be temperate?"

• • • •

The present Administration has the most remarkable ability for keeping the country in a state of "the jitters." How can business be expected to expand sufficiently to re-employ the jobless when it is kept in a constant state of uncertainty?

"—acrimony in the air"

One tendency in the country which has been troubling me a little is the attitude of impatience toward the other man's viewpoint. Of course, I know that this was started by the White House, ably seconded by the Secretary of Interior, in questioning the motives of everyone who refused to go along with them 100 per cent, and in calling them Tories, Economic Royalists and other such names.

There is now an inclination among some to call those with a radical attitude Communists and Bolshevists. If only each group would respect the views of the other, and realize that all are striving as patriotic citizens for what they believe is for the best interests of our country, a more lasting progress toward that end might be achieved.

• • • •

In closing I must add that, full of problems and complications though the life of a Congressman may be, it seems to me an infinitely simple and easy job when compared with that of a columnist!

Bitter Party Fight Looms On Hatch Bill

Measure Reaches House Floor; Garner Openly Supports It

By the United Press.

The Hatch "clean politics" bill, which Vice President John N. Garner announced would be passed before Congress adjourns, was sent to the House floor by the Rules Committee yesterday after a fight which promises to extend into party ranks.

Representative Claude Parsons (Democrat), of Illinois, denounced it as "idiotic, impracticable, and the most superfluous and asinine piece of legislation I've ever known intelligent men to consider."

His blast was symptomatic of other feelings in the committee, but the group voted to report it with a rule for two hours general debate beginning Monday, provided Representative Jack Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, who intends to pilot it, can bring it to the floor.

The Senate already has approved a different version of the measure which was sponsored by Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, and openly supported by Garner, conservative Democratic Presidential candidate, who broke a custom of long standing to "speak out" for it.

Would Impose Curb

The bill would amend and strengthen the corrupt practices act and impose rigid restrictions on participation in election campaigns of all Federal employes, including relief workers, but excluding administrative officers.

Dempsey and Hatch are collaborating on amendments to restore drastic provisions cut out in committee, including sections barring United States marshals, internal revenue collectors, district attorneys and other officials of that class, along with WPA administrative and supervisory employes, from political activity.

The Democratic National Committee is openly lobbying against the bill which strikes at the heart of the party's far-flung patronage machine. Conversely, Garner, although a strict party man, is believed for it because substantial support would accrue to him if the vast army of Democrats on the Federal pay roll are shorn from the New Deal's potential strength.

Outgrowth of Probe

The bill was an outgrowth of investigation of politics in relief by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee which caused a political furore with its revelations.

Parsons said that he was against "this thing" because it interferes with the rights of every voter. He added that the "outs" would take advantage of the "ins" whose hands would be tied by the bill.

Dempsey parried that it was merely a step toward cleaning up conditions heretofore exposed.

Representative Francis Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said that the Judiciary Committee, which reported the bill unanimously, strengthened it to cover those who "receive as well as solicit campaign contributions."

Representative Howard A. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, demanded to know whether the measure "would keep Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes from poking his nose in State primaries." When advised in the negative he said he had "lost interest in the bill."

Schulte Milk Bill Action Delayed as House Adjourns

House action on the Schulte milk bill probably will be delayed another fortnight, it was indicated yesterday when a scheduled special meeting of the House District Committee was called off due to the adjournment of the House until Monday.

Chairman Randolph explained that it would be impossible for the committee to report any new legislation before Monday and that consequently no additional bills could be placed on the House calendar.

As Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, introduced a revised milk bill on Wednesday to evade an anticipated point of order, it is expected that he will ask that further action be delayed until the committee reports the new bill. That would delay House action until July 24.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, July 6.—Thomas E. Dewey's popularity among Republican voters as a possible candidate for 1940 has decreased slightly in the last seven weeks, while Senator Arthur Vandenberg's popularity has increased, according to the latest Institute survey of G. O. P. sentiment.

GEORGE GALLUP

Dewey is still the leading popular choice, however, among Republicans with definite opinions on 1940 candidates. He polls more than twice as many votes as Vandenberg, who finishes second, and three times as many as Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, the third popular choice.

Through a Nation-wide staff of field interviewers, the institute asked a cross-section of Republicans in every State what man they would like to see elected President in 1940. Approximately 4 in every 10 (41 per cent), said they had no opinion at this time. The choices of those with opinions are shown below, together with changes since the last survey in May. In both surveys no list of names was presented to voters; the choices were entirely spontaneous.

TODAY
1. Dewey	47%
2. Vandenberg	19
3. Taft	13
4. Hoover	6
5. Landon	4
6. Borah	3
7. LaGuardia	2
8. Lodge	1
9. Bricker	1
All others	4

MAY
1. Dewey	54%
2. Taft	15
3. Vandenberg	13
4. Hoover	4
5. Landon	3
6. Borah	3
7. Lodge	1
8. LaGuardia	1
9. Bricker	1
All others	5

These results will undoubtedly raise questions for speculation in the minds of political observers. Has the Dewey boom which gathered momentum rapidly after he ran for Governor of New York State last November, reached its peak? Dewey's popularity today—a year from the convention—is about what Gov. Landon's was in institute surveys six months before the 1936 convention. Can the young Republican district attorney of New York hold his lead for a year?

Friends Boost Candidacy

Senator Vandenberg's gain in the last few weeks coincides with a campaign by his friends to boost his candidacy. A year ago, before the advent of Dewey on the national scene, Vandenberg was the leading choice in institute polls among Republicans. Will he continue to gain ground?

Spontaneous Choices

The institute plans to test the popularity of candidates in both major parties at regular intervals. Such tests will not, of course, serve as any forecast of who the actual nominees will be, since Presidential candidates are picked by convention delegates. Sometimes conventions nominate the most popular man in the party, as in the case of Landon in 1936. But in 1920, Harding was a compromise candidate relatively unknown throughout the country before the campaign.

In addition to the nine leading choices in today's survey, the following received prominent mention by Republican voters: Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania, Congressman Bruce Barton, Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller, jr., Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Glenn Frank, Senator Hiram Johnson, Chief Justice Hughes, Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota, Frank Knox, Senator Arthur Capper, Chairman Alfred P. Sloan of General Motors, Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, John D. Hamilton, Senator Charles McNary of Oregon, William Allen White, Publisher Frank Gannett and Charles A. Lindbergh.

Senate Passes Farm Mortgage Insurance Bill

$350,000,000 Tenant Loan Plan Now Goes to House Vote

The Senate yesterday, without a record vote, passed the Lee bill providing for 100 per cent Government insurance of farm mortgages as a means of enabling tenants to buy farms.

The bill, which now goes to the House, sets a $350,000,000 limit on the amount of mortgages which may be insured at any one time. But this is intended as an "entering wedge" for an insurance program many times larger if the plan works during a three-year trial period.

Sponsored by 52 Senators, the bill would supplement the $500,000,000 "self-liquidating" loan program for tenant farmers in the President's $3,800,000,000 lending program, which, despite a delay of 10 days, has not yet made its appearance in legislative form.

Lee bill sponsors have compared the insurance scheme to the Federal Housing Administration's plan for financing urban home purchases. Under the FHA, however, mortgages are insured up to 90 per cent on homes costing not more than $6,000, and 80 per cent on homes costing more.

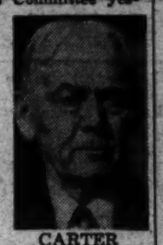
Existing far mmortgages could be refinanced under the Lee bill, which provides for 3 per cent interest and amortization of principal over a 40-year period. The maximum rate on FHA insured mortgages is 5 per cent.

The bill goes to great length to assure sellers of land that they will receive the money due them. If a farm buyer falls in arrears more than six months, the Secretary of Agriculture could issue to the holder of his mortgage a 3 per cent Government-guaranteed debenture in exchange for the mortgage. If the buyer lost a crop and could not make payments on his mortgage, the Government could pay the mortgage-holder cash and collect later from the farmer.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, author of the bill, insists that safeguards are provided against landowners unloading a lot of worthless land on the Government at high prices. Appraisals by county committees, which would act as clearing houses for buyers and sellers under the plan, would be subject to check, he said, by Farm Security Administration appraisers.

On Capitol Hill

Oberlin M. Carter, court martialed Army captain of 40 years ago, won support of the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday in his long fight for exoneration of charges he defrauded the Government.



CARTER

The committee voted, 15 to 9, to approve a bill which would wipe out a verdict convicting him of misspending Army funds on a Savannah, Ga., harbor project.

Carter, now 83, served 5 years in Leavenworth Prison and has spent the years since seeking vindication.

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday he had persuaded Dr. Willard L. Thorp to remain his economic adviser for at least three or four months. Thorp had intended to resume this month his regular job as chief statistician for Dun & Bradstreet, private credit rating and business statistical firm.

The Senate approved a bill by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to permit the commodity Credit Corporation to take title to Government loan cotton which will be traded to Great Britain for stocks of rubber.

Byrnes said the measure would facilitate the exchange of 600,000 bales of cotton for approximately 175,000,000 pounds of rubber under an agreement by this country and Britain to store these commodities as strategic war materials. The cotton now is held on loans to growers.

Legislation to outlaw "block booking" by moving picture producers, hardy perennial in Congress, late yesterday was made the unfinished business of the Senate upon motion of Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia.

Under the measure film producers would be forbidden to require exhibitors to buy all or none of a series of pictures, Neely explained.

Leaders said they were hopeful a vote would be reached this week in order to open the way for action on other measures, chiefly the security amendments.

The Senate passed legislation which would provide an estimated $8,470,000 a year for additional benefits to dependents of World War veterans.

Among other things, the measure would increase the scale of payments to widows. These now range from $22 to $56 a month and under the proposed revision would range from $38 to $64. The House has yet to take final action.

The Senate Judiciary Committee reported favorably the nomination of Martin I. Welsh, of California, to be United States district judge for the Northern District of California, and the nomination of Sam F. Whitaker, of Tennessee, to be a judge of the United States Court of Claims.

Other Congressional action included:

The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill prohibiting use of the mails for the solicitation of divorces in foreign countries, particularly "in some of the states of Mexico."

Introduced by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, a resolution designed to eliminate Government franking of "unnecessary" materials, was passed by the Senate and sent to the House.

By unanimous vote, the House passed a bill requiring deportation of aliens convicted of espionage or patronage of espionage activities.

The Senate authorized its Interstate Commerce Committee to investigate the handling of express and freight traffic by the Nation's railroads.

Borah Rebukes Axis Smiles, EntenteFrowns

Pleads for American Strict Neutrality, Cites European Self-Interest

By International News Service.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican) of Idaho, lashing back at the "smiles" of dictator countries and the "frowns" of the so-called democracies of Europe over the House-passed neutrality bill, yesterday pleaded in the Senate for an American policy of rigid neutrality toward the "everlasting controveries in Europe."

Old World nations have only one thing in mind, he said—"to use this Republic to their own selfish ends." The so-called democracies work hand in hand with the dictator nations when their interests are identical, the Idahoan said in citing the Munich pact by which Czecho-Slovakia was "literally murdered."

In biting phrases he assailed French newspapers for what he termed "autocratic contempt" toward the United States House action in voting to continue the mandatory embargo in existing law on exports of arms and ammunition to warring nations.

Earlier, there arose a new threat to the Administration's battle for liberal neutrality legislation when the Senate Judiciary Committee ordered reported without recommendation for Senate action two constitutional amendments for a national referendum before the United States can declare war.

Vote Down Referendum

By a vote of 9 to 5, the commitee disapproved one of the amendments, by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and 11 other Senators, to provide that only the people, through a referendum, may declare war, except when the United States is invanded or the Monroe Doctrine is violated.

Nine "noes" and six "ayes" were recorded on the other amendment, which Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, sponsored. His proposal would continue the war-declaring power in Congress, but forbid action by Congress until after the referendum of the people. The referendum would not be binding upon Congress, though undoubtedly persuasive.

Borah began his speech by quoting French newspapers criticizing the action of the House in voting to continue the arms and ammunition embargo.

Failed to Please France

"The denunciation," Borah said, "arose out of the fact that the duly elected Representatives of the American Congress failed to determine the question under consideration in harmony with the selfish interests of France.

"In respect to such criticism, such exceptional tirades, one might ask what is the difference between the dictators and the democracies in Europe when questions touching international affairs are considered.

"For illustration, what was the difference in policy between the dictators and the democracies at Munich? When the hour came for the dictators and the democracies to join in an international murder of the one real democracy in Europe, what was the distinction in the principles applied by the dictators and the democracies?"

Kentucky Finds 53 Flood Dead, Searches Streams for 47 Lost

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

These two tiny flood victims, the Day sisters, Sandra Anne, 2 (left), and Coleen, of Morehead, Ky., cried tearfully yesterday for drinking water. Red Cross officials later took over work of innoculation for typhoid and the boiling of water to drink

By the Associated Press

Jackson, Ky., July 6 (AP).—Bodies of 53 drowned when a night cloudburst poured tons of water into eastern Kentucky mountain streams had been identified today.

Search was continued for 47 reported missing.

Property and livestock loss was heavy. Railroads and highways were damaged badly.

Brathitt County—scene of feuds in the past—superceded Rowan County as being the scene of more deaths as bodies were dragged from Frozen Creek and from the Kentucky River into which it flowed.

The little village of Keck, a few miles north of Jackson, almost was wiped out as a 20-foot wall of water carried away all but three houses. It was here that the largest death list was expected. The 1930 Federal census gave Keck's population as 38.

Humid weather and intermittent rain hampered the work of searchers, many of whom had to wade knee deep in silt.

City and Red Cross officials cooperated with the State board of health in inoculation for typhoid and boiling drinking water. Health authorities expressed belief they had reached the stricken areas early enough to prevent the spread of disease.

At Morehead it was estimated by the Red Cross that 300 are homeless in Rowan County. Breathitt County's homeless total was expected to far exceed Rowan's figure.

All refugees in flood-stricken Kentucky will be cared for by the Red Cross, Chairman Norman H. Davis yesterday informed President Roosevelt.

White House Guard, Missing 8 Days, Found

CCC Searchers, Police Locate Him in Hut; Amnesia Is Blamed

Aided by a searching party of 40 CCC boys, police yesterday found Walter M. Haywood, White House policeman who mysteriously disappeared eight days ago, living in an improvised hut in the woods along the C. & O. Canal near Brookmont, Md.

Although he appeared in fair physical condition, the 46-year-old shell-shocked war veteran was unable to relate his experiences coherently. He was believed to be a victim of amnesia.

Haywood disappeared in full uniform a week ago Thursday, following pistol practice. The search was undertaken following reports by George McCann and Robert Burnell, who live near the canal, that they had seen the missing policeman.

White House Phoned

McCann had telephoned the White House that he had been approached by Haywood last Saturday, after hearing a broadcast yesterday describing the missing veteran. Almost at the some time, Burnell was giving similar information to the Montgomery County police at Bethesda, Md.

The posse was organized immediately. Led by Acting Capt. Herbert L. Marcey and Policeman Wilson Paine, of Bethesda, they came across Haywood asleep in the lean-to. He was rushed to a hospital.

Secret Service agents had been conducting an intensive investigation into Haywood's disappearance, fearful he might have been the victim of foul play, since the policeman recently testified in a case involving two notorious characters.

Trujillo Urges Closer Ties In Americas on Arrival Here

Dominican Leader Visits Mount Vernon, Arlington; Will Call on Roosevelt and Hull Today; Honors Friends at Party

With a wish for "even firmer bonds among nations of the Western Hemisphere," Generalissimo Rafael L. Trujillo, strong man of Santo Domingo, arrived here yesterday.

Met by the State Department officials and an honor guard of Marines, the former President and present army commander of the Dominican Republic, emerged from the Union Station a few minutes after noon to pose for newsreels and photographers and wave to a small throng.

After a visit to Mount Vernon and Arlington, where he placed wreaths on the tombs of Washington and the Unknown Soldier, Gen. Trujillo entertained informally at the cocktail hour for a "group of old friends." A number of Senators who have visited Trujillo City in recent years as the general's guest, were present, together with diplomats, State Department officials, and Army and Marine officers.

Roosevelt to See Him

Today, Trujillo will call on Secreary of State Hull, have lunch at the Senate, and be the guest of President Roosevelt at tea. After a review at the Marine Barracks here at 5:30 p. m., he will be the dinner guest of Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps.

Gen. Trujillo was not in uniform as he emerged from the station. A handsome man with gray hair and close-cropped mustache, he wore a well-cut gray business suit. At each side was a military aide, huge officers in uniforms almost identical to the American Marine field khaki.

Marines Salute Him

The drum and bugle corps broke into ruffles and flourishes as he stepped forward and the platoon of Marines saluted with bayoneted rifles. After posing for pictures, he reviewed the guard and then left for the Dominican Legation. He had come from Miami, where he left his yacht.

Laurence Duggan, chief of the American Republics Division of the State Department; his assistant, Selden Chapin; Harry Norwebb, American Minister to the Dominican Republic, and Stanley Woodward, of the State Department Protocol Division, were among the officials present. Others at the station to greet the Dominican leader were Dr. Leo S. Rowe, of the Pan American Union, and Haitian Minister Lescot.

To show that relations between the two nations—which share the second largest island of the Caribbean—are now amicable, Trujillo and Lescot were photographed with arms embraced. Two years ago a series of bloody border skirmishes threatened to plunge the two into war.

Gen. Trujillo is staying at the Dominican Legation. Minister Pastoriza met him in Florida and accompanied him here. After luncheon, the general left with his aides for Mount Vernon, and en route stopped at the CCC camp at Fort Hunt, Va., and at Fort Myer.

Before leaving for the State Department this morning, Gen. Trujillo will hold a press conference. After leaving the Senate luncheon he is to inspect the Washington Navy Yard.

Philadelphia Gets Mail by Autogiro

Philadelphia, July 6 (AP).—A roof in the heart of the Nation's third largest city became an "airport" today as an autogiro took off and landed on it in the first scheduled flights of the world's shortest air-mail route.

Mail was flown between the top of the new Philadelphia postoffice and Central Airport, 6 miles away, in Camden, N. J. Today's flights started an experimental service authorized by Congress two years ago with a $40,000 appropriation.

Car Skids on Crickets, Driver Dies in Crash

Elko, Nev., July 6 (AP).—Mormon Crickets, massed on a highway, were blamed by sheriff's deputies for the death of William H. C. Blaine, 69, Fresno (Calif.) salesman.

Blaine's car skidded over a bank after it struck the slippery insects.

Blast on Cruiser Louisville Kills Gunner's Mate

The Navy Department was notified yesterday that Rollie Jackson Belcher, 28, gunner's mate, first class, of Gordondale, Ala., died Wednesday at San Francisco as a result of an explosion aboard the cruiser Louisville.

The explosion occurred while Belcher was decapping a live saluting charge, according to information at the Navy Department.

Federal Judge Nominee Tells Of Joining Klan

Attended One Meeting, Says Davis; Denies Union Prejudice

By the Associated Press.

Elmer D. Davies, 40-year-old Nashville lawyer, nominated for Federal judge for the Middle Tennessee District, told a Senate Judiciary sub-committee yesterday he joined the Ku Klux Klan 20 years ago, attended one meeting and "never went to another."

Davies' testimony was the high light of a hearing in which scores of Tennesseans lauded his record as a lawyer and a citizen after two labor leaders appeared in opposition to confirmation of his nomination.

Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, commented the opposition witnesses didn't appear to have "made out a case," and Chairman Connally (Democrat), Texas, said he thought there will be no trouble about confirmation."

Catholic, Jewish Support

The sub-committee, Connally said, would report to the full Judiciary Committee Monday.

Catholic and Jewish residents of Nashville indorsed Davies by personal testimony and telegram.

W. F. Seigenthaler, Nashville, vice chairman of the Tennessee State legislative board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, and T. O. Denham, Nashville, legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, supported charges that Davies, as a member of the Tennessee Senate in 1935 and 1937, was unfriendly to certain labor legislation and other so-called "TVA bills."

Denies Union Prejudice

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, brought out from other witnesses, including former Gov. Hill McAlister, that Davies supported the "three or four bills" officially requested by TVA but opposed some other "so-called TVA planning bills," after former TVA Chairman Arthur Morgan advised the Governor that TVA's main interest was confined to its own legislation.

Asked if he had any prejudice toward organized labor, Davies said flatly, "I have not." He replied to charges that he had helped block the child labor amendment by saying the legislation was defeated in the House and never reached the Senate during his membership.

He almost broke down in labeling as untrue a paragraph from a labor committee resolution charging he characterized President Roosevelt in language "too vile and uncouth for repetition."

WPA Workers Walk Out

Meanwhile, 46 WPA workers walked out yesterday in protest against the recent order making mandatory a 130-hour work-month. Ross Haworth, deputy administrator for the District WPA said these men, 22 of whom were working on the National Symphony Orchestra barge, would be allowed four more days to return to work or they would be replaced. He explained the 130-hour month was imposed by law and that no official has any authority to depart from the law.

Retired firemen and policemen who have received but 60 per cent of their first semimonthly installment since July 1 yesterday were assured checks completing not only the 40 per cent payment, but the entire payment for the second half of the month.

These checks had been held up, pending a deficiency bill, which was signed by the President last week, and an appropriation warrant from the United States Treasury placing the money to the credit of the District. The allotment was $65,000.

The deficiency bill also carried provisions for $350 to complete payment of the employes in the Board of Tax Appeals office; $750 for the members of the Commission of Mental Health, and 705 for 98 public school clerks, all of whom had received some payment on June 15.

Repair Work Delayed

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., said the present deadlock had not, as yet, affected local construction projects. He said, however, certain repair work on District streets would be held up by lack of funds.

The school lunch project, threatened because of the absence of the $177,000 District sponsors' fund, was rescued temporarily last night by Commissioner Allen, who ordered the District to buy milk for the needy children.

Yesterday, 3,500 children were given one orange, two ounces of raisins and two vanilla wafers for lunch, which in many cases is the only substantial meal they have all day.

Group Recording Achievements of Women Meets

The Washington Unit of the World Center for Women's Archives held its first meeting yesterday at the Library of Congress Annex, where outstanding achievements of women will be recorded under custody of the unit.

Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, program committee chairman, announced plans for a series of teas, and Mrs. Ernest Gruening, membership chairman, outlined plans for the enrollment campaign. Miss Irene A. Wright reported on the series of radio programs, "Women in the Making of America," partially sponsored by the organization, whose next three NBC broadcasts are scheduled for today, July 14, and July 21 at 2 p. m.

Gov. Aiken Urges Back-to-Land Drive

Montclair, N. J., July 6.—A "back to the land" movement of 5,000,000 American families was urged today by Gov. Aiken of Vermont, who said that decentralized population and decentralized industry offered the best cure for the Nation's economic ills.

problem of working out credits and exemptions under the income tax proposal. While it is not expected that any other exemptions than members of Congress will be allowed, the conferees will have to decide the troublesome definition of nonresidents and whether the District or the States have a prior claim on the salaries of Government employes.

Adoption of the tax conference report by the House would not necessarily break the Senate and House deadlock on the appropriations bill, but Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee, admitted that such action would "carry considerable weight."

Land Ratio Discarded

Senator Overton, in accepting the Randolph proposal of a lump sum of $6,500,000, discarded his land ratio formula, but he explained that he had offered previously to meet the House half way in the lump sum controversy. His formula would have produced $8,000,000, while the House bill limited the Federal payment to $5,000,000.

A short while before the conference Representative Dirksen spoke against the Overton formula on the House floor. He argued that the land ratio percentage would be fairer to the Federal Government were it applied to the District's realty revenues rather than its total general revenues.

that "if you take the first step, you must take the last."

"I do not believe in bluffing," said T. R.'s eldest son, "we must never tell any foreign county 'if you do thus and so, we will declare war,' unless we are prepared to declare war."

Col. Roosevelt also appealed to the Nation not to "embark lightly" on the supply of material aid to any one country, a policy "generally known as 'standing behind' some one or some group of foreign powers." The United States ultimately would find itself "standing in front of them," he predicted.

Opposes "Benevolent Meddling"

"I do not believe in benevolent meddling of any sort," he said. American Democracy cannot "survive the strains of another war," he asserted, and if the United States goes to war to defend France and Britain it merely means the death of three democracies instead of two.

There are three things, and no more, he said, which America must be ready to defend with force of arms: "Our free institutions and our representative democracy, our own territory and the territory of any other American nation, threatened by aggression from either Asia or Europe."

The position of Russia, Germany and England in the international picture earlier today provoked lively discussion at a round table conference attended by 300 delegates, the largest crowd ever participating in one of the institute's informal sessions, according to officials.

A round table on "industrial mobilization" was canceled, it was reported, because the Army and Navy officers scheduled to take part "wanted to get a look at Earl Browder."

The general secretary of the American Communist Party touched off the fireworks at the afternoon session with a statement that "the Soviet Union wants a pact to guarantee every European state, while England just wants Russia to underwrite the guarantees London had already given."

John Wheeler-Bennet, British expert in international affairs, promptly replied, in reference to the position of several Baltic states, "its a little difficult to guarantee states that don't want to be guaranteed."

"If that's the case," said Browder, "why did Chamberlain ask Russia to guarantee Holland, which doesn't want such assurances?"

To this the Briton replied that "if the idea was for the pact to cover all European countries, it probably was felt that Holland ought to be included."

Exploring the possibilities of Russo-German rapprochement, Dr. Bruce C. Hopper, Harvard professor of government, told the session, "the gulf between the two countries is really not so wide. They are both secret service states. The O. G. P. U. and Gestapo understand each other better than the Western powers understand either of them."

A former minister of the interior under the German Republic, however, contended that "Hitler and the leading Nazis honestly intend to throw Russia back to Asia." The ideological differences between the countries are far more important than the superficial similarities, according to F. Wilhelm Sollmann, while any alliance between 80,000,000 Germans and 170,000,000 Russians would mean that Germany was the "vassal," a position "which it is hard to imagine National Socialism accepting."

Only possibility of a Russo-German understanding is "a marked trend toward socialism in Germany," he said, "which is not impossible." Europe is "as full of potential revolutions as war," he pointed out.

The institute's Nazi advocate, Dr. Friedrich Auhagen, claimed that the German government "would like to see the German-American bund disappear from the face of the earth."

"It would be worth a couple of millions to get rid of the bund," he said, "because the bund furnishes anti-Nazi propagandists with arguments that Germany is trying to overthrow the American form of government." Dr. Auhagen characterized Fritz Kuhn as "a self-appointed little Hitler exploiting recently arrived immigrants."

Wheeler-Bennett, in his morning address, served notice that "if the rulers of Germany follow in the paths of force and conquest they will meet with opposition and disaster."

Britain will accept their challenge, he said. "Force will be met by force; force to the utmost without stint or limit. We have been very patient—patient to the point where the accusation of cowardice has been leveled at us—but let the Fuehrer and his allies take heed of John Dryden's warning, 'Beware the wrath of a patient man.'"

Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, Chief of the Naval Bureau of Ordnance, told the morning session that the Vinson-Trammel and Walsh-Healy acts, if properly administered, are of great advantage to both labor and government.

"It will be only a matter of time," he said, "until Congress makes still wider application of laws limiting profit on Government contracts."

There are "only three or four American exporters who give the bureau trouble by trying to peddle abroad the Government's latest developments," he said, "thus requiring annoying precautions on the part of the great number of reputable manufacturers who co-operate fully in an effort to maintain secrecy."

Maj. Gen. Charles M. Wesson, Army Chief of Ordnance, said America is "always well prepared at the end of our wars, seldom at the beginning."

The current program of "Educational Orders" for industry will provide a distinct national asset, he said, reducing "enormously" the time required in various plants for shifting from peace-time to war production schedules.

5 General Motors Plants Closed By C. I. O. Strike

Detroit, July 6 (AP).—Pickets marched today at five General Motors Corporation units closed by a strike of approximately 3,700 tool and die makers, engineers and maintenance men who are members of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers.

Walter P. Reuther, director of the General Motors department of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., tonight hailed the walkout as "100 per cent effective."

Immediate results of the strike, which is aimed solely at work on 1940 model automobiles, were not apparent. Corporation officials said that because strikers at one plant here included cutter grinders, 5,600 Chevrolet production workers might be made idle in two or three days, when dull tools would force a shutdown.

Leche Stole Vote, Murphy Told

times." Several weeks before the primary of September 13, 1938, he said, 14,000 WPA workers were added to the rolls and paid three days before the primary.

These WPA workers, he asserted, were instructed in writing by Gov. Leche and by A. R. Johnson, director of the State Department of Welfare, that they should vote for Dr. Griffith, the administration candidate, and it was suggested to them that if they did not, "they would seriously jeopardize their future incomes from the WPA and State welfare."

"The irregularities and the frauds that were perpetuated at the booths on election day surpassed anything that had ever happened in Louisiana, a State that has been accustomed to crooked elections for years.

"In Baton Rouge, State police went into numerous booths and ordered the duly qualified commissioners to leave the polls, as they, the State police, personally took charge of the casting and counting of the ballots," it was said. In the two wards of Baton Rouge where election commissioners were permitted to make the count, Sims asserted, "James H. Morrison defeated the State machine candidate by an overwhelming majority." In the other eight wards, where the State police, he alleges, were in charge, "Mr. Morrison received practically no votes at all."

Leche Broadcast Results

"The brazen way in which the machine operated," Sims alleged, was shown when on noon of primary day, former Gov. Leche, "titular head of the State machine, broadcast from a radio station the exact results of the election in all these eight wards of Batron Rouge."

Seven hours before the polls closed, he continued, Gov. Leche broadcast returns "which proved to be identical to the returns announced by the commissioners at the closing of the polls and the completion of the alleged counting of the votes."

In the parish of Covington, La., in which former Gov. Leche has his country home, "a duly qualified voter marked his ballot for James H. Morrison and audibly announced to the commissioners how he had voted. A State policeman grabbed this voter's ballot, marked it for Dr. J. K. Griffith, folded it, and placed it in the ballot box. Two reputable citizens in this same community who asked to be permitted to witness the counting of the ballots, a privilege given them under the laws, were placed in jail," he charged.

In Livingston Parish, the statement continues, WPA workers were told by WPA officials, "that their names were put down with invisible ink on the ballots, and that if they did not vote for Griffith they would be fired." WPA foremen who were opposed to Griffith were fired as foremen and placed back at ordinary labor, it was said.

Sims' statement alleges that "great fear that Morrison would cause the uncovering of the great scandal which is today shocking the Nation is what made Leche steal this election outright. Leche tried to win it with State patronage and WPA labor. When this failed he tried to buy it outright, and when that seemed to guarantee the election, he ended up by having his machine steal it outright."

The outcome of the election, in which young "Jimmy" Morrison, chief of the Louisiana Strawberry Growers' Co-operative, campaigned colorfully and vigorously, with as vitriolic a drive on Gov. Leche as a State accustomed to campaign hyperbole has ever heard, was as follows: Griffith, 32,000; Morrison, 22,000, and Bakston, a minor candidate, 2,000.

These charges, with accompanying affidavits, sent to Washington by Sims, followed the announcement today in New Orleans by United States Attorney Rene Viosca that he and the Federal grand jury investigating allegations of diversion of WPA labor and materials to the private uses of politicians, are also taking up the 3 per cent deductions from salaries of State employes, made here ever since the days of the late Huey P. Long, by leaders of the State machine, ostensibly for a campaign fund.

Bond Not Raised

Baton Rouge, La., July 6 (AP).—Dr. James Monroe Smith abandoned efforts today to raise bond on charges that he swindled Louisiana State University, and asserted market speculation which lost close to $500,000 was intended "to help the university."

The tall, former university president's move in ending his efforts to raise $50,000 bail apparently was prompted by the prospect that release gained that way would be followed promptly by another arrest.

District Attorney Charles A. Byrne of New Orleans said he was prepared to file a bill of information charging Smith with forgery and operating a confidence game if and when the 50-year-old educator leaves the jail here.

Smith's first explanation of transactions in which he claims he was innocent of wrongdoing came through Byrne after a 15-minute jail cell conference today. Byrne reported that Smith's defense for his operations with university funds was that he was "trying to do something for L. S. U."

"In some colleges there are endowments which may be invested to the best interests of the school," Smith told Byrne.

"That may be true, but not in gambling operations," Byrne replied.

"I didn't look upon this as gambling," Smith answered.

D. C. Reorganizing Bill Introduced

Kennedy, though opposed to the latter consolidation, agreed to it shortly after his first call at the White House.

The Municipal Court merger proposed in the original Griffenhagen plan is retained, with the Police and Juvenile courts being absorbed by the Municipal Court. The presiding judge is authorized to assign judges to all courts.

Some 45 specific powers, many of them legislative in character, are assigned to the Commissioners by the Kennedy bill. In addition, an all-inclusive provision states that the District shall have "all municipal powers . . . necessary and proper for the government and regulation of its inhabitants."

Authorization is carried in the measure for the District to enter into contractural relations with the Federal Government for the payment of services as proposed in the Jacobs report.

Under the title "declaration of policy" the bill states that it is the policy of Congress "to provide for the financing of the costs of local government . . . from District funds arising from tax and other revenue measures . . . and from contributions made by the Government of the United States under appropriations made by Congress."

The suffrage question is completely sidestepped in the new bill because of the elimination of the city council control.

Woman and Crew End Sailing Saga

New York, July 6 (AP).—Seven devotees of the Seven Seas—a barefoot woman skipper and a crew of six men—came to port today in a 90-foot ketch and completed a new saga of sailing, a story of a woman who never sailed before but decided she liked it.

So she sailed 30,000 miles and stayed out three years.

"I thought it would be nice to go for a trip," said Mrs. Marion Rice Hart, captain and owner of the ketch and sister of Mrs. P. Hal Sims, member of the bridge expert duo.

The ketch's square sail and topsail, jib and mizzen were weather-marked from 1,040 days at sea. She'd been in 101 ports since Mrs. Hart, bored with her life as a sculptor and with her house, garden and servants at Avignon, France, bought the ketch and started out from Portsmouth, England, on an August day in 1936.

Nazis Angered By Propaganda From Britain

Charge Broadcasts And Letters Seek to Undermine Hitler

Berlin, July 6 (AP).—Nazis were stirred up tonight over what they call a British campaign to undermine Chancellor Hitler in the eyes of his people, and counter propaganda appeared charging Britain with mixing in Germany's internal affairs.

The campaign is being met through the press, radio and platform speakers, with ridicule and irony the principle weapons, to show the German people that, as one official put it tonight, "It is really amazing that the British people believe we could be tripped again."

Another step toward counteracting this "challenge" and toward keeping the world better informed about Nazi policy has been taken by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop. He is reorganizing the foreign office's information section, enlarging it and placing in charge younger men steeped in national socialist principles.

Use Underground Means

Officials asserted that British attempts to reach the German people with the English viewpoint through underground means and news broadcasts in German "haven't the slightest chance of success."

They said Germany was misled by this sort of propaganda in the World War, and "the consequences were a sufficient lesson."

A form letter has been received by many Germans from Commander Stephen King-Hall, English publicist, in which Hitler's foreign policy was denounced and a catastrophe for Germany predicted in event of a war.

This letter, along with a decision of British mine workers today to relay a message to German miners by radio and "underground channels," were the latest causes of indignation here. The miners' plea was for German miners to help "fight aggression" and "to secure freedom in their own country."

(Commander King-Hall, a retired British naval officer and now editor and proprietor of the K-H News Letter Service, said in London he was sending letters to individual Germans setting forth his views on foreign affairs.

(He emphasized he did this as a private citizen, and said his letters were not connected with the British government. He said he had received a number of replies.)

Nazi Leaders Held "Impossible"

Previously under Nazi fire here has been the regular news broadcast from London in the German language by the government-controlled British Broadcasting Corporation.

The Vienna edition of Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter printed excerpts from King-Hall's form letter, which appeared to have been sent to persons in all walks of life.

The letter was quoted as saying peace cannot reign if the present German policy is continued, and that "your leaders—at least Ribbentrop, Goebbels and Himmler—are quite impossible persons." (Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, Propaganda Minister Goebbels and Heinrich Himmler, chief of all German police.)

The German recipients were told that after another war, which Germany would lose, a peace would be dictated "compared with which Versailles would be child's play."

Poles to Protest To Danzig Senate

Warsaw, July 6 (INS).—Press reports from Danzig said tonight that 2,000 youths are expected to arrive there Saturday from Germany to be enrolled in the Nazi Free Corps.

Re-militarization of Danzig by the Nazis is expected to be protested by Poland in a formal demarche to the Free City Senate as a violation of the League of Nations covenant determining the status of the port as a demilitarized zone.

Poles Stoned Nazi Shops, Berlin Told

Berlin, July 6 (INS).—A Polish mob stoned and demolished all German shops and houses in the town of Schwersenz in rioting which police and reserves from nearby towns were powerless to control, dispatches from Posen to the official Nazi news agency, DNB, said tonight.

peated threats of aggression is to cherish a dangerous illusion.

["Dictators must understand that the day of smash and grab in Europe is over. They must join in negotiations or Europe will be plunged into war by the next act of aggression."]

The government also completed a draft of new instructions which were expected to be sent to Sir William Seeds, British ambassador to Moscow, tonight or tomorrow in an effort to smooth out a tangle reported holding up completion of the proposed British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact.

There was no indication as to the nature of the new proposals which were worked out by the British and French in conferences both here and in Paris.

Soviet Ambassador Maisky called at the foreign office this afternoon and it was understood the proposals were outlined to him.

They were one of the chief problems considered by the cabinet in two long meetings yesterday.

Another was the new credit fund for Britain's allies which was regarded as highly significant, coming at this time with Europe in the midst of crisis.

Quick Passage Seen

The credit bill was expected to be rushed through Parliament before the end of the month. A $46,800,000 credit was voted last spring.

(In Berlin, Deutsche Diplomatisch - Politische Korrespondenz, semiofficial mouthpiece of the foreign office, said the British credit bill was "a logical follow-up of efforts England already has pursued to draw as many foreign countries as possible into its military retinue.")

Countries which were expected to benefit by the financial measure included Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey—each guaranteed by Britain of aid in event her independence should be threatened.

It was asserted that requests for credits already have exceeded the amount provided in the bill.

The move to send Royal Air Force planes to France came as a surprise although several quarters had been urging the government to demonstrate the nation's air strength for Germany's benefit.

[The British planes, along with an estimated 1,500 French planes, will fly over the broad Champs Elysees while thousands of troops, guns and motorized units parade below, the United Press said. A battalion of British guards will march.

[The British planes will include Spitfire and Hurricane fighters and Blenheim, Hampden and Wellington bombers—tokens of the rebirth of British fighting strength in the air.

[The Bastille Day demonstration is intended to show the British and French peoples and their allies the strength of the British and French air forces and demonstrate to Germany and Italy the unity of the Anglo-French armed forces.

[British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax said in a speech last week—and his assertion was repeated by War Minister Hore-Belisha in a speech in Paris Tuesday—that France has the world's best-trained army, Britain the finest fleet and that between them they have the finest and best-trained air force.

[There were indications that squadrons of British planes also might be sent to the capitals of other "peace front" nations to impress the dictators.—Editor's note.]

Hitler to Speed Departure of Jews Under New Law

Special Dispatch to The Post

Berlin, July 6.—A vast organization to speed up the emigration of Jews from Germany is to be organized under a law announced today.

The organization's members will include every German Jew and every state-less Jew within Germany. It will be a state within a state, regulating every phase of Jewish life under the tolerance of Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior.

The organization, to be called the Reich Association of Jews in Germany, must be self-supporting. No government funds will be available to it, but it must take charge of all schooling for Jews, their hospitalization, and when necessary, their food and clothing.

Moscow Claims Japanese Lost Khalka Battle

Soviet Press Hails Great Victory in Four-Day Conflict

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 6.—Soviet Russian-Outer Mongolian forces won a great victory over a Japanese-Manchukuoan enemy during a four-day battle on the remote Khalka River battlefront, dispatches displayed today in Moscow newspapers said.

The battle was reported to have lasted from July 2 to 5, ending in the route of Japanese regular army units and their allies, which crossed the river into Outer Mongolian territory. Russians said it was the largest battle yet fought in the conflict which has raged intermittently since May 11.

(Russia and her protectorate, Outer Mongolia, hold that the border runs east of the Khalka, which flows north into Lake Bor. Japan and her protectorate, Manchukuo, insist the river is the real border.)

Amplifying a Soviet communique estimating Japanese-Manchukuoan losses at 800 killed and Russian-Mongol casualties at 100 killed and 200 wounded, the Moscow Presu described a vast encounter in which tanks, airplanes, artillery and infantry forces were engaged.

First to Be Printed

Today's reports were the first from the Outer Mongolian front to appear here since June 29. Tokyo reports of a battle since then have been ignored by the Soviet press.

(Intermittent fighting on this front has been reported since May 11, Tokyo always reporting Japanese victories; Moscow, Russian. Japanese communiques on July 3 reported a big battle on the Khalka, in which they said the Japanese took the offensive, captured a fortified hill and 30 Soviet tanks.)

The Moscow press version follows:

The battle began July 2 with a heavy concentration of Japanese forces in the region of Noman-Kan-Burd-Obo—southeast of Lake Bor—and a clash between opposing air forces.

Tanks, Cavalry Used

Early on July 3 the Japanese hurled their entire Twenty-third Infantry Division, supported by two tank regiments and six cavalry regiments, against Mongol-Soviet positions east of Khalka.

The Soviet forces successfully resisted the attack in the region of Noman-Kan-Burd-Obo, but northwest of that region the Japanese infantry, supported by at least 60 tanks, broke through to the western bank of the river and attempted to establish themselves there.

Mongol-Soviet troops and planes, however, launched a counter-attack, and late yesterday drove the enemy back across the river with heavy losses.

During the four days of fighting the Mongol-Soviet artillery put 50 Japanese tanks out of commission and silenced eight guns, while Mongol-Soviet planes and anti-aircraft batteries shot down 45 Japanese planes.

The persistence of large-scale operations in Outer Mongolia, however, is causing Moscow to watch Far Eastern affairs more closely than ever — although western Europe's main preoccupation is Danzig.

Hitler Takes Ride In His New Plane

Berlin, July 6.—Chancellor Hitler took his first flight this afternoon in his new four-motored Focke-Wulf plane of the Condor type. At the controls was Flight Capt. Hans Baur, who has piloted the Fuehrer since 1922.

The ship, fitted out for Hitler's comfort, amounts to a flying office.

Poles Reported Ready to Train Guns on Danzig

Warsaw Said to Plan Ring of Steel to Bar Nazis From Free City

By the United Press.

Paris, July 6.—The Polish government was reported reliably tonight to have informed France that it has decided to use armed intervention in Danzig, if necessary, to protect its interests in the Free City.

Polish Ambassador Juljusz Lukasiewicz was said to have informed Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet that while Poland will not take the initiative in the use of force, plans have been perfected to bring Danzig under the range of big guns.

These military measures, it was reported, envisage the isolation of the Free City by land and by sea, insofar as is possible, if Nazi military preparations continue there.

The Warsaw government was understood to have conveyed the same information to the British government.

Lukasiewicz was said to have told Bonnet that Warsaw is preparing to deliver a note to Danzig's "Heimwehr" (Home Guard) and the installation of guns on hilltops, and is considering the advisability of ordering simultaneous military measures.

These military measures would be intended, Bonnet was told, to counterbalance the armed preparations within the Free City.

Italy Tries to Get $20,000,000 Owed Her by Germany

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

Rome commercial interests report Italy is seeking to collect a $20,000,000 trade bill from her military and political ally, Germany.

Italian exports find that, although their country nominally buys more from Germany than she sells there, their ally really owes them money under the clearing system through which payments are exchanged.

The set of economic accords signed between Italy and Germany in 1937 are believed in trade circles to be sufficiently flexible to permit an adjustment. Details of the accords have been withheld by the two governments.

Survey Shows Japan Has Failed To Create 'New Order in Asia'

Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, July 6.—Japan has failed tragically in her attempt to create a "new order in East Asia," according to an unofficial survey made by more than 20 American residents in China.

The report of the group, which contains a searching analysis of conditions in Nanking, Hankow, Canton, Soochow, Hangchow, Kaifeng, Hsuchow and Chinkiang, all of which have been under Japanese control for periods ranging from one to two years, was published in Shanghai this week. Published at the same time was another appraisal of conditions in Shantung Province, including Tsinan, its capital, made by a former American resident in the province.

The Americans, who are engaged in various professional and business enterprises, participated in the survey to acquaint the people of the United States, as well as the American Government, with the actual state of affairs in China on the second anniversary of Japan's undeclared war. The foreword of the documented booklet in which the findings were published stated that the material was prepared by men and women who knew intimately the conditions which they described, and that much of their work had been written on the spot.

Most important point in the report, prior to the Japanese invasion, a total population of 5,800,000, but now have a total population of only 2,400,000, giving a decrease of 58 per cent. In all cases, the reports state that the educated and well-to-do elements of the population are gone, and in one instance of a town near Hangchow, in Chekiang Province, half of the population of 15,000 is wearing mourning for relatives killed since the Japanese occupation.

While the stage of wholesale atrocities has passed, the report says, the people are still living in insecurity, "threatened on the one hand by increasing crime, and on the other by the Japanese police system, which arrests, imprisons and impresses them into forced labor or military service without recourse to law. Blackmail and extortion are widespread.

Another significant statement in the survey indicates that the Japanese actually control less of the country around the cities than they did six months ago, withdrawal being necessary because of the activities of organized Chinese guerrilla forces.

Congress Bills Seek 20-Year Patents' Limit

Senate Group, House Act on Monopoly Probe's Findings

First fruits of the Temporary National Economic ("Monopoly") Committee's investigations were seen in Congress yesterday as a Senate committee and the House acted on bills designed to remove "serious abuses" in the American patent system.

Five bills, all recommended by Patent Commissioner Coe at Monopoly Committee hearings, were passed by the House, while two others were indorsed by the Senate Patents Committee.

The two Senate bills, described by Chairman O'Mahoney of the TNEC as the "direct outgrowth" of testimony given before the monopoly group, provide for a new Circuit Court of Patent Appeals and for the limitation of the life of a patent to 20 years from the date when the application is filed.

The 20-year restriction, said Chairman Bone of the Patents Committee, is intended to stop the practice of dragging out private control of an invention for as much as 40 years from the time of filing the first patent application. Under present law, he sad, the term of all patents is technically 17 years; but the inventor is protected during the period his patent is pending. Some inventors, he said, take advantage of this period by conjuring up endless delays to prolong it.

3-Year Application Period

The new bill, Bone explained, would limit the application period to three years, while retaining the 17-year term for granted patents.

The five House bills, also aimed at speeding up the patent process, were recommended by Coe to the Monopoly Committee; but Chairman Sirovich of the Patents Committee yesterday stoutly maintained that the bills were the result of 14 years' work of his committee. He conceded, however, that the Monopoly Committee's hearing last winter may have stirred up public interest in the patent question.

One of the House measures gives the Patent Commissioner the right to demand that patent applicants answer his letters within a month instead of the present limit of six months. Another requires that a person wishing to contest a patent on the claim he is the prior inventor must file his application within a year—instead of two years—after the patent is granted.

A third bill eliminates one of the steps in appealing decisions of the Patent Office in contested cases; another requires speedier payment of the fifffinal fee; and the fifth bill gives inventors only a year's leeway—instead of two years— between making inventions public and applying for a patent.

Still another bill, also passed by the House, gives the Patent Office a permanent force for classifying patents, consisting of at least three assistant chiefs and 25 examiners.

Coster's Widow Swoons in Quiz

New York, July 6 (INS).—Mrs. Carol Coster, widow of F. Donald Coster, suicide head of McKesson & Robbins drug firm, collapsed today after she had testified for two hours before the Federal grand jury.

Weeping and hysterical, she emerged from the ordeal and was half-supported half-carried to a lounge in the witness room by Samuel Reich, Bridgeport (Conn.) attorney, and a nurse.

Committee Opposes 6-Year Presidency

diciary Committee said they merely wanted to give their colleagues an opportunity to bring the bills up for discussion, in view of "widespread public interest."

One resolution, proposed by Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, was so worded that is would bar President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner from seeking reelection, although it would not prevent Garner from becoming a Presidential candidate. This proposal was turned down in committee by a 10-2 vote.

Only Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, often an adversary of the Administration, supported Wiley; while the ten opponents included Burke, of Nebraska, an anti-New Dealer and third-term critic; Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Ashurst, of Arizona.

Plan Loses By Tie

Senators favoring the Burke proposal, which was defeated on a tie vote, 7 to 7, included King, of Utah; Burke and Van Nuys, from the anti-New Deal Democrats; Logan, of Kentucky, and Miller, of Arkansas (Democrats); and Austin and Wiley (Republicans). Senators Hatch, of New Mexico; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Hughes, of Delaware, and Ashurst (Democrats); Borah, of Idaho, and Danaher, of Connecticut (Republicans), and Norris, of Nebraska (Independent), opposed the resolution. Both Austin and Hatch specifically stated that their votes did not necessarily indicate how they would vote on the floor.

Denying that his amendment would forestall a possible third term for the President, Burke pointed out that the proposal would "assure him a six-year term if he wins a third term."

"Would Bar 4th Term"

"Of course," Burke added, "it would bar a fourth term for him but not even Senator Guffey, the White House spokesman, has asked that yet." Guffey, Pennsylvania New Dealer, recently urged a third term in a speech which incidentally attacked Burke.

Withdrawing his name from consideration for a place on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, Senator Smathers wrote the Attorney General that "the President stated he would like me to remain in the Senate where they needed my vote and help as the Administration continues its fight for liberal democracy."

Smathers said he told the President that "it is your fight next year and you might as well carry the ball yourself."

Smathers' decision to stay in the Senate will block the plan of State leaders to appoint James H. R. Cromwell, husband of the heiress, Doris Duke, to his Senate seat.

McNutt Chats With Roosevelt, Sees No Reason Not to Run

Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner of the Philippines, was in a jovial mood as he arrived at the White House yesterday to report to President Roosevelt. Quizzed by newsmen, McNutt admitted he was a contender for the Presidency in 1940

But Begs 'Opportunity to Keep Mouth Shut;' Silent on Whether He'd Be Candidate In Face of Third Term Attempt

Paul V. McNutt, tall, white-haired United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, came to Washington yesterday to surrender his $18,000 a year job and start active campaigning for the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination.

The former Indiana Governor, who has had the Presidential bee for a substantial part of his 48 years, disclosed after a two-hour luncheon chat with President Roosevelt that there would be no letdown in the aggressive efforts of Frank McHale, his campaign manager.

Asked following the White House luncheon if his friends would continue to push his candidacy, he replied:

"I see no reason for them to stop."

Wants to "Keep Mouth Shut"

"But give me an opportunity to keep my mouth shut at this time," he implored. "It is imperative that I keep my mouth shut right now."

This remark caused speculation among newspapermen as to whether the President had made some suggestion to this effect. The fact that his candidacy still has the green light, however, indicated that he did not get very much out of the President concerning a third term.

At a press conference earlier at the Mayflower Hotel, where he is staying, McNutt explained that his bid for the Presidency was based on the assumption that the President would not seek a third term.

Would He Run Regardless?

Asked if he intended to run in case the President should seek a third term, he said he would "cross that bridge when someone builds it."

Senator Minton, of Indiana, his close friend and political ally, said a short time ago that McNutt would support Roosevelt if he should seek re-election.

McNutt began digging in here for a stay of a month to six weeks, which he will devote to clean-up work on Philippine matters. At the end of that time, he said, he will submit his resignation.

Has Not Resigned

There was some intimation that he might submit his resignation to the President at the luncheon. He said afterward, however, that he had not resigned.

Belief was that the President and McNutt reached some kind of understanding in a frank discussion. No other person was present.

But McNutt was cagey about the conversation. He turned questions over in his mind a couple of times before answering them.

Not a "Running Mate"

Asked if there was a chance of his becoming Roosevelt's running mate on a third term ticket, he replied: "That question was not discussed."

He explained that he had given the President a frank report on the Far Eastern situation. But he would not say what he had told him.

Political forecasters agree that McNutt's only cue is to play along with the New Dealers. He explained that he was in sympathy with New Deal principles. His nomination has been urged, however, on the ground that he would be a "middle of the road" candidate which all Democratic factions could support.

Asked about this, he replied:

Confers With Farley

During the afternoon, McNutt spent about 50 minutes in conference with Postmaster General Farley. Although Farley is said to dislike him heartily and reportedly regards him as an "enemy," he said the chat with the chairman of the Democratic National Committee had been entirely friendly.

The assumption is that McNutt attempted to win Farley over to his cause on condition, of course, that the President does not run again. Farley, however, reportedly has been reluctant to forget that McNutt did not deliver the Indiana delegation to Roosevelt at the Chicago convention in 1932.

Sees Cabinet Members

McNutt also talked with Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Secretary of War Woodring, and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and Sergio Osmena, vice president of the Philippines. This morning he intends to see Attorney General Murphy, his predecessor as Philippines high commissioner, Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Secretary of State Hull.

Minton will drive him this afternoon to Charlottesville, Va., where he will deliver tonight a talk on the Philippines before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Playgrounds Shut To 7,000 Children

because school authorities refused to permit the yards to remain open without adult supervision.

"I contend," said Mansfield, "that some of the older boys or girls could be hired at small expense to open and close the grounds morning and night. They could maintain order and see no one was hurt. If that is not practical, there are hundreds of WPA workers willing and eager to take such jobs."

Mansfield said the school officials feared property damage to the buildings and yards if trained supervisors were not around.

"Why," he exclaimed, "all the property damage in the world isn't worth one human life. If the life of only one child was saved by opening these grounds, whatever damage was done would be worth it."

"Orders Are Orders"

Under the present system, Mansfield and members of his command are faced with the painful duty of chasing youngsters found on the closed grounds back into the streets. School authorities have ruled the grounds are not to be entered by youthful fence climbers.

"We feel like brutes every time we do it, but orders are orders," said Mansfield.

Last year 888 youngsters were injured on city streets. Eighteen were killed. Over a three-year period, the average number of juvenile injuries has been 900 and an average of 13 children of school age have been killed each year for the past 10 years, according to traffic department statistics.

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, Community Center director, said yesterday that the summer school program calls for opening of only 63 of the city's 175 school grounds.

"That is all we ever have open in the summer time," she said. "Funds requested of Congress cover only the operation of these grounds and we don't anticipate opening any others this year."

Brazilian Army Chief in D. C. After Air Tour

Gen. Pedro Aurelio de Goes Monteiro, Brazil's army chief, arrived back in Washington yesterday after a two-week aerial tour of the United States.

Accompanied by aides and several ranking army officers, Gen. Monteiro flew from Detroit to Bolling Field yesterday after cancelling projected visits to the Waterton Arsenal and Boston. He will spend the rest of the week here, and then will go to New York for a four-day visit to the World's Fair and a trip up the Hudson to West Point, before returning to Rio de Janeiro.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson have scheduled dinners for the Brazilian chief of staff during his stay here.

Shooter at Light Held for Murder

Oakland, Md., July 6 (AP).—Magistrate C. F. White tonight announced preliminary hearing for Thomas Cooper, 52, miner, charged with the murder of Floyd Harvey, 54, would be held tomorrow.

Authorities said Harvey and Mrs. Cooper were at dinner in Harvey's cabin, near Vindex, when a shotgun blast tore through the window, killing Harvey instantly.

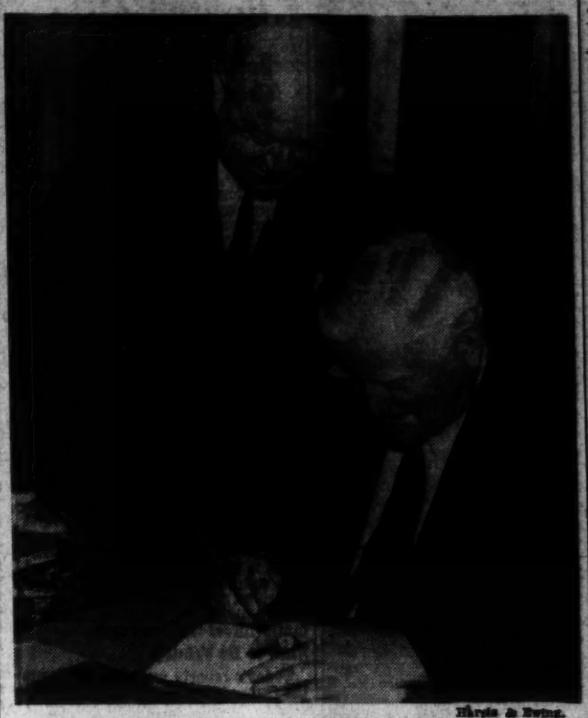
The officers quoted Cooper as saying he "only meant to shoot out the light." Mrs. Cooper was uninjured.

Crash Wipes Out Family; 7 Killed

Scranton, Pa., July 6 (AP).—Seven persons, gaily bound for a church picnic, were killed today in a highway smashup that wiped out an entire family—mother, father and two babies.

Only survivor of the crash of a small sedan and a truck at Daleville, near here, is 19-year-old Jean Johnson. Today was her birthday anniversary. She was taken along to celebrate it. Physicians said her injuries were so critical she may die.

New Coalition Drive Opens To Bar Alien Silver Purchase



Harris & Ewing.

As Postmaster General James A. Farley looks on, Vice President John Garner puts his signature on the monetary conference report, restoring to President Roosevelt the power furthr to devalue the dollar

Senate Sub-committee Called to Meet Today on Separate Prohibitory Bill As President Signs Monetary Measure

A new coalition attack on Treasury purchase of foreign silver was launched in the Senate yesterday as the President signed the monetary bill authorizing continued foreign and domestic purchase of the metal and renewing the President's monetary powers.

At the request of Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware, a Senate Banking Committee sub-committee meeting was called for today to consider prohibiting through a separate measure further Treasury purchases of foreign silver.

Foreign purchases were banned by the original Senate measure, but were restored in conference with the House along with a fixed 71.1-cent-an-ounce price for domestically mined silver, power to further devalue the dollar and revived operation of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Acting under its restored power, the Treasury meanwhile resumed offers to purchase the foreign metal but cut the price from 38 cents an ounce—the level it had dropped to last Friday—to 36¾ cents an ounce.

Defending the legality of the mohey law, which was "extended" by Congress four days after it had lapsed, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau prepared to exercise its other powers—operation of the stabilization fund and purchase for coinage of domestic silver at the new fixed price level. There appeared no thought at this time of further devaluing the dollar—a power sought by the President as a monetary weapon.

Townsend's move to repeal foreign silver purchase provisions of existing law by detaching the proposal from the broader monetary issue was attracting strong coalition support from Democrats who opposed this feature of the President's money bill. The money bill passed Wednesday by a four-vote margin only with the aid of several Democrats who were against the foreign purchase feature.

Many Nations Profited

The meeting to consider the Townsend measure was called by Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, acting for Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee on monetary policy and banking.

Hearings on a broader measure by Townsend to repeal the silver purchase act of 1934 and bar importations of silver were completed by the sub-committee last spring, and these hearings may be made a basis for action on the present Townsend proposal to stop foreign silver purchases. Witnesses testified before the sub-committee in April that over four-fifths of the silver acquired by the Treasury since 1933 has come from abroad and that Mexico "profited handsomely" even while it was taking over American property. They testified that Japan, Italy, the British Empire, the U. S. S. R., Peru, Bolivia and Spain had profited from artificially high silver prices in this country.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, a member of the sub-committee, said last night he thought there was "a good chance" the Senate would pass the Townsend bill "if it can be brought out of committee."

Members of the sub-committee that will meet on the measure include Adams, Majority Leader Barkley, Senator Byrnes, of South Alabama, Senator Brown, of Mich-Carolina, Senator Bankhead, of Alabama; Senator Brown, of Michigan; Senator Smathers, of New Jersey, and Senator Miller, of Arkansas (Democrats), and Townsend and Taft (Republicans).

Yesterday's action of the Treasury in again cutting the price for foreign silver to the lowest level ever paid by the Treasury, was interpreted in some quarters as meaning this Government will allow other purchasers to set the market price for silver.

Hoover Urges Pact to Block War Atrocities

Neutrals Could Use Moral Suasion on Belligerents, He Says

By the United Press.

Cleveland, July 6.—Herbert Hoover tonight proposed to "mitigate" barbarities of war—attacks on food ships and noncombatant areas—by restrictive international agreements with the United States joining other neutrals as "referees."

The former President, in a speech prepared for delivery at the opening session of the international convention of Christian Endeavor Societies, expanded remarks he made last night in urging American neutrality. His speech was broadcast.

Discussing the horrors of war suffered by starved and bombed women and children as he saw them while serving as food administrator and chairman of the American Red Cross during the World War, Hoover offered "a proposal that might end the worst of it."

Dissenters to Be Outcasts

He suggested that "all nations who are willing to do so" agree:

To grant food ships the same immunity from attack and blockades as hospital ships.

To restrict bombings to actual scenes of combat or works devoted strictly to munitions and refrain from bombing "civil populations."

"Nations who are not willing to enter such obligation," he said, "will have at least declared their shameful devotion to barbarism. They will be proved outcasts of civilization."

To put "moral teeth" into such agreements, Hoover said they needed "the definite participation of neutrals of the world."

Commission Proposed

A "commission" of neutrals, Hoover proposed, would have complete management and jurisdiction over all food supplies shipped to blockaded nations, and observers would be on duty in all "belligerent" countries to determine facts of civilian bombings.

"The whole of this enforcement by neutrals must be based upon moral forces and not on military force or entanglement in the controversy," Hoover said. "The real teeth behind this enforcement is public opinion among neutrals. That is one of the most potent forces in modern war. If it were pointed by definite conviction beyond all the whitewashing of propaganda, it can be far-reaching in its consequences.

"In the strategy of modern war, one of the utmost anxieties of both sides is to hold the good will of neutrals, or at least to prevent their indignation forcing them to aid or join the enemy."

Senate Committee Spreads Pensions

The committee is understood to have taken the view that unemployment insurance provisions had not been sufficiently long in operation to warrant this change.

Provisions of the House bill approved by the Senate committee included:

Pay-roll Taxes Fixed

Freezing of the old-age-insurance tax at 1 per cent on employers and 1 per cent on workers for the next three years, to save both employers and workers about $275,000,000 in 1940.

Increase in the Federal old-age-assistance grants to the States from $15 to $20 on a 50-50 matching basis.

Old age insurance benefits liberalized and benefits provided for aged wives and for widows, children and aged dependent parents.

Inequities Charged

Yesterday's lowering of eligibility requirements to permit some 150,000 additional persons over 65 to qualify for old age insurance benefits in 1940 followed protests of inequities and "arbitraries" that would disqualify thousands who had paid old age taxes.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, is understood to have pressed the issue in the committee after it developed that of about 1,200,000 persons over 65 who have made payments, only about 350,000 would be eligible for benefits in 1940, and only about 200,000 would retire to receive them. This would be only about one-fifth of the number who had actually paid taxes, and a small fraction of the 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 actually over 65, it was argued.

The House had liberalized the law by advancing two years the date for beginning payments to January 1, 1940, and this was understood to be the limit the Social Security Board was willing to go at that time. Yesterday's further liberalizations, however, are said to have board assent. They leave unchanged many of the basic arbitrary requirements complained of, whereby the difference of a few days in the date of birth, or a few cents in wages, might disqualify one and render another eligible, but materially lower the House eligibility requirements.

$600 Earnings Required

For example, the House bill requires qualifying workers to have earned $600 in covered employment spread over a two-year period to be eligible for payments in 1940.

The Senate committee's action would change the method of computing credits from a yearly to a quarterly basis, according to Senator Harrison. The change, he said, would require only $50 of covered employment in a quarter, and six quarters of such employment to qualify for payments in 1940, or a total of $300 earned wages over the year and one-half period as against $600 in two years required by the House bill.

Under the House bill, workers who were over 65 at the beginning of this year and had accumulated no retirement credits, could not qualify for insurance benefits, as wages earned after 65 are not credited. Yesterday's change would permit those over 65 who are working this year to continue to accumulate wage credits, and after six quarters, with $50 earned in each quarter, they would be eligible for benefits on retirement.

Newsboys Included

Among new exemptions from the Social Security Act written into the Senate bill was one affecting newsboys who sell papers on the streets or deliver them to homes. Another would exempt fishermen employed on ships of 400 tons or less.

The existing $1,938,000 Federal authorization for grants to the States for vocational rehabilitation was increased to $4,000,000. The House had approved an increase to $2,938,000.

By a 12 to 6 vote, the committee defeated a proposal by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to vary up to $15 the Federal old-age assistance contribution in ratio of the State's per capita income to the national average.

Baltimore, July 6 (AP).—Six Pennsylvanians were rescued from a disabled cabin cruiser early today by the United States Coast Guard cutter Calypso after drifting helplessly for nearly 36 hours on Chesapeake Bay.

Those rescued were L. Webber, E. Landis, Gilbert Rhine and Miss Edith Stone, of York, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Staube, Waco, Pa.

The sextet said their engine "died" shortly after they set out on a July 4 cruise. They wallowed helplessly in the heavy seas while other pleasure craft ignored their distress signals. The freighter Jean sighted the craft this morning and radioed the Calypso, which immediately went to the rescue.

1,110 Feet of Ice—It Should Be Ice-Cool!

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

There is no thought of a heat wave here. Off the coast of Halifax, Nova Scotia, the Chelan, Coast Guard ice patrol boat, is seen through the twin peaks of an iceberg. The crew charted the berg and measured it as being 110 feet high, above water, and 1,000 feet below

McMahon Is Honored For 20 Years' Service

Charles A. McMahon, editor of Catholic Action and business manager of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, was the guest of honor last night of his associates, commemorating his 20 years of service to the association.

The party was at the home of James E. Cummings, 3910 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Boy's Abdomen Pierced In Fall From Tree

Fran Black, 9, of 3342 Tennyson street northwest, suffered a puncture of the abdomen, severe bruises on the arms and legs and shock when he fell 20 feet from a tree in front of his home.

After an operation at Emergency Hospital, the boy's condition was described as "only fair."

Can-Can? No Can-Can, Says Danielle Darrieux

Paris, July 6 (AP).—A French court today upheld Danielle Darrieux, French movie star, in her refusal to play the leading role in a film entitled "The French Can-Can."

The Regina Film Co., sued Miss Darrieux for 1,000,000 francs (about $26,484) when she declined to take part in the picture because she said she didn't like the scenario.

Hague Returns Streets to People

Jersey City, N. J., July 6 (INS).—Mayor Hague, in his own words, "turned the streets over to the people" today, and indicated a new policy of appeasing the C. I. O. and other groups with which he has been at legal loggerheads the past year.

Taking direct action to show his submission to the recent United States Supreme Court ruling, Hague led the city commission in the passage of an ordinance permitting street-corner meetings anywhere in the city at any time.

Etting Balm Suit In Judge's Hands

Los Angeles, July 6 (AP).—The $150,000 love theft suit of Mrs. Alma Alderman against Singer Ruth Etting Alderman went into the hands of Superior Judge Samuel R. Blake for decision tonight.

Rival attorneys wound up arguments, while in some undisclosed city, awaiting the outcome of the case, were Miss Etting, who is Mrs. Alderman No. 3, and Myrl, the man whose love she was charged with stealing from Mrs. Alderman No. 2.

Too Much For A Whistle

Curiously enough, both sides in the fight over the monetary bill seem to find a certain satisfaction in the final enactment of that measure. Since the Administration threw its strength behind the conference report, the Senate's acquiescence was undoubtedly a victory for the President. But it may prove to be a very hollow victory.

The doubtful character of the Administration's triumph stands out from any analysis of the situation which the new monetary measure has created. There was no real controversy over continuation of the stabilization fund. Both Democratic and Republican opponents of the bill were ready to approve separate legislation renewing the Treasury's power to use this fund for protection of the dollar in the international money markets.

As matters stand, however, there is a real question as to whether this $2,000,000,000 reverted to the general fund when the law creating it expired last week. If so, a new appropriation is necessary to permit its continued use for stabilization purposes.

Despite Attorney General Murphy's opinion, there are also some lingering doubts as to whether belated enactment of the bill actually revives the President's power to devalue the dollar. That power is not likely to be used in any event. The circumstances under which Congress has voted to renew it make further tinkering with the dollar even more improbable.

But in its fight to retain this power it does not intend to use, the Administration has revived the whole broad issue of manipulating the value of money. The complete failure of this policy during the early part of the New Deal ought to have been sufficient incentive on the part of the Administration to let sleeping dogs lie. That fiasco would have been a dead issue if the President had been willing to trust Congress with future decisions as to whether our currency should be further debased.

Now jubilant Republicans are preparing to carry the issue of sound money into the next Presidential campaign. So it is difficult to see that the Administration has gained much, and it may have lost considerable strength, by demanding the right to cut another slice off the dollar.

So far as the effect of the bill on silver is concerned, the Administration's victory appears to be still more flimsy. The Treasury has lost the right to fix the value of domestic silver. It must now pay silver producers in this country a higher subsidy than it believes to be justified. Discretion as to foreign silver purchases is retained. But there are indications that the Treasury will voluntarily limit its buying from foreign sources. It has already substantially reduced the price it is willing to pay for this metal since the Senate threatened to cut off foreign purchases.

Nevertheless, the President used his influence to continue this indefensible policy of buying from foreign producers a commodity for which we have absolutely no use. The weakness of both the dollar devaluation and silver purchase policies suggests, not that the Administration has won a "righteous cause," as Senator Barkley claims, but rather that it has paid too much for its whistle.

Britain's Latest Moves

While waiting for the prolonged negotiations with Russia to be concluded, Great Britain is not neglecting those nations with which she is already allied or to whom she has extended guarantees of support in the event they are attacked.

A bill has just been introduced in Parliament to create a credit fund of £50,000,000 (about $234,000,000) out of which to finance purchases in the United Kingdom of war materials needed by Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey to strengthen their defenses. Thus the peace front which Great Britain is erecting is to be linked not merely by diplomatic instruments but also by a chain of gold.

Of equal importance is the decision to send five squadrons of British planes to participate in the French celebration of Bastille Day, July 14. Such action will not only emphasize the very close relationship which exists between Great Britain and France today but will also serve as notification to Germany that Great Britain has made very considerable progress during the past year in developing her air force.

All these measures, together with many others that have been taken, add up to a demonstration by the British people and government that they are not willing to permit peace to go by default. Great Britain has gone a long way since Munich.

Asia's Greatest War

Just what happened in the vicinity of the Marco Polo Bridge, a few miles outside of Peiping, on the night of July 7, 1937, has never been fully established and may never be known.

Japanese spokesmen insist that a detachment of Japanese troops engaged in night maneuvers were fired upon by the Chinese garrison in the walled town of Loukouchiao. The Chinese deny the charge. But such affirmations and denials are, at bottom, immaterial.

If an incident had not occurred at that particular time it would have occurred sooner or later. The Japanese needed an excuse to extend their authority over that part of North China not yet under Tokyo's direct or indirect control. Six years earlier, they had manufactured an incident in the vicinity of Mukden to serve as the pretext for the ensuing conquest of Manchuria.

To the Japanese army leaders, the odds were overwhelming that they would have their way in short order. Great Britain and France were preoccupied with the Spanish civil war and the possibilities of new German and Italian coups. Russia, by the drastic purge of the Red Army's high command, had temporarily eliminated herself as a major factor in Far Eastern calculations. The United States, through passage of the neutrality law, had gone on record in opposition to making any distinction between aggressor and victim.

There remained only China to reckon with. And over a period of six years the Chinese government, under Chiang Kai-shek, had quite regularly given way to Japanese pressure. But even assuming that this time the Chinese would resist, the Japanese high command was firmly convinced that the war would be over in a short while, by which time Japan would have taken another long stride in the direction of overlordship in eastern Asia.

They were right in their estimate of the world situation. They were disastrously wrong in their estimate of the nature, extent and duration of Chinese resistance.

The war has now lasted just two years. It has engaged more men, has led to greater destruction of lives and property and has, and continues to have, more far-reaching implications than any war fought in the Far East in modern times. The cost to Japan has already been greater than that of all previous wars she has undertaken since she embarked on her imperial course. And the end is still far from sight.

On the military side, Japan's record has been outwardly impressive. Except for the one setback at Taierchwang, Japan has won every major battle. Every major city in the great coastal plain of China is in her grip. So is every port and, except for short stretches, all of China's railroads. But the number of Chinese troops still in the field is, perhaps, greater than at any time since the war began, and they are in much less danger of being smashed than before.

Japan's attack on China, accompanied by the wanton bombing of civilian centers and such manifestations of barbarism as those which occurred after the capture of Nanking, has unified the Chinese people as they have never been unified before. Forced to move from Nanking to Hankow, from Hankow to Chungking and prepared to move even farther west, should that be necessary, the Chinese government carries on.

And, while compelled to dig steadily deeper into her diminishing resources, Japan finds that through the hostility of the population, the failure to find puppets she can rely upon, and the multiplication of guerrilla bands throughout the area nominally in her control, she is unable to capitalize her conquest.

China has fittingly been compared to a pillow. It is easy to push a fist into it. But the farther the thrust the more the fist is surrounded. So, at the end of two years Japan is further off from victory than she was at the beginning. She finds it increasingly difficult to go forward. But she cannot retreat. She is caught in a net of her own devising and that net may ultimately strangle her.

Admirable Cooperation

Representative Vreeland, of New Jersey, has shown a most commendable attitude in withdrawing his bill on lunacy commitments. That measure would have had the unfortunate effect of abolishing the District Commission on Mental Health which has functioned with notable success during the last year.

After studying the situation created by the new law, Mr. Vreeland has concluded that the congestion of the psychopathic ward of Gallinger Hospital can be relieved without disturbing the good work the new commission is doing. Instead of pressing forward with his previous bill, he cooperated with representatives of the District Bar Association in working out a much better approach to the problem. His new bill coincides with changes in the present law approved by local officials and the Budget Bureau.

This example of intelligent cooperation between District groups and legislators who control the Capital could be repeated in numerous instances to the advantage of both Congress and the local community.

A Welcome Showdown

The emphatic vote of the Senate in support of a larger Federal payment for the District seems to be having the desired effect. Backed by that 71-to-1 mandate, the Senate conferees appear to have obtained a reasonable compromise, although the terms of agreement still have only tentative approval. If the Senate holds firm, this or a similar compromise will undoubtedly become law.

Senator Glass accurately stated the issue when he said: "It's a question of whether the Senate of the United States is a part of the legislative branch of the Federal Government." For too many years the Senate has yielded to the House on appropriation and revenue bills for the District, simply because the more popular body has taken an adamant stand. Now apparently the Senate has decided that it will no longer give the House its way to avoid a protracted controversy.

In the face of this attitude, the House will doubtless be forced to meet the other chamber half way. It could not face the country on the issue of dictating to a co-ordinate branch of the National Legislature. Any House which should cling to the position that it alone shall govern the District of Columbia would put its members in a predicament when they next account for their stewardship before the voters. No group of Representatives can afford to take responsibility for such conduct.

While the fight continues Washington faces a real crisis. Families on relief are without the means of sustenance and part of the city's playgrounds are closed at a time when they are most needed. All municipal departments are probably affected by the city's financial famine in one way or another. If the dispute is not settled before July 15, Washington will be unable to meet its municipal pay roll.

Knowledge of these hardships should hasten final action on the part of the conferees and encourage the spirit of compromise in both houses of Congress. But the situation is not serious enough to warrant any weakening of the Senate's demand for fair play. Hardships now faced by destitute families are not as great as would be the hardships extending throughout the year if the supply bill should be enacted as passed by the House.

The Senate is showing good judgment, therefore, in its decision to fight the issue through to a satisfactory conclusion. The more acute the crisis becomes the weaker will be the position of the House, for its course is contrary to the established practice under our system of government. It is doubtful whether this fiscal relations issue could be settled without a crisis in any event. So residents of Washington have many reasons to be pleased that a showdown over the Federal payment and related issues is in sight.

R. S. V. P.

It appears that the Rev. Mr. D. H. Whittaker, an evangelist, of Nashville, Tenn., has eaten nothing for 12 days because he has not had an answer to a letter that he wrote to the President. Mr. Whittaker says he will not break his fast until the answer is delivered to him and then only if it is the right kind of answer.

Mr. Whittaker refuses to divulge the contents of his letter, and we dare say Mr. Roosevelt found it something of a poser. Suppose Mr. Whittaker said, "What are you going to do about the deficit?" or "What about all this third-term talk?" But these might have gone automatically into Mr. Early's famous "below the belt" bag.

Anyhow, we think Mr. Whittaker is putting an exceedingly dangerous notion into people's heads. He says he has written to the President before, but that the answer he got was "not the kind I wanted." Suppose people in general should take to writing letters like the following:

Dear Mr. Editor: I beg to inform you that your letter stating that while my poem, "Baby's Blue Booties," had been examined with interest, it is unfortunately not suited to your present needs, is not the kind of answer I wanted from you. I am returning the MS with warning that I will accept no nourishment until I see my poem published in your magazine."

Or like this:

Dear sir: I call your attention to the fact that it is several months since you have paid us anything on your account, and our patience is exhausted. You are hereby notified that neither I nor any member of our entire credit department will touch food or drink until your check for the unpaid balance is received.

We shudder to imagine what, under those circumstances, the death rate from malnutrition would be!

It's beginning to look as if civilization may have to be called pretty soon on account of darkness.

Neutrality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On a visit in Washington and the Fair at New York, I am having a little time to visit around the halls of Congress. I live in extreme west Texas and a "fur piece" from where our laws are made, but we on the ranches and in small towns do not get so far away we do not watch and try to learn what is going on, and keep up with it.

Most of us away out there do not understand all this nonsense about a neutrality bill. We know we are not neutral, and are not going to be neutral. We have very little patience with Nye, Johnson, Borah, and others who prate about our isolation and example to the world. If there is a fight between the democracies and the dictators we are going to do what we can to whip the dictators or to help England and France to do it. Why shouldn't we? Any sort of argument that tends to keep up from being ready and willing to support other democracies with arms, munitions, supplies, men if necessary, etc., is pure nonsense.

We are going to have to whip the dictators in time or be whipped, and the wind-jamming of certain Senators is costing us much money, men and time. Had it not been for such selfish, prejudiced and illogical men at the time, we would have joined the League of Nations, and the present condition of the world would not be in such turmoil.

The WPA Curtailments

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having been associated with the WPA in several different kinds of work so as to know the worth and the weaknesses of this provision for the unemployed, I can appreciate how our Congressmen, with a din of complaints in their ears from different sections of the country, and the press of the land not any too sympathetic with the provision, have felt that they must make some gesture toward curbing expenses growing out of the WPA.

The law which the President recently signed under protest, and which he said would work hardship for many, seems to hit worthy men and women who constitute the best on the WPA rolls much harder than it does the people whom the law sought to eliminate. The best element in the WPA used the small pay the Government thus allowed to supplement other bits of work performed on days they were not engaged with the Government. But now, with no increase in pay, and no chance to make up days of sickness or holidays (which the administrative jobs permit), every hour of time is taken up for a recompense which is called a "security wage," but which will prove to be a starvation wage, for men and women with families.

Furthermore, the present plan may result in the best of the WPA workers being obliged to leave their projects, since their entire time must be consumed for a totally inadequate compensation; and the element left be very largely the class that will hang on with little ambition or pride as to work done. Thus the Government would be sustaining the least worthy of its citizens while driving from assistance the unfortunate but most worthy of the great army of the unemployed.

The shots fired at the persons who, by their want of appreciation of the Government's provision to help the unemployed, have done the WPA injury, have struck down the very persons who have made the WPA worth while as to aim and accomplishment.

A Tax Theory

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you kindly publish the following definitions?

Depression—general business conditions when the value of property and business is lower than the value of the dollar; in other words when a dollar will buy more than 100 cents worth of property or goods, based on normal business conditions; the more the dollar will buy, the more severe the depression.

Prosperity—general business conditions when a dollar will buy less than 100 cents worth of property or goods; the less a dollar will buy, the greater the prosperity.

We all know that taxes will reduce the value of property or goods; the value lost automatically is transferred to cash. The higher the taxes the more serious the depression. To make prosperity, simply reverse the condition by placing a Federal tax on cash; tax all cash held or hoarded, except Government-owned cash, a cash required by law to be held as reserves. A graduating tax would cover the problem, say from five to ten thousand a 2½ per cent tax, from ten to fifteen thousand 5 per cent tax, from fifteen to twenty thousand 7½ per cent tax, and all over twenty thousand 10 per cent tax.

This would cause investments in all kinds of property and businesses, paying of debts, buying supplies of goods, improving property, etc.

These investments would not be in one locality, county or State, but all over the United States at the same time—a sound foundation on which to make safe and profitable investments. All of this investing would require much labor, which would put the unemployed to work; private capital all over the country would be investing. By doing so they would not be required to pay the tax on cash, but would be investing in a rising market.

In other words it would mean prosperity.

Senator Guffey's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By accident, Mr. Guffey's speech was tuned in on the radio Monday night, and of all the "tinkling cymbals and sounding brass," it took the prize.

Mr. Guffey iterated and reiterated that he is an American in his effort to impress the public that he and Mr. Ickes (another American of the same type) were thoroughly convinced that our country would go completely to the dogs were not the President elected to a third term. Even adding that "who but a Roosevelt could meet (or was the word "match," which is worse) the dignity of a King and Queen?"

Practically three generations of Americanism compels me to resent that remark in the name of my fellow countrymen—who believe, and a great many of them really know—that "all men are created equal" for there is a Biblical authority on the subject. Did Mr. Guffey forget for a moment that he was supposed to be an American?

For the fact that my ancestors were British, I am duly proud and there's great admiration for the entire royal family of England. However, I feel that even the average intelligent American connects the word nobility with nobleness, and under the circumstances would either King George or Queen Elizabeth be anything but sorry that of the millions of Americans who welcomed them to our country only a Roosevelt was at ease in their presence? Or doesn't Mr. Guffey know that putting one at ease is the procedure of any well-bred person when contacting one to whom fate has seemed to be less kind?

In my humble opinion, Mr. Guffey's "faux pas" is deplorable for the party he represents.

Mr. Ickes and Mr. Guffey's past and present mistakes are awakening all true Americans to the fact that bad politics creates bad taste.

The "New Social Order"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Beware of false prophets." "By their fruits ye shall know them." Math. 7-15.

States' rights, local self-government and individual liberty have been the earmarks of the Democratic Party from the foundation of the Republic until the New Dealers poisoned the Democratic faith. Liberty lovers recall the view of Thomas Jefferson that under the constitutional doctrine of the sovereignty of the separate States "our general government may be reduced to a very simple organization and a very inexpensive one; a few plain duties to be performed by a few servants."

They view with alarm a politically appointed Supreme Court heterodoxically amending the Constitution; a dictatorial government encroaching upon State rights and sacred individual liberties; an insufferable swarm of bureaucrats fattening on the public treasury and disbursing exorbitant tax levies to win power; a once-free people regimented into impotency by labor laws, farm laws and business laws, creating class unions, caste unions and pauper unions breeding dismay and revolution.

Can the Republic survive under such a "new social order?"

Why Business Improves

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every time the barometer of industry climbs up a few points, up jumps the 100 per cent New Dealers to tell us that business is improving under the New Deal. I wonder if it ever occurs to them that perhaps the setbacks the New Deal has suffered at the hands of the legislative body might in a measure be responsible for these spasmodic spurts of business! It may be that business takes heart when it finds a ray of hope to guide it. One thing is certain, and that is that business does attempt a surge forward every time the New Deal takes a slump.

A short time ago I took a trip to New England and, while there, I questioned many of the people who once thought that Mr. Roosevelt was the salvation of the country. The aggregate opinion of these men was that Mr. Roosevelt would have done a good job if he had not allowed himself to become the prey of a group of men whose purpose was to build up a political machine that would perpetuate them in power. This group, they thought, is not so much interested in bringing the country back to normal as it is in forcing business to be guided by the dictates of a political body. All of which is quite contrary to the democratic form of Government that made this country what it is.

The Post Impressionist

Temptation

Peace reigned in the hotel. There was hardly a sound except ticking of the lobby clock and the restless fidgeting of the bellboy on the bench. The sun streamed through the blinds into the empty lobby, casting a striped shadow. The room clerk watched it move slowly, almost imperceptibly, across the floor.

A few visitors had strayed in during the morning, as though they had lost their way. A party of Westerners, swinging through the East on their way to the World's Fair. Strange, dogged people with dead-pan faces, foreign names and a poor command of English; immigrants probably, or sons of immigrants. They had piled into a sight-seeing bus after lunch; but they would be back.

The room clerk leaned on the counter and dreamed of far-away isles in the Pacific where the quiet was never disturbed by returning tourists. A fly circled under the high ceiling, dropped and settled on the bellboy's forehead.

"I'm going out to get a soda," said the bellboy and disappeared.

The room clerk gazed at the statue at the far end of the lobby, drumming an unconscious tattoo with his fingers. A demure, modestly draped, plaster maiden, in the corner by the dining room. A shaft of sunlight through the Venetian blinds fell across it, ridculously picking out an upraised finger.

The room clerk knew every line of that statue, though probably no one else in the place ever noticed it. Statues look damn silly in a hotel, he thought, in mild irritation. Stuffy old-fashioned place this anyhow. His eye roamed up the ornate pillars on each side of the stairway, half the gold leaf in the flutings worn off and the other half tarnished. And those cherubs painted on the ceiling. Nobody ever looks at them except me, he thought, and they're all I see these dull days.

The shaft of light had passed up the finger, and lingered at the tip before disappearing. Another had left the wrist and was slowly climbing to take its place.

His rambling fingers touched the pile of mail on the counter, waiting to be sorted and slipped in each visitor's box. He looked down in disgust. Four letters and a small package. A very small package, hardly more than an inch square. He picked it up to see who it was for.

Daintily but quite illegibly addressed. Neatly sealed with wax. Strange thing to be sent to a half-American Western tourist, or to one of the aged ladies who made the hotel their home. He turned it over, and back again. Funny.

He pushed the letters aside and leaned his elbows on the counter, wondering, dreaming. The clock ticked loudly, and the fly walked slowly up its face. Before he noticed what had happened, his prying fingernail had broken the wax, and gingerly unwrapping the little parcel, he opened the box inside.

A ring, yes. He had thought as much. Beautiful, too. A single diamond, hardly larger than a match-head, glowing like pure white fire. So that was what a real diamond looked like. Two tiny ones beside it, on a thin gold band. Must have cost thousands.

He laid it in his palm and looked at it, almost reverently, fascinated by the way the cut sides of the stone flashed as he turned it, by the bright reflection it cast on the polished counter. Forgetting everything in admiration, he came out from behind the counter and walked into the middle of the room, holding the ring in his fingertips high above his head in the sunlight, feasting his eye drunkenly on its brilliance, his head thrown back in wonder.

A streetcar jangled by in the street outside, calling him back to reality. With an awful jerk he realized what he had done, his raised arm stiffened and a cold sweat broke out on his back. My God, I'll lose my job for this; I'll be put in jail!

Trembling slightly, he walked to the bellhop's bench and sat down, cowering against the wall. Then the fear passed, and he looked up, feeling his eyes glazed, the muscles stiff behind the ears. It was done; there was no use trying to put it back in the package, the seal was broken; there was no use trying to get rid of the diamond, it was too valuable; whoever it was for would certainly miss it and make inquiries; and that was that.

His eye fell on the statue—that ugly statue he looked at every day, and no one else ever noticed—the ridiculous upraised finger seemed to mock him.

Mechanically, as though half remembering what he had meant to do when he first opened the teasing little package, he walked to the statue, lifted the ring, and gently slipped it onto the finger, past the first joint, and with a little pressure past the second. It fitted perfectly.

He stepped back, smiled, and returned behind the counter. The last ray of sunlight from the Venetian blind was leaving the wrist, climbing up the back of the hand. He waited, his heart beating violently. There! The sun caught the diamond, and a brilliant white flame seemed to leap from it and dance across the room.

The room clerk sorted the four letters with a song of triumph in his heart.

The L. S. U. Scandal

WHATEVER ELSE may be said of the educational standards of Louisiana State University, it cannot be denied that that section of American youth which had the privilege of attending school there has been given a thorough course in political extortion, embezzlement and the cruder methods of graft, and from the absence of any protest audible beyond the campus limits, it may be assumed that youth, as represented by the student body of L. S. U., studied these practical devices not with the pious abhorrence due sin but with the avidity of restless and inspired adolescents eager to go and do likewise.

Huey Long built big, and his successors have extended the physical development of the school which he called "my university," just as he called the coffee-colored Mississippi flowing past Baton Rouge "my river." And it is said that in the matter of routine book learning the university has a very respectable rating. But all this time the students have been exposed to the example of elders and direct superiors, both in the State capitol and in the university itself, who made corruption attractive by mocking the very name of decency and flaunting the wages of vice.

Handful of Students Showed Courage

IN ALL THE TIME since Huey took over the school just one feeble yip of protest has been heard from among the thousands of students who saw graft legalized and even ennobled and the courts and other arms of government reduced to the level of rackets. In this case a handful of amateurs in the journalism branch were expelled for printing a protest in the school paper against one of Huey's less flagrant excesses and were deserted by their fellow students in the face of Huey's threat to expel a thousand of the little illegitimates, as he called them in shorter and uglier word, if they dared dispute his will. He put in a censor at the newspaper plant, and the remaining students closed ranks and went on as before, but committed, now that the issue had been raised and disposed of, to the rule of a dictator and to passive toleration of any villainy done in his name by any member of his machine in the university.

He brought them out with band music, football trips and, it must be added, the opportunity to receive an education, but an education corrupted by daily observation of political conduct which sneered at their citizenship. They learned politics by intimate study of the art in a State capitol that was a house of political prostitution and by unavoidable, casual contacts with abandoned men holding seats in the Legislature and jobs in the mysterious mazes of the State machine.

Sin Made Attractive To Penniless Youth

SOME OF THESE men wore an outward appearance which was likely to make sin rather attractive to penniless country youth at the university, for the machine included many properous individuals who held college degrees, talked well and persuasively and wore not the faded denim of the downtrodden clayeater in whose name they ran the State but store clothes from the city.

It is not a wonder that youth fell at L. S. U., but with youth speaking up so bright and bold on public matters just now it is to be wondered what morals and principles this particular group of American youth will bring to bear on public life and private citizenship. They learned everything having to do with politics in an institution which, in its revelations of practical politics and the duties of public officers and citizens, was a school for crime. A future Governor of Louisiana, taken for extortion or plain thievery in office, might very plausibly plead that he was guilty of no wrong in his own mind because he was carrying out the lessons taught him at his alma mater, L. S. U.

Retiring Governor Was Judge at 36

MR. LECHE, the retiring Governor, was a figure who represented youth and the fine, alert precocity of the new citizens only a few years ago. He is only 41 now, and he was a judge of the court of appeals at the age of 36. Youth, in his case, received the highest trust that the State could repose, but his successor, Earl Long, felt compelled to announce by way of repudiation that henceforth "no State employe nor anyone else has got to subscribe to The Progress," a paper owned by Leche, and that "anyone who doesn't advertise in it will get as square a deal from this administration as anyone who does."

Tetlow Named Coal Adviser

Percy Tetlow, who served as chairman of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, yesterday was named by Secretary Ickes to be technical adviser to the Director of the Bituminous Coal Division of the Departmetn of Interior.

eHarings on coal prices will be held by the division on July 24 and August 7, Ickes said.

Tetlow, a native of Ohio, is 63 years old. He was a member of the commission from the time it wis set up in 1935 until its dissolution on June 30.

Ickes, Gen. Johnson To Debate Oct. 5

Secretary of Interior Ickes announced yesterday that he and Gen. Hugh H. Johnson will debate their differences over a nation-wide hook-up October 5.

The subject of their debate, which will be given as part of the Town Hall of the air program, will be "Pressing Political Issues."

The Snooping Industry

IF HALF the world doesn't know how the other half lives these days, it is not for want of snooping. "Armies of Spies," by Joseph Gollomb (Macmillan, $2.50), gives an alarming picture of the new mass methods of international espionage, infiltration, "boring from within," sabotage and propaganda work going on everywhere in Europe and Asia, with a concluding survey of possibilities and perils in America.

Of course, any extensive statements on spies must be taken largely on faith, especially in respect of details. It is hardly possible to check information at the source. Spies cannot be asked to verify the facts about themselves under affidavit; nor do governments subsidizing espionage usually care to tell the world what they are about.

The sensational, individual type of spy, such as Mata Hari, is out of date, Mr. Gollomb affirms. Woman spies now have to be much more clever, not merely at gathering information but in devising means to prevent counter-espionage. He cites a Mme. de Littke, who did not hesitate to shoot a Hungarian officer, her lover, whom she suspected of being a spy on the other side. Her professional pride was at stake. She certainly got her man.

Mr. Gollomb remarks that Hitler began his political life in the German intelligence service. It was then, Mr. Gollomb says, as an "assignment," that Hitler attended the first meeting of the German Workers' Party, which was to become the Nazi Party. He was instantly converted, and joined it. But he had learned the uses and delights of secret service in politics.

MR. GOLLOMB estimates the direct cost of German espionage to the German treasury as about $8,640,000 a month at present. Of course these figures are only hypothetical; no official accounting is available. Anyhow, "the average spy is poorly paid," so Mr. Gollomb thinks there must be about 45,000 full-time and part-time spies working for Germany. And "for every paid spy it is safe to count two to five volunteer assistants."

There is one thing that can't be said of human beings: You don't have to pay them to do that sort of work. Well, only a couple of years ago, in this country, the New York papers carried a news story of a zealous woman who discovered that one of her neighbors possessed at $20 gold piece, a wedding present kept for many years as a nest egg. The patriotic lady hastened to inform a Government agent, and the Government raked in the coin. The owner was let off without a fine or imprisonment for trying to keep her own property, but that was pure generosity. The incident gives a hint how much talent would be available at home just in case.

However, the mass use of spies is the main thing. Battalions of spies are sent into any country which a dictator may wish to bring to terms. There are "termites," who do "psychological" work, and "torpedoes," who do material damage to important industries, utilities, bridges, canals, aviation fields, and the like.

They have, Mr. Gollomb asserts, a bacteriological corps to distribute disease germs and plant blight. This is a bit like medieval tales of deliberate spreaders of plague. However, if it is true, one can only hope that occasionally a germ gets loose and busies itself on its immediate custodian.

A very special branch of espionage consists of provoking or staging "international incidents" as an excuse for aggression when ready. There are also supposed to be picked assassination corps, like the emissaries of the Old Man of the Mountain at the time of the Crusades. The killing of such political figures as Dollfuss, of Austria, and Duca, of Rumania, was thus arranged.

MR. GOLLOMB says Germany's spies are trained in a regular school, in classes of five. The system requires an index; that of the Berlin police, Mr. Gollomb avouches, filled 180 rooms as long ago as 1925. If a spy can find anything in that, he must be good. German associations in foreign countries send information about their compatriots abroad to add to this central collection of data.

Spain and Czecho-Slovakia were crawling with spies from the "totalitarian states." Mr. Gollomb gives many names and describes the business which masked them. He relates a comedy episode of an intelligence officer attached to a German embassy as man of all work. One night, the staff being short-handed, the Ambassador ordered his man to wait on table. He got a flat refusal. There was much telephoning to Berlin, and the Ambassador was smart enough to accuse his supposed underling of "sabotaging his social activities." All the same, the spy was excused from waiter duty.

MR. GOLLOMB makes one woman, an exiled White Russian, as the "key woman" through whose capture 94 other counter-revolutionaries were arrested and shot. For Russian espionage data Mr. Gollomb has to quote from the famous trial records, taking them for what they are worth—and how much that may be nobody knows. One complicated case of espionage of Soviet agents in the United States is on record, with a conviction, but it seems to have been mixed up with spying on Japan. The passport-forging business is not mentioned, though it must have been for the convenience of spies.

Naturally, espionage is not such a mass business as yet in the United States because the scope of literal spying, as distinguished from propaganda and sabotage, increases with the restriction of liberty. Spying in this country, to be of any use, must be mainly concerned with genuine secrets of military defense and the like. Only 12 spies have been tried and convicted for such activities since 1933. But Mr. Gollomb bids us beware for the future.

U. S. Naval Strength

Problems Of Defense

THE COLD MILITARY basis for President Roosevelt's efforts to strengthen the hands of Great Britain and France has been brought out in the discussions this week at the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

The basic facts came from two of the brainiest men in our armed services: Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, head of the War Plans Division of the General Staff of the Army, and Commander Leland P. Lovette, of the Navy Department. They talked, not about what our foreign policy should be but about the problems of our national defense. In what they had to say there was no politics, no sentimentalism, no argument about the conflicting theories of government in the present-day world.

Navy Strength Lies In Panama Canal

PUTTING TOGETHER what they had to say (and reading between the lines here and there) these points regarding our defense situation stood out:

First, under present conditions, we are safe from anything more serious than hit-and-run raids and some interference with our commerce. Our navy is strong enough to repulse an attack over either ocean—so long as the Panama Canal remains open so that the navy can move quickly from one ocean to the other, and so long as an enemy or enemies are unable to establish bases in this hemisphere or adjacent to it.

Secondly, we lack the naval power to carry to a conclusion a naval war in the western Pacific. We are only trying to maintain the 5-3 ratio between our navy and the Japanese navy. This ratio was adopted at the Washington Conference in 1922 as one which would leave the Japanese safe from attack by us, and us safe from attack by Japan. We don't have information on recent Japanese naval building, but so far we are not going above what we suppose to be the 5-3 ratio. We have not developed and fortified any naval bases in the Far East—at Guam or in the Philippines. To push to a conclusion a single-handed war against Japan we would have to have bases in the Far East and a larger navy than we now have built or building.

British Navy Helps To Protect Us

WITH THE CO-OPERATION of the British we could blockade Japan and bring her down with our present naval power. But the British probably won't have enough battleships and other naval craft to send to Singapore for such joint blockade before 1946, unless the European situation miraculously quiets down, releasing British battleships now needed in the Mediterranean and for home defense.

If we are to prosecute a single-handed war against Japan in the Far East, our rear—the Atlantic—should be secure, of course. This leads up to the third point:

If the British Navy disappeared, or permitted a power hostile to us or eager to expand into South America to filter through, we would have to build another fleet to protect ourselves in the Atlantic. We would need a navy in each ocean, instead of a navy which moves from one ocean to the other. The navy we would need for defensive purposes might not be twice as large as our present navy. In any event, our main striking force of battleships probably would be kept as a unit. But we would need a larger navy, and if we have any intention of fighting in the Far East we begin to run up into astronomic figures for the navy. Roughly, the navy we would need might be three times the size of our present one. You add one navy for simultaneous defense in both oceans and the other for carrying a fight into Japanese waters.

Atlantic Defense Weaker Than Pacific

HOW MANY TIMES would we have to multiply our navy if we were to try to police not only the Atlantic and Pacific, but the rest of the world, as it is sometimes suggested that we are destined to do? The answer is left to your own imagination.

There is a marked difference between our defensive position on the Atlantic side and our defensive position on the Pacific side. On the Pacific side we have a line of defense stretching from Alaska through Hawaii to Samoa, which is about 2,500 miles west of our mainland—or almost as far away from us as Europe is on the Atlantic side. In the Atlantic our bases are on, or very close to, our seaboard.

If British sea power were struck down, we would have to begin to worry about control, not only of such nearby points as Newfoundland, the Bahamas, and Bermuda, but Greenland, the Azores, and perhaps even the Cape Verde and Canary Islands. To repulse an attack on Brazil, the bulge of South America, we probably would need naval and air bases nearer Brazil than any we now have.

How Much Help For Great Britain?

IT SEEMS EVIDENT that the collapse of Great Britain as a world power would vastly increase the expense and difficulty of the defense of the Western Hemisphere, and create all kinds of new situations which would be disturbing and perhaps inimical to our interests. If that is so, it is good policy for us to give the British a helping hand.

How much help should we give them? Can we give a little help without going ahead and giving a great deal of help if it becomes necessary? These are other questions, which there isn't room to investigate here. Eventually a point would be reached where it would be sounder policy to let the British Empire go under and to take under our own protection such parts of it as we want than to waste our substance in trying to keep it intact.

Sea Power And War

By Commander Stephen King-Hall

Special Correspondence of The Post

Naval Strength Of Axis, Democracies

London.

THE PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY to the Admiralty, speaking in debate on the naval estimates in March stated that "We believe our navy is so strong today that it can confidently accept a direct challenge in battle from any combination of foes, and our building program is of such immense proportions that in a few years' time our relative strengths will not have diminished."

While it is true that there is at the present time no navy, or combination of navies, in European waters capable of offering us direct challenge offered by the German navy in 1914-18, and whilst the naval tonnage to be completed in 1940 and 1941 will be almost a third greater than that completed annually in the three years before the last war, the situation has altered in one vital respect.

In the last war Japan was our ally, capable not only of protecting our joint interests in the Pacific but of contributing a considerable number of escort vessels for the convoying of allied ships in other parts of the world. Today we have to reckon with Japan at the best as an unfriendly neutral and at the worst as a hostile naval power. Moreover whilst the Mediterranean shores during the last war were, with the exception of Turkey and the headwaters of the Adriatic, in the hands of friendly or neutral powers, today we have to reckon with the probable hostility of Italy not only on the European but on the African shores, including the Red Sea, of that vital link in imperial communications.

It is not without significance that the Italian newspaper La Tribuna, commenting upon the possible outcome of the trouble in Tientsin, laid stress on the repercusions that a naval struggle in the Pacific would have on British interests in all seas "beginning with the Mediterranean."

BUT LEST we appear to be taking too gloomy a view of the political factors in the balance of sea power it must be said at once that the probable accession of Turkey, with her admirable naval bases in the eastern Mediterranean, to the ranks of our friends goes a very long way toward offsetting the probable defection of Italy to the ranks of our enemies. And as regards the Pacific, the anti-Comintern triangle (Italy, Germany and Japan) would be ill-advised to omit entirely the United States Navy from their calculations.

As was pointed out in the British government's statement on June 16 the questions raised with regard to Tientsin by the Japanese army manifesto affect the interests "of all powers which have treaty rights in China," and although there is no United States concession at Tientsin as there is at Amoy—recently the scene of concerted action by British, France and the United States of America—the United States cannot remain indifferent to "unofficial" Japanese demands which, if conceded, would amount to abandoning China to her fate and giving Japan carte blanche to establish the "new order in Asia." Recent events have made it abundantly clear that this new order means "marching orders" for the Western powers—including the United States of America.

In this connection it is particularly noteworthy that a recent straw ballot conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion showed a vote of 74 per cent in favor of China, 24 per cent neutral and only 2 per cent in favor of Japan.

Against the political background outlined above let us consider the balance of sea power as between the democracies and the dictatorships.

It is notoriously misleading, in view of such complicated factors as the age of existing ships, inconsistent methods of classification, the date of completion of ships under construction, bases and strategical geography, to assess relative naval strengths in terms of the units in each category. But roughly speaking the position is that if Britain and France were to be immediately involved in a war with Germany and Italy they would have a preponderance of 318 to 112 completed ships and 89 to 36 building. But as the three German "pocket battleships" of the Deutschland class are in commission, and as these vessels can only be sought out and adequately dealt with by three British and two French battle cruisers, the preponderance is not as great as it might appear.

The axis powers are stronger as regards submarines, at least 162 to 135, but in aircraft carriers "the allies" are greatly superior. If Japan were to join the axis powers, and France and Great Britain were obliged to take on Germany, Italy and Japan with the U. S. A. neutral, it is well to recognize that the balance of naval power would make it impossible for us at the moment to be overwhelmingly superior on the sea both in European and Far Eastern waters. In such circumstances it would be important that the public should realize the strategic necessity of concentration at the decisive point, which would be the western European and Mediterranean areas and not the Far East.

If we lost the war in the west it would not matter what had happened in the Far East; if we have won the war in the west, the Far Eastern situation can easily be cleared up.

THIS DOES not mean that in the case outlined above we need run out of the Far East with our tail between our legs. It does mean that we should have to adopt a defensive attitude based on Singapore, with Hongkong as an outpost to the north. From that position it would be our business to harass Japanese sea communications by various methods, and, in fact, do to Japan what Germany and Italy would be trying to do to us in the west, but which it should be impossible for them to achieve with any great success if we are sensible enough not to allow Far Eastern developments to make us weaken our great superiority of strength in European waters.

I HAVE LITTLE DOUBT that this view of the strategic situation would meet with approval of the naval authorities, but the Board of Admiralty is bound to pay proper attention to the views of the cabinet, which are political in character and—in a democracy—cannot be wholly detached from public opinion.

It is, therefore, of the greatest importance to our national security that the public should be aware of the broad principles of strategy.

During the Great War the Germans bombarded some east coast towns of England in the hope that public clamor would force the government to order the Admiralty to tell the commander in chief of the Grand Fleet to take dispositions which would disperse the battlefleet.

Public opinion in Great Britain was not deceived. If war comes again it will not be a simple affair, and it will be very necessary for the public to keep its nerve and not do or say anything which will upset the conduct of a sound strategy of imperial defense.

100 D. C. Baptist Churchmen to Go To Md. Assembly

More than 100 local Baptist churchmen plan to attend the twenty-third annual Maryland Baptist summer assembly meeting at Braddock Heights, Md., today through July 14.

Among these will be Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention; Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor of Fifth Baptist Church; George W. Harris, of the photographic firm of Harris & Ewing; the Rev. J. Raymond Nelson, pastor of Bethesda Baptist Church, and Miss Nannie Burroughs, president of the National Training School for Women and Girls.

Teachers Pledge Loyalty to Democratic Way

San Francisco, July 6 (AP).—The National Education Association reaffirmed its "unswerving loyalty to democracy" and "the practice of the democratic way of life in school management," at today's concluding session of its seventy-seventh annual convention.

Amy H. Hinrichs, of New Orleans, won the unopposed nomination for the presidency of N. E. A. earlier this week, to succeed Reuben T. Shaw, of Philadelphia. B. F. Stanton, of Alliance, Ohio, was unopposed for another term as treasurer. Only 11 vice presidencies and 3 places on the executive committee remained to be filled by the election committee.

Decision Is Due Today on Byrd Pole Expedition

The Government yesterday continued its attempt to decide whether it could start an expedition into the Antarctic regions by September 30.

With $340,000 made available for the project in the deficiency bill passed by Congress las Friday, and, with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd declaring preparations could be completed before the Antarctic winter closes in, prospects were bright for an affirmative answer.

The answer will be made, probably today, through the office of Secretary Ickes, who heads the five-department committee charged with making the decision.

Admiral Byrd, who is donating the use of his ship, the Bear of Oakland, is expected to be named by President Roosevelt to head the expedition.

Marine Band to Play At Squalus Memorial

The House Naval Committee yesterday approved legislation authorizing the Marine Band to visit Rye, N. H., July 30, to play at memorial services for 26 who died when the submarine Squalus sank off Portsmouth, N. H.

Ames Seeks Reelection In Arlington

Lone Republican on County Board First To Toss Hat in Ring For November Vote

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 9499.

William P. Ames, lone Republican member of the county board, announced his candidacy for reelection at the general November election.

AMES

Ames has been a resident of Arlington County for 29 years. He is the vice president of the Murphy & Ames Lumber Co., whose plant is located at Rosslyn.

"Having been successful in my own business," Ames said, "I feel that I am qualified to administer the affairs of the county in a satisfactory manner."

"If re-elected," he added, "I shall strive to give the taxpayer the most for his tax dollar and shall use the same interest and effort in county affairs as I have in my own business."

Sewer System Extended

Arlington—County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan yesterday reported that the county has added 18.9 miles of sewer lines to its system during the period from July 1, 1938, to June 30, 1939. Sewer lines now total 192.2 miles. The report shows that during the past year 1,876 sewer taps were made.

During the year the sewage treated at the disposal plant totaled 1,212,000,000 gallons, with an average daily flow of 332,000,000 gallons. The gas production for the year was 7,941,510 cubic feet, with an average daily production of 21,754 cubic feet. During the year there were five pumping stations in operation.

D. C. Man Stricken

Arlington.—Stricken with a kidney attack at the courthouse yesterday, Edward L. Koiner, of the 1900 block Thirty-seventh street northwest, Washington, was given first-aid treatment in the health clinic by Dr. H. L. Bastien. He was later taken to Mount Alto Hospital.

Business Women to Meet

Lyon Park.—The executive committee of the Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club will meet tonight at 8 in the home of Mrs. Linda Cost, 923 North Daniel street.

Air Executive Speaks

Country Club Hills.—A. L. Raysor, field traffic manager for the Eastern Air Lines, was the guest speaker at a joint meeting of the Arlington Kiwanis and Lions Club yesterday at 12:30 p. m. in the Washington Golf and Country Club. Raysor, introduced by Carol F. Winchester, briefly described the progress of aviation since the flight of the Wright plane at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

Frank Clark, chairman of the Lions "soft ball" committee, accepted the challenge of the Kiwanis soft ball team. The game will be played Thursday.

Program for Outing

Arlington.—N. C. Hines, chairman of the committee, announced yesterday that the program for the outing of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, to be held July 26 at Fairhill Farm, will include soft ball, horse shoes, a three-legged race, sack races and tug-of-war.

Bank Board to Meet

Rosslyn.—The executive committee of the Arlington Trust Co. will meet today at 1 p. m. in the bank building at Rosslyn.

Story May Find Missing Pigeon For Maryland Boy

Because of Pedro, the hitch-hiking pigeon whose amazing antics were described in The Post yesterday, a little boy may find his lost pet.

A Silver Spring youngster called the Oxon Hill home of Pedro's mistress yesterday to find out if Pedro was his own missing pigeon. Disappointed, he learned it wasn't.

But, shortly afterward, Mrs. Clayton O. Eakle, of 229 First street northeast, called the Oxon Hill place to inquire if Pedro had been lost, and if the tame pigeon that flew into her home was the hitch-hiker. But Pedro was home.

There is the possibility Mrs. Eakle's visitor belongs to the little boy in Silver Spring. He forgot to leave his name, but if he calls Mrs. Eakle, at Lincoln 2980, he may find his pet.

Mrs. Lillian Cowan Funeral Tomorrow

Mrs. Lillian Cowan, 39, of Capitol Heights, Md., died at Providence Hospital Wednesday night.

Mrs. Cowan had been in the hospital since June 25. Besides her husband, she leaves three sons and two daughters. The funeral will be held from Chambers Chapel, 517 Eleventh street southeast, tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burila will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Church Dinner Set

Leonardtown, Md., July 6.—St. Ignatius Church at St. Inigoes, one of the oldest Catholic churches in Maryland, will hold its annual church dinner and home-coming on July 22.

Virginia League Lists 8 Major Steps to Salvage County Self-Rule From State Centralization

Local Governments To Vanish by 1959, Report Predicts

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., July 6.—The Virginia Commission on County Government said, in a tentative report issued today, that State centralization is destroying county government and it listed eight major steps for the salvation of "democratic local self-government."

The report stated at the outset that "if the present rapid trends to 'State centralization' continue, within ten years, and assuredly within this generation, the Virginia county as we know it will remain only a name and its officers will perform 'State functions' in the 'provinces' which were self-governing counties."

The commission chairman, Raymond B. Pinchbeck, of Richmond, presented the tentative report at the semi-annual meeting of the League of Virginia Counties here for the purpose of public discussion in order that the final report "may reflect sound public opinion in so far as possible."

County Form Defended

The commission granted that from the sole viewpoint of efficiency it might be argued that "modern circumstances make possible the 'centralization' administration" of governmental services, but contended that such centralized State administration would "destroy the interest and responsibility" of the individual citizen in his government.

These tentative recommendations were made in the report: A third optional form of county government to be known as the "commission" form, that the circuit judge be relieved of the heavy duties of county administration, that there be created within the State government an advisory commission on local government, that county district councils be created in each of the 33 judicial districts to provide for a formal system of consultation and conference between county officials and that the governor or the General Assembly refer to the legislative advisory council the study of the need for and ways and means of creating and providing for metropolitan areas.

Fee Abolition Urged

Also that the fee system as a method of compensating county officials be completely abolished, regardless of whether the counties adopt one of the optional forms of county government, that all incorporated towns be required to install uniform accounting systems comparable to those in the counties and that the accounts of such towns be subject to the same auditing provisions now in effect for the counties; that county jails be abolished except for the imprisonment of persons awaiting trial or as temporary lockups, and that the counties be required to construct and maintain a limited number of regional jail farms to be operated jointly under strict State supervision. If the latter plan is not adopted the commission proposed that jails be abolished and that the State construct and operate the regional jail farms.

The commission presented the third form of county government because "it is believed by many that the county manager and county executive forms of county government change the traditional form of county government in Virginia so radically as to fail to gain the support of public opinion, and because it is felt by many that these two optional forms will not serve the counties with small revenues, area and population."

Problems Are Outlined

The problems of Virginia county government were listed in the following outline form:

1—County government has lost to the State government most of its control over the policies and administration of governmental services in the counties. As a consequence local citizen interest is at a very low ebb.

2—A considerable number of Virginia counties do not have sufficient taxable wealth to support the cost of the necessary functions of modern county government.

3—The State government has reserved to itself the most lucrative sources of tax revenue leaving to the counties only the taxation of real estate and tangible personal property, thus greatly reducing the financial resources of county government.

4—County government has no single central policy making and administrative head directly responsible to all the voters of the county. Instead, responsibility for public policies and administration is diffused among many elected and appointed officials.

5—The district-elected boards of supervisors have relatively little control over the policies relating to the main functions of county government, the administration of justice, public schools, public welfare, public health and public roads.

6—The district-elected boards of supervisors have relatively little control over the costs or the actual administration of justice, public schools, public welfare, public health, public roads, the assessment of property for taxation, or the collection of taxes.

7—The office of circuit judge is heavily burdened with local governmental functions which are not directly related to the important and heavy judicial duties of this office, and which properly belong to the popularly elected policy-making and administrative board of the county.

8—There is no local democratic control over the policies or costs of county public schools by the popularly-elected representatives of the citizens of the counties.

9—The fee system as a method of compensation of county officials has not been completely replaced by salaries set by popularly-elected county policy-making boards, with all fees collected and paid into the county treasurer, and all salaries and expenses paid from budgeted appropriations made by these boards.

10—The operation of the county jail and local lock-up represents one of the most pressing problems in Virginia counties.

11—County boards of supervisors need the services of trained and experienced public administrators and a merit personnel program to execute their policies and furnish continuous administration of county government functions every day in the year.

12—There is a lack of adequate detailed current financial and other information on the activities of all departments of the county government which should be readily available in report form for the citizens of the county, daily, monthly, quarterly and annually.

13—No adequate system exists for the assessment or equalization of assessments of real estate in the counties.

14—The diversity of regulation by and responsibility of various county officers to the various departments of the State government tends to confuse the general policies of county government and their administration by county officials.

Alexandrian Is Injured in Fall Off Roof

Lands in Yard Next Door; Youth Hurt In Auto Collision

The Washington Post Bureau, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 3767. Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 247.

Jesse Brown, 47 years old, whose home is in Cameron Park, Alexandria, fell from a porch at 401 South Fairfax street, where he was working, late yesterday afternoon into the yard at 403 South Fairfax street.

Brown was taken to the Alexandria Hospital suffering injuries to his spine.

Injured in Collision

Randolph Jones, 18 years old, of Lincolnia, Fairfax County, was injured in an automobile collision Wednesday night at the intersection of Washington avenue and Myrtle street. He was taken to the Alexandria Hospital by John W. Tulloch and Emmett Scott and treated for fractured ribs, bruises and lacerations by Dr. Carson L. Fifer.

Jones' car and one driven by Norton S. Johnson, of Takoma Park, Washington, were both damaged, but Johnson escaped injury.

Governor Honor Guest

Governor of Virginia James H. Price will be the guest of honor at the annual outing dinner of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce to be held July 27 at Fort Belvoir, south of Alexandria. Col. J. A. Connor, United States Army, will head the Fifth Engineers in a review before the Governor and the Fifth Regiment Band will lead the review.

A picnic meal will be served at 6 o'clock under the trees just south of the parade grounds, and at the conclusion of the dinner Gov. Price will address the gathering.

At sunset the gun will be fired and colors lowered, after which there will be dancing in the recreation hall of the post.

Drunk Driver Jailed

E. B. Walker, 45 years old giving his address as the 300 block of South Patrick street, was fined $100 in police court yesterday morning and, in addition, given 30 days in jail, on a charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Acting Judge Harry F. Kennedy presided.

Police Arrests Fewer

Crime was on the wane in June, when Alexandria police arrested only 346 persons, 66 less than May, according to the report released yesterday.

Mrs. Knight's Rites Today

The funeral of Mrs. Edna Tomlin Knight, wife of Ferdinand L. Knight, who died Wednesday in the Alexandria Hospital, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning from the home, 108 Rosemont avenue. The Rev. Dr. John Paul Tyler, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, will conduct the services, and burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Postmasters Confirmed

The Senate yesterday confirmed appointment of four Maryland postmasters. They are Thomas R. Buch, Berwyn; Anna M. Bowie, Kensington; Clarence J. Thomsen, jr., Lutherville; John T. French, Owing Mills.

Victims' Parents Protest Return Of License to Ex-Bus Driver

Train-Bus Crash in Which 14 Children Died Recalled as Percy Line Asks Trucker's Permit; Denial Indicated

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 6.—Protests of parents whose children were killed in a train-bus crash at Rockville, Md., four years ago may prevent the reissuance of a driver's license to Percy Line, driver of the bus.

Motor Vehicles Commissioner W. Lee Elgin said he had not definitely decided whether he would issue Line a license in place of the one suspended shortly after the crash. However, he said that he was not inclined to issue it.

Elgin said he had written the parents of the 14 children killed April 11, 1935, asking their reaction to the issuance. Eleven replied, he said, and "more were against it than were for it." He said he wanted to hear from the other parents and to finish his study of testimony taken at the time before he decided, but that he would probably reach a decision tomorrow.

Elgin pointed out that Line could apply to the courts if a license were refused. Line wants a license, the commissioner said, to permit him to drive trucks on a line he operates.

Line was driving a school bus from College Park to Williamsport, Md., about 11:30 p. m., when the train roared out of a foggy night and struck the bus. Of the 31 school pupils aboard, returning from a chemistry show at the University of Maryland, nearly half were killed.

Rescued Youth Returns to Water And Is Drowned

Baltimore, July 6 (AP).—Harry Frawley, 17, returned to the water after being rescued from suburban Bear Creek this afternoon and drowned almost immediately.

Companions told Patrolman Charles Ripkin the youth was seized with cramps. They pulled him from the water and resuscitated him.

Takoma Carnival Site Is Changed

A substitute site at Philadelphia and Maple avenues has ben found for the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department's anual carnival, it was announced last night. The firemen voted to relinquish all claim to use of property in the Takoma shopping area, which they had first selected, after being notified that the owner desired to begin building immediately.

Rockville Tax Levy Same

Rockville.—Rockville's town tax rate will continue at 90 cents per each $100 assessed value, the town council voted at its meeting in the firehouse. The council adopted a budget providing for total disbursements of $28,370 for town operating expenses and voted to issue bonds totaling $20,000, with 3 per cent interest, to provide funds for installation of water and sewer mains in the new territory at the west end of the town which was made a part of the town by act of the past session of the State Legislature.

2 Bethesda Boys Confess Series Of Housebreakings

A wave of housebreakings and robberies in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area has been solved, according to Montgomery County police, by arrest of two youths, 14 and 16 years of age. The boys admitted breaking into six houses.

One youth was captured when County Policemen Joseph Ward and Warren Garrett went to 106 Lucas lane to investigate a housebreaking. The youth implicated his friend.

The suspects were turned over to the county probation officer, Mrs. Madeline Fennell, and then released in custody of their parents until a hearing July 19 before Judge John H. Gassaway in Montgomery County Juvenile Court.

F. F. A. to Launch Va. Camp July 17

Richmond, Va., July 6 (AP).—Dr. Walter S. Newman, State supervisor of agricultural education, announced today a recreational camp for boys of the Future Farmers of America organization and girls taking home economics courses in Virginia public schools will be conducted from July 17 to August 12 in the Swift Creek recreational area in Chesterfield County.

Newman said 536 boys and girls had registered for the camp, which will be attended by a different group during each of the four weeks.

100 CCC Advisers Will Meet at U. of Md. For Six Days and See Handicraft Exhibits

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 821 Rhoems Ave., Hyattsville, Md. Telephone GReenwood 7632.

More than 100 educational advisers from Civilian Conservation camps throughout the Third Corps Area will gather at the University of Maryland Monday for their annual six-day conference.

A feature of the conference will be an exhibit in the Ritchie Coliseum of the handiwork of the 129 camps in the Corps Area, which embraces the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania. A series of lectures by prominent educators and several recreational programs have been scheduled.

Chairman of the conference is Dr. T. G. Bennett, educational adviser for the Third Corps Area. Robert Bailey, adviser at the White Hall (Md.) camp, will be in charge of the exhibit.

Colmar Manor.—Mayor John N. Torvestad, seeking a third term, will be opposed by Vance V. Vaughn in the municipal elections here July 11.

The only other contest is in the Third Ward, where Andrew Tagitt and K. A. Voigt have announced their candidacies for the council. William U. Wiles, incumbent, has declined to seek re-election.

Carl G. C. Nagle is unopposed in the First Ward. Robert V. Yost, Second Ward, and Lewis Carter, Fourth Ward, still have another year to serve.

Schools Open Sept. 5 In Fairfax

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 345, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

The public schools of Fairfax County will open the 1939-40 session on September 5, according to the schedule adopted yesterday by the county school board, but classes will start two days later.

The first day will be devoted to a conference of principals and supervisors to be held in the Fairfax Elementary School. The following day faculty meetings will be held in the local schools.

The school schedule includes district H teachers' meeting, Alexandria, October 20; Thanksgiving holiday, November 29 through December 3; Christmas holiday, December 22 through January 1; holiday on Washington's Birthday; Easter vacation, March 22 to 25; holiday on May 30. Schools will close June 6.

The board reorganized for the fiscal year yesterday, electing Trustee John T. DeBell, of Centreville district, chairman; Mrs. Mildred L. Finks, of Mount Vernon district, vice chairman. Bynam Armfield was named clerk of the board; Miss Nellie Kidwell, secretary to superintendent, and Irving Downs, textbook clerk.

In response to a petition of citizens in the Lorton area the board voted to permit members of the junior and senior high school classes to attend Fairfax High during the next school year. Members of the lower classes must attend the new Mount Vernon High School. It was pointed out that the Fairfax High School now offers facilities which will not be available at the Mount Vernon school for several years.

It was voted to advertise the old Idylewood School for sale at public auction as soon as possible. The action was taken following the request of Mrs. L. M. Lucas, of the Idylewood Citizens Association, to use the old school as a community hall. The association promised to recondition the old building. Board members pointed to the fact that the court had authorized the sale of the building and all money spent by the association would be lost when the property was sold.

Superintendent W. T. Woodson was authorized to advertise for bids for the construction of additions to the Chesterbrook School. Plans have been prepared for construction of new sanitary facilities at the school.

Vienna Council to Meet

Vienna.—The town council plans to hold its regular meeting on Monday night. A special meeting was held early this week to discuss ways of economizing in town expenses to raise additional funds for road work. Sentiment has been expressed by citizens opposing an increase in the town tax rate and issuing additional bonds for road purposes.

Council members have suggested elimination of the contribution to the town library, elimination of trash collections, withdrawal from the Virginia League of Municipalities and economizing on road maintenance. The tentative plan of eliminating street lights met with so much opposition, the council has dropped the idea.

There has been some agitation to abolish the office of full-time town police. Opponents asserted that since August, 1938, the police have cost the town $100 a month, returning about $400 in funds and fees to the town treasury. It is also pointed out that since full-time police have been maintained there have been no traffic accidents in the town.

Rockville Rotary Installs Officers

Officers of the Rockville Rotary Club have been installed under direction of the retiring president, Harry Hoskinson. They are Benjamin N. Allnutt, president Josiah W. Jones, vice president; Richard F. Green, secretary; Thomas M. Anderson, treasurer; directors, Albert M. Boule, Beull M. Gardner and Harry Hoskinson.

Committees for the year have been named, with the following chairmen: Club service, Adolph E. Gude; classification and members, Dr. William A. Linthicum; program, Dr. Dexter M. Bullard; rotary information, William F. Prettyman; boys' work, Thomas C. Kelley; publicity and public information, the Rev. Henry K. Pasma; fellowship and attendance, Allison H. Chapin; luncheon, Edgar Reed; community service, rural-urban, Harry Hoskinson. The student loan committee is composed of Edwin W. Broome, Harold C. Smith and Henry C. Ransom.

Bans Farms on City Land

Hagerstown, Md., July 6.—Hagerstown has ordered all farming on its Edgemont reservoir watershed discontinued after this year. The land will be put out in trees under the supervision of the Soil Conservation Service.

REV. RUFUS W. WEAVER

DR. JOHN E. BRIGGS

Speakers at the twenty-third Baptist assembly, which opened an eight-day session yesterday at Braddock Heights, Md., will include Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor of the Fifth Baptist Church of Washington, and Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary and advisory director of the church group

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Community Center Department and Office of National Capital Parks present the Civic Orchestra and the Civic Ballet Thursday evening at the Sylvan Theater. Orchestral director, Dr. Kurt Hetzel; ballet director, Elizabeth Giles.

Several thousand Washingtonians assembled at the Sylvan Theater last evening to witness the semi-official debut of the Civic Ballet in a program shared by its elder and more experienced brother organization, the Civic Orchestra. The first appearance of the dancing group, which has been trained by Elizabeth Giles, was not so much a formal debut as a demonstration of the progress that has been made in a new activity of the Community Center Department. Only 22 members of the choreographic unit participated in the four ballets devised by the director.

These ballets offered evidence that the training is proceeding along both traditional and experimental lines, and that the young dancers have thus far taken more easily to the contemporary phases of the art than to the classical. They were less proficient in arabesques, pirouettes, elevations and dancing on the points than they were in the stylized symbolism of the modern school. This was to have been expected, inasmuch as the entire ballet procedure is undergoing a transformation which is inevitable if it is to express our own social ideas.

The classical style had its way in the first ballet, "In Balletic Tradition," and the old and the new methods were contrasted in "Fusion," wherein half of the group performed Wigmanesque evolutions while the other half were faithful to the manner of Pavlova. Beethoven was drawn upon for the strictly traditional number, while "Fusion" was fitted to lively and pleasing music by Laurette M. Hullings.

In keeping with the practice of the vanguard of modern ballet, drums alone accented the rhythms for "Dust Bowl: An American Tragedy," in which symbolism was used to represent the three stages of "Waste, Sand and Reconstruction." The final number, "Snatched from a Fate Worse than Death," was a burlesque of melodrama, danced to American ballads of nineteenth century vintage.

The Civic Orchestra, directed by Dr. Kurt Hetzel, opened the program with Mozart's overture to "Die Zauberfloete," and contributed during the evening the Johann Strauss waltz, "Wein, Weib und Gesang," and three excerpts from Chaikovski's most popular ballet suite: "Shchelkunchik" to Russians and "Nut-Cracker" to you and me.

State Phone Head Named

Roanoke, Va., July 6 (AP).—The appointment of William H. Hiett, Roanoke telephone official, as general commercial supervisor of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia with headquarters in Richmond, was announced today.

Nice Appointee Refuses to Quit Custodian's Post

Annapolis, July 6 (AP).—Maryland's ancient State house was well taken care of tonight, with two custodians claiming the post of State superintendent of public buildings and grounds.

Philip A. Meyers, Republican, named by former Gov. Harry W. Nice in 1935, refused to relinquish his post to R. Chester Cromwell, Anne Arundell County Democrat, named by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor to the $1,500 job.

Meyers claimed the position is under the State merit system, placed there by a 1923 order of the late Gov. Albert Cabell Ritchie. Col. Harry C. Jones, State employment commissioner, referred the controversy to the attorney general's office for a ruling.

Jones said the records of his office listed the custodian's job as a classified position under the merit system.

Wicomico Names Waller to Senate

Salisbury, Md., July 6 (AP).—Democratic State central committee today named R. Fulton Waller, paving contractor, as the next State Senator from Wicomico County.

Waller's appointment by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor is mandatory within 15 days. Waller will succeed David J. Ward, recently elected to Congress.

J. Samuel Carey, county central committee chairman, said Waller was chosen on the committee's first ballot.

Co-operative's Patrons To Meet in Hughesville

La Plata, Md., July 6.—The annual Southern States Patrons' meeting will be held at the Hughesville School July 13, according to G. L. Leitze, of Woodlawn, Md., district manager of Southern States Co-operative. The annual report will be presented by Leitze and two members to the advisory board will be elected.

Montgomery Bus Fares May Rise

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Bus riders on the Bethesda-Rockville lines of the Capital Transit Co. face fare increases today. The stay order of the Interstate Commerce Commission barring increases in the fares pending action by the commission expired last midnight.

The transit company filed a new schedule of rates with the commission last February, which was followed by filing of protests from representatives of the bus patrons, particularly the Rockville Town Council and the Chambers of Commerce of Rockville and Bethesda. The commission issued a 60-day stay which was followed by two more stays of 60 days each. The commission is limited to 180 days in holding up a fare increase unless it issues a decision prohibiting the increase.

Decision Due in 10 Days

The commission examiner completed his report May 24. It is expected that the decision on the fare boosts will be given by the commission within ten days, according to F. Barnard Welsh, Rockville attorney who was retained by the town of Rockville and other interested parties to fight the increases.

The fare increases have been approved by the Maryland public service commission. The transit company claims that the passengers will receive much better service for their fare and that the two lines serving the area have been operated at a loss since they were taken over by the transit company. The company also points out that while some of the rates are higher, in some instances the fare will be lower.

To Have 11 Zones

The line from the District line to Washington Grove will be divided into 11 zones, each zone costing a fare of 5 cents. The transit company as yet has not indicated when it will place the new rates into effect but it is at liberty to do so at any time. If the commission refuses to approve the increases, the company can ask for permission to discontinue the line on the grounds that it is unprofitable. But whether this move would be taken has not been disclosed by the transit officials.

Loganberries as Salad or Dessert Take First Award; Blackberry Puffs Are Served With Peach Ice Cream

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor

BERRY-FLAVORED creations, either hot from the oven or chilly from the refrigerator, were the suggestions of contributors in this week's Post recipe contest. We here present the winning contributors and their prize recipes—fragrant quick bread, the familiar berry pie, tarts and puffs and an appealing gelatin wonder.

Mrs. Lawlor

Gelatin Wonder

A wholly new conception of the loganberry as either a superlative dessert or a snappy salad is the recipe contributed by Mrs. Jay Lawlor, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest. Because of the versatility of this recipe, Mrs. Lawlor wins first prize of $3.

Spiced Loganberry Molds

Bring to a boil 3 cups unsweetened loganberries, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon whole all-spice, 1 stick cinnamon, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, and simmer for 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Force through a fine strainer to remove pulp and spices. Measure and if necessary, add water to make 2 cups. Soften 1½ tablespoons gelatin in ⅓ cup cold water for 5 minutes. Add to boiling hot fruit mixture and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Stir in a dash of salt, 2 tablespoons vinegar and ¼ cup lemon juice. Pour into small individual molds. Chill until firm. Serve as a salad with mayonnaise or as a dessert garnished with whipped cream. One quart loganberries may be used. Sort, wash and steam in double boiler about 20 minutes, adding spices after steaming 10 minutes. Makes 10 small molds.

Hot Weather Treat

Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison street northwest, does justice to the blackberry with a concoction called blackberry puffs. She further enhances its deliciousness by serving it with peach ice cream, and you will want this dessert to top your menu. Mrs. Phillips wins a $2 prize for her recipe.

Mrs. Phillips

Blackberry Puffs With Ice Cream

Wash 1 pint blackberries and place in the bottoms of six custard cups. Cream 1-3 cup butter, and add 2-3 cup sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add 1 egg yolk and ¼ teaspoon vanilla and beat until fluffy. Mix and sift 1 cup flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, and 1½ teaspoons baking powder and add alternately with 1-3 cup milk to the first mixture. Add 1 stiffly beaten egg white. Pour this batter over the berries in the cups. Bake at 375 degrees for about 30 minutes or until the cake is done. Turn into dishes. Serve warm with peach ice cream.

Raspberry Splendor

Raspberry pie is a favorite at any time, but the recipe submitted by Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, is in the smooth, sophisticated class, and yet captures the true spirit of the raspberry. Miss Ryan wins a $1 prize for the following recipe.

Miss Ryan

Raspberry Cream Pie

Mix 2-3 cup sugar, 6½ tablespoons flour and ¾ teaspoon salt in a double boiler. Add 2½ cups milk gradually and cook for about 15 minutes or until thickened, stirring constantly at first and then occasionally. Add a little of this mixture to 2 slightly beaten eggs and mix well. Beat this into the first mixture and cook for a minute longer, stirring constantly. Add 1 tablespoon butter and 1 teaspoon vanilla and cool slightly. Place 1 cup of raspberries in the bottom of a baked pie shell. Pour the cream filling over the berries and when partially cool, top with the remaining berries.

Sure-to-Win Dessert

Mrs. Albert Day, Auburn avenue, Bethesda, Md., combines raspberries with cream cheese to make a sure-to-win dessert. Win Mrs. Day did, with this suggestion, and is given a $1 award for suggesting the tart shells to hold the cheese raspberry filling.

Mrs. Day

Raspberry Cheese Tarts

Combine ½ cup sugar and ¼ cup water in a saucepan. Bring to boiling point and pour over 1 pint raspberries. Let stand until cool; drain. Mix 1 tablespoon constarch with 1 tablespoon water. Add to sirup and boil until thick and clear, stirring constantly. Blend ½ pound cream cheese with 3 tablespoons cream. Spread tart shells with cheese; top with berries and sirup. Makes 6 servings.

Luncheon Champion

"For a midsummer luncheon, thin blackberry nut bread sandwiches are intriguing served with chilled fruit plates and potato chips," writes Mrs. Nona Betz, Belpre, Ohio. Mrs. Betz wins a prize of $1 for her interesting use of the blackberry.

Blackberry Nut Bread

Beat 2 eggs and add 1 cup brown sugar. Mix thoroughly. Add 1 cup milk and 3 tablespons melted shortening. Sift together 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder and add to the liquid mixture, stirring only until blended. Carefully fold in 1 cup fresh blackberries and ½ cup chopped California walnuts. Pour into greased loaf pan, 5 by 12 inches, and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 50 minutes.

Check Bedsprings

Inspect your bedsprings every now and then for loose wires or rough edges. This often pays dividends by preventing rips in the bed clothes.

The Homemaker

Hot Dishes Easily Served In the Outdoors

Barbecued Meats Make Appetizing Picnic Food

By The Post Food Editor.

OUTDOOR PARTIES can be the very essence of summer entertaining. Nature has been generous with a beautiful background here and the many attractive spots nearby. Steaks or hamburgers grilled over charcoal fires, toasted buns and stout black coffee will long be remembered when eaten outdoors, even if a June bug or wasp should come to the party.

Barbecued Frankfurters

Hot food, cooked and carried in a portable electric roaster or cooked on the kitchen range and kept hot in a large vacuum container are ways of making a successful picnic.

Preheat roaster to 450 degrees. Chop one medium-sized onion. Blend 2 tablespoons vinegar and 1 tablespoon flour and combine with onion and 1½ tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, 2 teaspoons salt, pinch red pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon black pepper, 1 teaspoon chili powder or mustard, ½ cup tomato catsup, 2 teaspoons brown sugar and 2 tablespoons hot water. Prepare 3 pounds of large frankfurters by piercing each frankfurter with a fork and dipping into sauce. Arrange in well-greased inset roaster pan and pour over any remaning sauce. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake one hour. Or the frankfurters and sauce may be baked in a greased baking dish for one hour in a moderate range oven. This recipe serves 6 to 8.

Food Is Safe In Open Cans If Kept Cool

It is perfectly safe to leave food in an opened tin can. The can will have no harmful effect on the food, and it will not spoil any quicker than it would if emptied into a dish. As with any other cooked food, keep it refrigerated.

Different linings are put in cans to retain the natural color of certain foods that might be harmfully discolored by the tin coating on the average can. Cans of fish, corn and bright red foods have various linings.

The liquid on canned vegetables is worth keeping, for it is simply the water and salt or sugar in which the food was cooked in the can. It contains part of the food value of the vegetable. Keep it for soups and gravies if you don't serve it with the vegetable.

The labels on canned foods are growing more helpful each year. The can size, No. 2, 2½, etc., the number of ounces, the number of units (peach halves, whole beets, etc.), and the size of the units may be given. It may tell the approximate servings or cupfuls and even the degree of sweetness of the fruit sirups used.

3 D. C. Women, Man Hurt in Auto Collision

Crash in East-West Highway; Victims Employed by SSB

Four persons were injured yesterday when their car overturned after a collision at New Hampshire avenue extended and the East-West highway.

Most seriously hurt was Mrs. Virginia Ruth Burke, 26, of 915 Ingraham street northwest, who suffered a broken back and leg. Mrs. Gittel Feldstone, 57, of 4725 Eighth street northwest, sustained head injuries and a fractured rib. Her niece, Mrs. Rose Feldstone, 27, of the same address, and Roland H. Parker, of 1820 Ingleside Terrace, who police said was the driver of the car, both received severe cuts. They were on their way to Baltimore, where all are employed with the Social Security Board, when the accident occurred. The Takoma Park fire rescue squad and the recue units from Silver Spring and Bladensburg took the injured to the Washington Sanitarium.

One Driver Held

Police said the driver of the other car was Edgar W. Manuel, 45, of Takoma Park, who was unhurt. He was put under bond as a State's witness.

An inquest will be held today into the death of Alfred Beal, 37, of Capitol Heights, Md., crushed between a truck and a railroad car at the Eckington yards while loading Thursday night. Bayes Bryant, 22, driver of the truck, will appear.

Another inquest will be into the death of Leo B. Hogan, 29, of 925 Kennedy street northwest, who died after a collision early Thursday. Hogan was pitched from the cab of his truck. Howard O. Dodson, colored, 29, of 934 O street northwest, driver of the other car, will appear.

Meantime, police established the identity of the 18-year-old boy cyclist who was critically injured Thurday night as William DeWhite Havers, of the CCC Camp at Beuning. Havers suffered a skull fracture when his bike was struck by an automobile at Second and G streets northwest. He remained unconscious last night.

Girl Hitch-Hiker Tells of Murder

New York, July 6 (INS).—Katherine Thistle, 15, who says she hitchhiked here from Portland, Me., to see the World's Fair, told police today she witnessed a robbery, a murder and the burial of one of her companions after a fight over the loot. The girl was picked up by officers at Coney Island

The robbery, according to Katherine, occurred near New Haven, Conn., at a gas station. The loot was about $100. The youths, she said, fought over the money and Albert Gilson got John Fairweather into the woods and shot him. She, Thelma Neilson, another hitchhiker, and Gilson rode with the body until they entered New York, she continued, and then Gilson buried the body in the woods. The three separated on arrival here.

Lifeboat Almost Drowns Inventor

New York, July 6.—A self-launching lifeboat leaped off the Battery seawall this afternoon, landed with a tremendous splash in four feet of water and listed so perilously to starboard that Menotti Nanni, the inventor, and two of his sons, Nino, 23, and Martin, 24, had to scramble overboard in lifebelts.

Three D. C. Students Win Pa. Scholarships

Three Washingtonians have been awarded scholarships at the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Arnold K. Henry, dean of student affairs, announced yesterday.

Miss Betty Jane Meggers, 2904 Brandywine street northwest, will enter the college of liberal arts for women in the fall; Robert L. Hart, 3621 Eleventh street northwest, will attend the Towne scientific school, and Edmund E. Pendleton, jr., 5420 Connecticut avenue northwest, will study at the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce.

D. C. Cyclist, Victim Of Md. Crash, Buried

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., July 6.—James Schroyer, 25, Washington, killed early yesterday when his motorcycle crashed into a pole on the National highway, 6 miles west of here, was buried this afternoon at Wolfsville, Md.

Ethel Repp, 16, Clearspring, riding tandem of the motorcycle, is recovering from injuries she received in the crash. Medical Examiner S. R. Wells said an inquest would be unnecessary.

Cosmopolitans Hear Banker, Mailmen Head

Current economic questions were debated yesterday by John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank, and Edward J. Grand Jury Impaneled for July Term

Justice Proctor Tells 23 to Confine Work To Cases Given Them

Justice Proctor impaneled 23 grand jurors for the July term of Criminal Court yesterday, warned them that they had no roving commission to investigate as they pleased, and ordered each juror supplied with a copy of his oath of office.

RUOFF

Named foreman was Leonard F. Ruoff, 52-year-old insurance agent, of 3411 Thirty-fourth place northwest.

Justice Proctor some years ago ordered grand juries to abandon the practice of filing special reports on District conditions and confine their work to cases presented by the United States attorney. He has since followed the custom of warning grand juries against general investigations on their own initiative.

Assistant District Attorney Krouse outlined grand jury procedure to the new jurors in the afternoon. The jury will serve until the first Monday in October.

The grand jurors are:

Mrs. Wilamina M. Adams, 53, housewife, 1806 Park road northwest; Leon M. Caton, 46, postal clerk, 1420 Twentieth street northwest; William P. Dabney, 33, stock clerk manager, 3413 Fessenden street northwest; John H. Denit, 44, manager, 3703 Morrison street northwest; Mrs. Hattie E. Doleman, 49, housewife, 21 Rock Creek Church road northwest; Rowland C. Dudley, 50, salesman, 812 Sheridan street northwest; David M. Entler, 57, railway clerk, 728 Quebec place northwest; Henry M. Frame, 57, cabinet maker, 1326 South Caroline avenue southeast; Ernest W. Hensley, 50, postal clerk, of 2111 Flagler place northwest; Irving T. Horn, 44, Government clerk, 1020 Monroe street northwest; Charles A. Landis, 34, grocery clerk, 1012 East Capitol street; Daniel W. Martin, 25, assistant auditor, General Accounting Office, 2 M street northeast; George H. Norris, 54, grocery clerk, 2736 Cortland place northwest; Leonard N. Raffell, 34, newspaper employe, 133 Webster street; Robert F. Schenick, 38, liquor store clerk, 911 Quincy street northwest; Mrs. Betty W. Reesch, 27, housewife, 1617 Isherwood street northeast; James E. Scott, 43, realty man, 1717 T street northwest; J. Harold Stieg, 50, photographer, 3720 Livingston street northwest; John D. Kurtz, 51, cartridge case maker, Navy Yard; 536 Shepherd street northwest; Noven F. Ladd, 60, businessman, 2327 Q street southeast; Mrs. Hazel F. Thompson, housewife, 3106 Twenty-fourth street northeast; Michael J. Quigley, 38, mechanic, 5101 Sherrier place northwest.

D. C. Driver Fined

Hagerstown, July 6.—Charles W. Augustin, 5050 First street northwest, Washington, was fined $7.45 by Justice E. G. Miller, Boonsboro, for failing to keep to the right of the road following a collision with the car driven by Robert Wickenhiser, Pittsburgh. Mrs. Wickenhiser was injured and was brought to the Washington County Hospital here.

A Big Job in Any Language Confronts Mr. C. J. Jones

Note to housewives—when discouraged over the burdens of housecleaning, just consider C. J. Jones, of the National Park Service, now overseeing the "seasonal cleaning" of the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets northwest.

First off, a housecleaner stops and looks around to see what must be done. Jones, doing this yesterday, saw his task without straining, as follows:

The cleaning, dusting and shining of six chandeliers, each weighting approximately 2,000 pounds, each 20 feet high, and each with a circumference of 11 feet 8 inches.

These must be lowered from a 60-foot ceiling on a 5-ton chain. Once on the floor, the chandeliers are so tall that workmen must use a ladder to polish the points of the long spears that ornament them, and to dust off the star-spangled ball at the top of each.

In the six chandeliers there are 240 globes of 60 watts. And when all the dust is brushed from the intricate designs of the framework, well . . . there are ten "smaller" chandeliers of identical design. Each of these is only a trifle of some thousand pounds.

To sweep the auditorium, exclusive of its balcony, is to go over 13,800 square feet. This dusted off, there is the movie curtain, 19x26 feet and weighing between 7 and 8 tons. Then there are five sets of heavily curtained windows, about 20 feet high. There are approximately 2,000 collapsible chairs to be polished.

Jones and his workmen plunged in yesterday. Their elaborate clean-up comes only once a year, a point about which they probably won't complain.

Torso Murder Suspect Held

Bloody Knives, Stained Bathroom Are Links To 13 Slayings

By the United Press.

Cleveland, July 6.—A bricklayer, suspected as the "mad butcher of Kingsbury Run," who has beheaded and carved 13 men and women, threatened to kill himself if forced to submit to questioning under a lie detector.

"Go ahead, do anything you like," the suspect screamed to Sheriff Martin O'Donnell, who told him a lie detector would be used in pressing questioning that had lasted more than 24 hours. "You can shoot me if you want to—if you don't, I'll kill myself."

O'Donnell hoped for a confession to end the 4½-year hunt for this city's notorious "torso murderer." The suspect was linked definitely to two victims of the killer and several of his stories collapsed under questioning and investigation.

Blood Stains Found

"I didn't kill anybody, I tell you," the man shouted to officers.

Stains of blood and three big knives, stained with human blood, were found in recent homes of the 52-year-old suspect as O'Donnell said the man admitted associating with Florence Polillo, known prostitute, shortly before her carved body was found.

The suspect was described as the "best yet" in the long hunt for the diabolical murderer. He is the only one linked directly with any of the butcher's victims, six of whose heads still are missing.

O'Donnell, who said the suspect had changed his living quarters four times since the last two "torso murder" victims were found on a lake front dump near the Cleveland business section last August, also questioned a woman who said the man once had tried to attack her.

Seen With Victim

She told O'Donnell she had seen Edward Andrassy, only other identified victim of the gruesome killer, in the suspect's room three years ago and knew he had associated with a "tattooed sailor" whose description resembled that of an unidentified victim. The suspect said Andrassy was a drinking companion and once had slashed his arm.

A half-inch layer of caked human blood was found between the bathtub and wall in one of the suspect's former homes. Evidence of blood was found under the bathroom baseboards. Three knives were found in his present home. On one, blood had seeped through the handle.

The sheriff said the suspect told him he had used the knives to "prepare sandwiches," but tests showed the blood was human. A 14-inch butcher knife, with a curved blade, also blood stained, was found in a neighbor's quarters.

"Borrowed" Knife

The suspect insisted he had borrowed the knife to "kill a pig," despite the fact he said he bought the pig at a market where pigs are not sold. He said then he had killed a chicken. The knife was stained when returned to the neighbor.

Police found an address book containing 25 names among the suspect's papers.

"He admits trying to persuade Mrs. Polillo to come to his room two nights before she was killed, and claims he was with her the night before her body was found," O'Donnell said.

Mrs. Polillo's body was found in burlap sacks on January 26, 1936. Authorities said she had been dead about two days, indicating the suspect was with her when she was killed.

Printing Error Fixed, Work on Subs Resumed

A typographical error which delayed modernization work on the submarines Argonaut, Narwhal and Nautilus was set right by Congress yesterday.

Congress passed a $5,500,000 appropriation some time ago, but the Government Printing Office dropped $500,000 from the figure. Yesterday a resolution restoring the $500,000 was sent to the White House.

Fete Heads Plan To Drop Turkeys With Parachutes

Richmond, Va., July 6 (AP).—One of the Rockingham Turkey Festival's stunts—releasing young turkey hens from a blimp—promises to be even more novel this year.

To meet a protest from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, festival sponsors have evolved a plan to let the hens jump with parachutes.

A delegation of Rockingham citizens planning the festival, on September 4 and 5, conferred with a State Chamber of Commerce official here yesterday and discussed the plan with him.

Launching Is Set Aug. 31 for Giant Liner America

Newport News, Va., July 6 (AP).—The new liner America will be launched at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., on Thursday morning, August 31.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was expected to christen the liner when the launching was scheduled for early September, may be unable to attend the exercises at the earlier date, representatives of the Maritime Commission said.

The America is an important item in the Maritime Commission's $1,250,000,000 program to replace obsolescent vessels with new tonnage.

To cost about $16,000,000, the America will be 720 feet long with a beam of 63 feet.

Shots of Girl Rout Thieves; Two Seized

Anne Arundel Posse Captures Suspects Few Hours Later

By the Associated Press.

Gambrills, Md., July 6.—Four shots fired at two prowlers by a 24-year-old girl this morning started possemen on a trail that resulted in the arrest of two suspects several hours later.

Miss Marjorie Chaney, Gambrills storekeeper, said she was awakened early today by noises outside her window, and saw two men stealing a tire from a car parked in the lot next door.

Miss Chaney grabbed a .32 pistol and fired four times. The pair drove rapidly away with the stolen tire, as she chased them afoot.

Sheriff Russell Turner, of Anne Arundel County, hastily formed a posse. Sheriff Turner later came on two men changing a tire behind a rural church. One fled into the timber, but he collared the other.

The possemen, set on the new trail, finally captured the other suspect after a 10-mile chase.

The men, held for questioning in the Ferndale Police Station, gave Alexandria, Va., addresses. They said they were bound for a fishing trip at Solomons Island.

Third Marriage Ends in Divorce

Attractive Dorothy Lee, stage and screen actress, was divorced yesterday from A. C. Cox Atwater, socialite and executive of a chewing gum company, by an uncontested decree awarded in Chicago. She charged Atwater, her third husband, had struck her on two occasions

3 FHA Aides In State Quit

Richmond, Va., July 6 (AP).—C. C. Barksdale, Virginia director of the Federal Housing Administration, announced today that John Galleher, his executive assistant for the past eight months, had resigned, effective August 17, to return to the practice of law.

Barksdale also announced the resignation of Mark C. Bane, of Pulaski, chief underwriter, and the appointment of C. Hardin Bache as acting chief underwriter pending the naming of a permanent successor. Bane plans to re-enter private business.

The resignation of J. P. Quarles, chief mortgage risk examiner, also has been accepted. Barksdale said, but his successor has not been appointed.

Spotsylvania to Get New Farm Agent

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., July 6.—The appointment of Dillard Green, of this city, as Spotsylvania County Farm Agent, succeeding W. R. Linthicum, is expected to be confirmed by the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Division.

Mr. Linthicum resigned the post owing to his advancing age. He had held the position for 22 years.

Since last year Mr. Green has served as assistant to Agents Linthicum and W. L. Browning, of Stafford and King George. He has been in charge of 4-H Club activities among boys in Stafford, Spotsylvania, King George and Louisa.

Ruritan Club Chartered In Port Republic

Special Dispatch to The Post

Harrisonburg, Va., July 6.—Rockingham County's eighth Ruritan Club was presented its charter at Port Republic last night by Ruritan President Marvin L. Gray, of Wakefield.

L. V. Walker, miller and farmer, is the president of the new club, with W. F. Garber, vice president; James Wagner, secretary; J. J. Nicholas, treasurer; H. M. Earman, chaplain; Sam Lewis, sergeant at arms, and Floyd Smith, Dr. C. P. Harshbarger and John F. Miller, directors.

Va. Driver Freed In Child's Death

Charlottesville, July 6 (AP).—Charges against Browning Davidson of reckless driving resulting in the death last week of Ellen Weedon, 3-year-old daughter of Prof. and Mrs. William S. Weeden, of the University of Virginia, were dismissed today in Charlottesville Police Court.

Md. Motor Head Denied Police Power on Road

Hagerstown, Md., July 6 (AP).—Motor Vehicles Commissioner W. Lee Elgin has the duty of enforcing traffic laws—but only by administration—he can't stop and reprimand an offending motorist.

Elgin, former mayor of Hagerstown, asked the attorney general whether his powers extended to first-hand enforcement on the road. The office answered that his duties were "administrative only and the commissioner has no right" to exercise police powers.

Numbers Jury Calls Richmond Officials

Others sworn in were Chief of Police R. B. Jordan, detective Capt. A. S. Wright, Detective Lieut. Dan W. Duling, Patrolman A. E. Holland; Raymond Brackett, a former policeman; Deverton Carpenter, a reporter, and Leroy Anderson, news cameraman.

Biological Station Contract Awarded

Charlottesville, July 6 (AP).—The contract for a new building at the Mountain Lake biological station, which the University of Virginia has been conducting in Giles County as a research center for the entire South, was awarded today to the T. E. Coffey Co., of Roanoke. The compahy's base bid was $48,700, but final contract price, with alternates, was accepted at $46,680.

Dr. Heatwole, Va. Educator, Dies on Trip

Heart Attack Fatal To V. E. A. Secretary In San Francisco

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 6.—Dr. Cornelius Jacob Heatwole, executive secretary of the Virginia Education Association and editor of the Virginia Journal of Education, succumbed to a heart attack today in San Francisco.

He was in San Francisco with a party of 60 Virginia educators for sessions of the National Education Association's convention.

Deputy Coroner Michael Brown said death apparently was caused by over excitement from an extensive sightseeing trip. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Margaret Heatwole.

Dr. Heatwole began his teaching career in a rural school in Rockingham County. In 1908 he became dean of the department of education at State College for women in Tallahassee, Fla., and was professor of education at the State Teachers College in Harrisonburg from 1909 to 1917. From there he went to the University of Georgia, where he was professor of sociology and principles of education.

He was director of the Phelps Stokes Studies, University of Georgia; lecturer on education at the University of Pittsburgh in 1920, and lecturer on the proposed international calendar, World Federation of Educational Associations at Geneva, in July, 1929.

Dr. Heatwole became editor of the Virginia Journal of Education and executive secretary of the Virginia State Teachers' Association, now the Virginia Education Association, in 1922.

Born October 20, 1868 at Dale Enterprise, he was graduated from Peabody College for Teachers at Nashville, Tenn., and was a student at the University of Virginia, 1897-1898.

Dr. Heatwole was a member of the National Society for Study of Education, National Education Association, the Virginia Historical Society, Georgia Historical Society and Phi Delta Kappa.

He was the author of "History of Education in Virginia," and "History of the Heatwole Family."

State to Pay Counties For Driver Convictions

Baltimore, July 6 (AP).—The office of the attorney general ruled today that the commissioner of motor vehicles should pay county commissioners $2 for every motor vehicle conviction in each county. The fee need not be paid when motorists are acquitted of charges, the opinion continued. It added that the sum must be paid for each separate conviction and not on each driver, who might be convicted of more than one violation.

Loudoun's Cupid Busy Over Holiday Period

Special Dispatch to The Post

Newest Feminine 'Who's Who' Lists 364 Washington Women

Third Volume Names Mrs. Roosevelt Among Writers, Artists and Many Others With Long Record of Achievement

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

CARRYING SKELETON HISTORIES of a number of Washingtonians whose names make social and official news, the third volume of "American Women" has just come from the press.

A standard biographical dictionary of leading ladies in many fields, this book published biennially, is a feminine who's who crammed full of facts. This year's tome, bigger and better than the two previous editions, includes the birth-to-present-day accounts of more than 10,000 women who stand out from the crowd.

More than 300—365 to be exact—are Washington residents. And a sizable number are of social register stripe.

You may be sure, however, that prowess as a party giver has won no woman a place in the book. Achievement with a capital "A" is supposed to be the only open sesame to its portals, and judging from the importance of the majority of names included, they have been chosen with careful regard toward accomplishment.

Mrs. Roosevelt, of course, is in the book, along with such other nationally known ladies as Senator Hattie Caraway, Minister Florence Jaffray Harriman, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Alice Longworth, and Audrey Wurdemann, Pulitzer prize winning poet, who makes her home in Washington.

To mention but a few of the other Capitalites included—there are Alice S. Acheson (Mrs. Dean Acheson), artist; Evalyn Walsh McLean, Jessie Fant Evans (Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr.); Rose Greely, Catherine Filene Shouse (Mrs. Jouett Shouse).

'Writing Women'

Among Those Present

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring is given generous space in the book after her listing as "artist." Charlotte Kellogg (Mrs. Vernon Kellogg) poet and author, is among the writing women included; as are Isa Glenn (Mrs. Bayard T. Schindel), Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Temple Bailey, and Grace Zaring Stone, who gives Washington as her permanent address although she now lives in Paris.

Helen Herron (Mrs. William Howard) Taft is included with a comprehensive piography; as are Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, author; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission; Dolly Gann, Mme. Cantacuzene, Louise Kidder Sparrow, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Isabelle Farrington, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Catherine Cate Coblentz, Judge Marion T. Harron, Doris Stevens, Katherine Lenroot and dozens of others.

Seven Forewords Are Included

To get away from Washington a bit: There are many noted women from elsewhere whose careers are recounted, date by date, in this book. Among them are Dorothy Thompson, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, Judge Florence E. Allen, Clare Booth, Peggy Bacon, Pearl Buck, Miriam Beard, Erika Mann-Auden, Malvina Hoffman, Louise Boyd and many others.

The volume contains a cross-index to clear through the fog when a woman is known by one name professionally and by another socially. And there is a statistical analysis—in case you're interested—of all biographies, in terms of age distribution, birthplace, present home and number of children.

Most books have to be content with one foreword. This has seven, each signed by one of the following: Marjorie Hillis, of "Live Alone and Like It" fame; Helen Keller, Mary G. Roebling, bank president; Helena Rubenstein, Norma Shearer, Althea Warren, librarian; and Bertine Westen, editor of the library Journal.

FURTHER FACTS: Put on the boards by American Publications, Inc., of Los Angeles, the book is edited by Durward Howes, who does the same job for America's Young Men. Assisting him on this particular volume were Mary L. Braun and Rose Garvey.

Among odd facts revealed in the book is this—America's prominent women would rather tell their ages than their politics; 3,579 declined to state their birth date, but 3,594 failed to commit themselves as to political preferencs.

Judging from the accounts, the average successful woman is 44 years old, but she may have started her career very early and she may cling to it until she is well into her nineties, as have at least half a dozen women listed in the volume.

Of the 10,222 biographies included in the current book, 3,546 appear for the first time. The others have been revised and brought up to date from Volume II.

Zog, Queen Not to Visit Here, Her Aunt Advises

Countess Apponyi Reports Exiled Couple 'Delighted to Be in France,' After Flight From Italian Invasion of Albania

By Dudley Harmon

Former King Zog of Albania, who, since his country was seized by the Italians last Good Friday, has moved from Tirana to Greece to France, has no intention of continuing on to the United States, despite rumors he would pay a visit, according to Countess Apponyi, whose husband is the uncle of pretty former Queen Geraldine.

"They're delighted to be in France," said the agreeable Countess, who was originally a Miss Forrest, from Hartford, Conn., and who is spending several days in Washington at the Shoreham. "They have no intentions of coming to America; the King can't speak English, and it's all just newspaper gossip. Later this year, however, they might visit England."

Countess Apponyi said her royal relatives have leased Lamaye, the chateau of Mme. Paul Dupuy, in Versailles, just an hour's drive from Paris. Coincidentally, this handsome residence also housed another distinguished exiled couple—the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who rented it for a brief time. Mme. Dupuy, by the way, is another American-born woman. The former Helen Browne, of New York, she runs the largest string of newspapers and magazines in France, left her by her late husband, and is credited with having introduced the comic strip into her adopted country. Mme. Dupuy visits Washington occasionally.

Plans Plane Trip To London

The chic and lively countess will return to Europe the end of this month on the transatlantic Yankee Clipper. She will land in London and from there will fly to Budapest, where she and her husband have recently acquired a handsome new home. She has been visiting New York before coming to the Capital, where she has many friends.

The countess was formerly the wife of Randolph Burke, of Baltimore, and their son, Randolph Burke, lives in New York. Later, she married Harry Hooker, of Manhattan, who was at one time associaed in business with President Roosevelt and who frequently visits the White House. Her present husband belongs to an old Hungarian landed family and donated the $200,000 Apponyi collection of books to the Hungarian National Museum. Before her marriage to former King Zog, his pretty niece, Geraldine, was helping to catalogue the volumes.

Visit of Sisters Is Recalled

Washington had a look at the Zog family last year, when the former ruler's three unmarried sisters, the Princesses Myzejen, Ruhije and Maxhide, paid the Capital a visit. They denied being on the lookout for a trio of wealthy American husbands, as was rumored, and instead, saw everything from Yellowstone Park on. They stocked up with 30 pairs each of American shoes, and are still wearing these and the clothes they bought in New York, according to a recent interview they gave on landing in Marseille from Egypt. Countess Apponyi said yesterday she did not know whether the three sisters contemplated another trip to the United States.

Former Queen Geraldine is the daughter of Mme. Goutraud Girault who now lives in Nice, and the late Count Apponyi. Mme. Girault was Gladys Virginia Steuart, of New York, whose father was United States Consul General in Belgium. Queen Geraldine was 22, a tall, attractive, blonde, fond of tennis, swimming and skiing when she first met her husband at a New Year's Eve ball in the royal palace at Tirana. A year before a Budapest fortune teller had told her "Before the end of the year great things are to come your way. You are to marry a handsome man of high rank."

Frazer Wedding Plans Complete

Miss Aerielle Frost Frazer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Frazer, of Grosse Point, Mich., and Newport, has completed plans for her wedding July 15 to the Hon. Michael Strutt, son of Lord Belper and the Countess of Rosebery. The ceremony, one of the most important of the season, will take place on the lawn of the Frazer residence in Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Young, parents of Mrs. Robert Ogden Bacon, who will be matron of honor at the ceremony, will give a dinner dance the night before the wedding in honor of the couple, and Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor will also entertain for them. Among those at the prenuptial festivities and the wedding will be Mr. and Mrs. W. Thacher Winslow, of McLean, Va. The latter is a cousin of Miss Frazer, who was a bridesmaid at her wedding here last summer.

Miss Patricia Gardiner, of Vancouver, B. C., a cousin of the future bride, will be maid of honor, and Raymond Guest will be best man. The Hon. Mr. Strutt's guests will occupy the Winthrop villa, which he has leased for a week in honor of the occasion.

Among those expected to attend are Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, jr. Mrs. Fairbanks is the former Mrs. Mary Eppling Hartford and was recently divorced from G. Huntington Hartford 2d, Newport millionaire.

Nils Asther Ends Visit in Capital

Nils Asther, well-known Swedish movie star, left for Hollywood yesterday after a visit here with Representative and Mrs. Hary L. Englebright, of California. He has been in Europe for the last few years. After a summer on the West Coast, Mr. Asther hopes to return to New York in October for a play on Broadway. During his stay in the Capital he visited the House and Senate.

Mr. Asther recently starred in the movie "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," which was adtapted from the novel by Grace Zaring Stone (Mrs. Ellis Stone), who with her husband, formerly resided in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Myers Entertain at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Myers entertained last night at the Shoreham.

Among their guests were Mr. and Mrs. John C. Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Howard P. Foley, Dr. and Mrs. Michael J. McInerney, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Jackson Somerville.

Visits Paris

Mrs. E. Hope Slater, who arrived in Paris recently, having crossed on the Queen Mary, is at the Plaza-Athenee Hotel during her stay in the French capital.

Donald Richbergs On Annual Visit

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg left last night for their annual visit to Mrs. T. H. Blodgett at her home in Great Barrington, Mass. They will be gone for 12 days.

Mr. and Mrs. Richberg have a cottage, Cedar Knoll, at Rehoboth this summer, and will occupy it again on their return from the Massachusetts resort. Their daughter, Miss Eloise Richberg, is remaining at their Rehoboth home with Miss Barbara Caldwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caldwell, while they are away. Over the holiday Mr. and Mrs. Richberg had with them at Cedar Knoll Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, of Laurel, Md., Mr. Stanley is former Assistant Attorney General.

Kasehagens Return

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Kasehagen, who have bee nin Roanoke, Va., since the first of July, have returned to their residence on Jefferson street.

The Brereton To Sail July 14

Capt. and Mrs. William D. Brereton will sail July 14 on the liner Uruguay for Buenos Aires, where the former will serve as Naval Attache of the United States Embassy. They will be accompanied by their daughter, Miss Nancy Brereton.

Capt. and Mrs. Brereton are vacationing on a farm near Annapolis until they sail. Miss Brereton is visiting Miss Anne Sterrett, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. H. H. D. Sterrett, of Washington, until the end of the week, when she will go to Easthampton, Long Island, for a visit with friends.

Mrs. Robert Swezey, the former Miss Helen Brereton, is now making her home in New York, where her husband recently accepted a position after serving for several years as an attorney with the Government.

Mrs. M. F. Stober Given Luncheon By Miss Clifford

Mrs. Mason Frederick Stober was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Miss Helen Clifford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Clifford, at her home in Georgetown.

Mrs. Stober, wife of Capt. Stober, U. S. Army, and daughter of Col. and Mrs. John W. Joyes, arrived recently for the summer with her family in Washington. Accompanying her were their three children, Frederick Mason Stober, jr., James John Stober and Georgianna Joyes Stober. Capt. Stober will join his family here later in the summer. In September they will sail from New York for San Francisco, motoring from there to their new station in Fort Lewis, Wash.

Consul, Family Visiting Capital

The American Consul to Bermuda and Mrs. Harold L. Williamson and their four children are spending several days at the Shoreham on a visit in Washington during their month's vacation in the United States.

They will go to New York and to Saranac Lake for the remainder of the vacation. They will return to Bermuda early in August.

French Envoy to Give Dinner Monday for Visiting Deputies

Merchant Marine and Navy Officials In U. S. to Inspect Port of New York And Learn About Undersea Rescue Devices

The widely held theory that the French don't like to travel is certainly being exploded this summer, as boatload after boatload of natives of that country disembark in New York. The French Ambassador has been entertaining constantly in honor of visiting notables for the past few months, and will give a dinner Monday night for a newly arrived group of deputies.

Headed by Paul Bacquet, vice president of the French Merchant Marine Commission, they include Lucien Gasparin, Francois Blancho, former Undersecretary of the French Navy Department; Ray-Jean Rolland and Andre Berthault. Mme. Gasparin and Mme. Blancho accompany their husbands.

The deputies are here to make a survey of the safety facilities of the Port of New York and of precautionary methods along the city's waterfront, where transatlantic liners dock. The delegates will also ask information from the United States Navy on the country's latest equipment for salvage and rescue, including the diving compartment used in the rescue of the crew of the submarine Squalus.

Members of the French embassy staff left in Washington continue to add gayety to a month of social doldrums, and last night the Second Secretary and Baroness Baeyens entertained at dinner in honor of George Duca, who will sail next week for Africa for a vacation before taking up his new duties in the Foreign Office at Bucharest. He has been serving as secretary of the Rumanian legation here for the past two years.

Others present last night were the former Rumanian Minister to Tokyo and his attractive Australian wife, Mme. Stoikcesco; Jacques Dumaine, Count and Countess Roberti, Miss Marian Trumbull and Mr. and Mrs. Leonide Ourusoff.

M. and Mme. Stoikcesco, Baron and Baroness Baeyens, and M. Duca all knew each other when they were en poste in Tokyo before coming to Washington.

Baroness Baeyens will leave on Sunday for California, but will rejoin her husband here the middle of August, when they will sail for a stay in France.

Hurban Dedicates Czech Exhibits

Dedicating Czech exhibits at the two fairs at opposite ends of the country this week is keeping Col. Vladimir Hurban busy. Yesterday the Minister spoke at the New York Fair at the celebration of Czecho-Slovak Day. Last night he flew to San Francisco to be present at tomorrow's celebration in honor of his country's exhibit at the Golden Gate Exposition.

Mme. Hurban will remain with her family in New York until the Minister rejoins her there, which probably will be next week. They may stay over to wave bon voyage to former President Benes of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Benes, who will embark for Europe next week.

Yesterday at Flushing the Minister dedicated the Czech exhibits in the Hall of Nations. More than 700 participants at the Czech festival, representing 14 organizations, performed calisthenic drills, for which the Czechs are famous, and executed native peasant dances. The Czech exhibit contains a special metal urn filled with earth from the grave of Dr. Thomas Masaryk, founder and President of the former Czecho-Slovakian Republic.

Miss Villard, Foot Broken, Delays Trip

A Fourth of July victim, it seems, is Miss Dorothea Villard, who had the misfortune to break a bone in her foot while spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Garrison Villard, at their country home in Connecticut. This has changed Miss Villard's plans, according to word received from her, and she will not return to Washington this week as planned.

Miss Villard, who has made her home here this winter while working for the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, was to have come back to her N street apartment to pack up her belongings prior to leaving for the summer in Connecticut. Now she has to look forward to spending the next four weeks "off her feet," but is expected to come back here next fall, and probably will take a house in Georgetown.

Mrs. Denley to Fete Bridge Club Members

Mrs. C. F. Denley, of Glenmont, Md., will be hostess to members of her bridge club at luncheon tomorrow at Olney Inn.

Covers will be set for 12 in the main dining room. Bridge will be played on the lawn.

Minnigerode Wedding July 28

Of wide interest to Washington will be the marriage July 28 of Miss Patricia Minnigerode, daughter of Col. Fitzhugh Lee Minnigerode, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Minnigerode, of New York and Alexandria, to Arthur Mountifort Longfield Ponsonby. The ceremony will be performed at Sands Point, Long Island, at East Down, the home of Percy R. Pyne, jr., and will be followed by a reception.

The prospective bride is a niece of C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran Art Gallery, and Mrs. Minnigerode. Her aunt and uncle, who have been in California for several weeks, will arrive in New York July 18 for a stay with Mrs. Minnigerode's brother, J. Holdsworth Gordon, and will probably remain to attend the wedding before coming to Washington.

Miss Minnigerode has not yet chosen her attendants, but no doubt her sister, Miss Margaret Minnigerode, will be maid of honor.

Mr. Ponsonby is the son of Mrs. Neville Flowers, of Castle Mary, Cloyne, Ireland, and the late Maj. Myles B. Ponsonby. He is a nephew of the Earl of Bessborough, former Governor General of Canada.

Mrs. Chester C. Davis On Visit to Parents

Mrs. Chester C. Davis, wife of the member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve, has left Washington for a two-week-motor trip.

Mrs. Davis will visit her parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Smith, at their home in Bozeman, Mont.

Visits Eugene Roberts

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, of Washington, have as their guest as their Newport villa Adolph von Rechten.

Mrs. Robert Bacon At Westbury for Niece's Wedding

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon is at Westbury, Long Island, to attend the wedding there tomorrow of her niece, Miss Martha Phyllis Whitney, to William S. Rowe 2d. She is accompanied by her daughters, the Misses Martha and Ivy Bacon, and will return to her residence, 1801 F street, on Monday.

Mrs. Robert Bacon, sr., grandmother of the bride-to-be, will give a large dinner dance tonight at Old Acres, her Long Island estate, in honor of the couple. The party will also celebrate the twenty-first birthday of the prospective bride.

Miss Whitney is a sister of George Whitney, who was married to Miss Phyllis Stevenson, of New York, a year ago this month.

Picnic to Honor Harriet Dawley

Robert von Pagenhardt, son of Baron and Baroness Maximilian von Pagenhardt, will entertain at a picnic this evening in honor of Miss Harriet Webster Dawley, who made her bow to society on July 1.

The party will take place at the home of the host's parents at 3415 Foxhall road. Following the picnic there will be dancing on the terrace. About 30 friends of the host and the debutante have been invited.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Representative William M. Whittington, of Greenwood, Miss., has been joined at the Wardman Park by Mrs. Whittington and his brother, C. S. Whittington.

Mrs. Everett M. Dirksen, wife of Representative Dirksen, is at the Mayflower from her home in Pekin, Ill., until the adjournment of Congress. With their young daughter, Jay Dirksen, she and her husband will visit the World's Fair before returning to Illinois.

Representative John W. Gwynne, of Waterloo, Iowa, has taken an apartment at the Wardman Park until the adjournment of Congress. Mrs. Gwynne has returned to Waterloo.

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, will give a dinner tonight at the Mayflower in honor of Maj. Gen. Pedro Aurelio de Goes Monteiro, chief of staff of the Brazilian Embassy.

The former United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long have gone to their summer home at Nantucket.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Stretching Is Easy And Best Exercise For Warm Wather

NOBODY wants to take a lot of huff puff exercises in this weather . . . and if it comes to a choice between that and losing your figure, you'll just lose your figure!

And where will you lose it? Well, the first place will be the waistline. You'll get a roll about the midriff that is just as much help to your looks as the mumps. It doesn't take long for this to happen in the summer. The heat takes all the starch out of you . . . your capacity for inertia is increased . . . and you sit and settle.

And the pity of it is that the exercise that keeps your midrift nice and trim isn't the huff puff kind at all. Stretching does it and stretching is the laziest exercise there is. It's so easy!

Stretching in the Morning

It's a smart idea to get your stretching the first thing in the morning before the mercury climbs too high and plays havoc with your vitality. Besides, it will wake you up.

Here's a stretch that's no more effort than yawning: Get down on the floor on your back with the hands clasped on the floor overhead and feet straight down. Stretch from tip to toe, pulling down with the feet and up with the hands, with the hardest pull between the ribs and hips. Relax, yawn and do it again.

If you want to really get the kinks out of your spine, try it this way: Tuck the feet under a chest of drawers and grasp the leg of a heavy chair or the bedpost with the hands. Then pull both ways.

It Feels Luxurious

Now, if you think you are up to it, here's one that will ease off some of the more difficult fat pads:

Still lying on the back with arms stretched up on the floor, cross the right leg over the left and touch the foot to the floor on the far side. Ummm! Doesn't that feel luxurious? Try it with the left foot! If you keep that up, your waist will be as slim as Scarlett O'Hara's, and you not even trying!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

High-Heeled Shoes And Frivolous Dress Belie Office Tradition

New York, July 6.

I have recently met and liked very much a young girl named Alice Thompson. Her name may not be familiar to you yet, but it will be soon. She is the editor of the newest movie and style magazine and is the heroine of the most fascinating success stories I have heard recently.

ALICE HUGHES

She was, and still is, a Quaker, and when she came to New York and went to work with the training squad of a large store her associates used to laugh at her thees and thous. Thoroughly displeased by this ill-time laughter, she went to work on the clerical staff of a famous publishing house, where she followed all the rules laid down for typists.

That is, she reported for work every day in sensible shoes and tailored suits. Her hair was brushed neatly back, her blouses and hankies were always neat. There, hidden by a filing cabinet, she lived the life of a mousey secretary. No one paid any attention to her.

Then one day she rebelled. The other girls in the office did not seem nearly as attractive as herself, but they sat up at the front of the room and got more attention from the men. So she decided on a plan of action, which I do not recommend to all, but which worked in her case.

One day she appeared for work in her most frivolous dress, brightly colored and with short sleeves. Sh put on high-heeled slippers and she wore a frivolous hat all day in the office. Her boss quickly took notice and the following day she was moved from behind the filing case and soon even got a raise.

In her case this procedure had proved sound psychology and she kept on using it. Now, still young and pretty, she is herself a magazine editor, and will undoubtedly go far. Mind you, I do not suggest this treatment for all girls behind filing cabinets. It didn't it work out perfectly for Alice Thompson?

Exciting Night Life Goes With This Ensemble

The meticulously groomed man sketched here wears everything that is new and approved in formal attire for hot weather. His cool, easily draped dinner jacket is of Coronada cloth, which is porous because it is part silk and part mohair. It is double-breasted and has a shawl collar. Regulation dinner trousers are worn. Accessories practically make the man at night. Studs and links are of maroon crystal and the tie and handkerchief are maroon too. That maroon feather is a final fillip—which looks as right and necessary as the dull calk shoes decreed for evening now

Men's Formal Attire Stresses Comfort and Common Sense

Evening Wear for Summer Cool and Casual Tuxedo Is Out, While Coats' Popular Trend Is Toward Slenderising Styles

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

THINGS I never knew 'til now, but have firmly in mind since having sleuthed about for fashion news on men's evening or formal attire!

MARSHALL ADAMS

That the word formal can scarcely apply to summer evening wear any more. The old-fashioned heavy weight "Tuxedo" is as much a work of the past as is the cumbersome fabric.

That "White is Right" for coolness. That black is more formal for evening wear. In other words, white is cooler looking on a man, as well as actually being cooler on his back, as scientists have proved. All black, while warmer, is more correct for dressier dinner parties or theaters than a white jacket and dark trousers.

That the absurdly fastidious collegian who wears tails to every possible summer evening occasion is being tittered at now. Comfort and common sense are paramount in men's hot weather formal attire. Yet only the dark dinner suit or the off white jacket and dinner trousers are correct for formal evening usage.

Double Breasted Jackets

The single-breasted coat has practically been supplanted by the double-breasted jacket, which is newer and more becoming to most men. The tall, slim man gains more balanced proportions in double-breasted coats while certain types of well-built older men also look neater in them.

That the notched lapel is virtually a thing of the past. The rolled or shawl collar is newer, more widely accepted and more slenderizing to men of bulk.

That the camerbund is now an accredited fashion—not a weskit or vest substitute to be pitied and scorned by conservatives. It has been received this year with approval by young and old alike—perhaps because it adds color and interest to a one-time exceedingly drab costume.

Men Like Accessories

That men are definitely more accessory-minded than ever before. They actually enjoy selecting several changes of ties, handkerchiefs, studs, links and boutonieres, when, in the past, it was just routine to go through night life with father's hand-down links and studs. The manager of the advanced fashion shop who has set us straight on what men like for evening, produced some good-looking foulard tie and handkerchief sets in matching maroons and navy blues with camerbunds to harmonize. He also has links and studs and lapel flowers in identical colors. That proves that at least there's more color creeping into formal wear.

That evening shoes are definitely not greased and shiny looking. They are at their best in dull calf—not patent leather—in quiet subdued harmony with the rest of the costume.

Finally that both young and old are great fans for the Coronada dinner jacket which is a lightweight mixture of silk and fine mohair. It is imported, probably from the Latin countries. It is either single or double-breasted. The jackets' color is just a nice off-white or in suit form a smart midnight blue.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Bright Moments

Starting downtown on a fresh, glistening morning to look for the new dress or hat that is going to transform you from your present drab self into a buoyant, magnetic glamour girl.

Hanging up the last shining, clean pan after a seemingly interminable array of dirty dishes, pots and kettles has been disposed of, and knowing you can now go into the living room, sink into a comfortable chair and rest . . . and rest . . . and rest . . .

Seeing HIM—after the first suspicious tasting of the new dish you have labored so hard to get just right, and that you were afraid he was going to spurn—go after it with a hearty and approving gusto.

Starting out to keep an important engagement—in which you will meet critical old friends or ritzy new ones—and having the feeling that for once in your life everything about you is just right, from the shade of your stockings to the variety of perfume on your ear.

Experiencing the exhiliarating though evanescent knowledge that for once every closet in the house is clean, every bureau drawer is in order, and every paper in your desk just where you can find it.

Mailing off your last duty letter to Cousin Minnie or the persistent old school chum, or the alumnae committee and knowing that for a while anyway you won't have any dogged sense of guilt hanging over you.

Feeling, when you are caught downtown in a shower wearing your best hat, a sense of righteous security because of the umbrella dangling on your arm. Especially after you had been denouncing yourself for dragging it along "like an old maid.

Having Junior bring home a high mark on his report card and a nice note from the teacher just as the boastful mother next door is visiting you; having sister come in and greet important relatives or high-toned friends "like a little lady"; seeing them both go through their parts in the school entertainment without causing you a single nervous gasp.

Dispatching the check paying the last monthly bill, knowing the money is in sight for the insurance and the payment on the car and feeling that now things will surely be a little easier the next month.

Meeting an old and dear friend after a lapse of years and finding that your minds and spirits have traveled the same direction and that you still have so much to say to each other you "can never get through."

Meeting your old beau and detecting a latent something in his eye as he explains, "Why you haven't changed a bit!"

Hearing HIM—after the long, long moment of suspense in which he has viewed your hat from all sides—say slowly and with finality "It's all right."

Getting back to the familiar and heavenly routine of your own simple bungalow or apartment after a visit to his or your folks with the children.

Knowing every member of the family is safely near you when you hear the shriek of an ambulance siren or a terrific blast of thunder.

Sitting in the pleasant living room at night with every one at home—well, comfortable, busy, happy—the brooding darkness outside shut off; the strife war and chaos of the world seeming far, far distant; hearing the clock tick off the happy quietude, and thinking "Well, whatever may happen—we at least have this moment."

What Can Be Done About Mother Who Seems to Enjoy Ugly Quarrels, Which She Provokes?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can anything be done about a mother who actually seems to like to fuss and fight, and who never has an unqualified good word to say for anyone? I am married and away from home, so I am not directly affected, but I worry about the other children—two younger brothers (helping at home as I did before marriage) and two half-sisters and a half-brother (all under 7 years of age), who are very unhappy. If they feel as I used to feel, they would rather be dead.

My mother and stepfather fight like cats and dogs, and it was the same with my own father, as far back as I can remember. Many times, when I went to school, I could hardly study for wondering if I would find one of my parents dead when I returned home. My father was a fine man, too, very easy to get along with. But human nature, regardless of how sweet, can only stand just so much.

I have tried to tell mother that it takes two to make a quarrel, and that if she wouldn't say everything she thinks (what she thinks isn't very nice) it would prevent a lot of fusses. But such suggestions make her angry. She says: "Holding up for him! Children don't even respect their parents nowadays. It's easy enough for you to tell me what to do!" I have told her that I am not holding up for anyone, but that I just don't see any necessity for so much fussing.

Frankly, I don't like my stepfather, but since they are married, I think they should try to do right by their children. Mother tells me that I let my husband lead me around by the nose. Yet he likes to help me with the housework and the baby on his days off, and that way we can enjoy some time together. We get along beautifully and he has given me the first real home and the only happiness I have ever had in my life. He has been more kind and understanding than my own parents, or anyone else, has ever been. What more could I ask of him? But how can I help the children at home, who cannot help themselves?

HOPEFUL.

Reform Improbable

DEAR HOPEFUL: It is my belief that you will never receive any co-operation from your mother in the matter of making existence more endurable for the children in her home. It seems evident that her personality has been irreparably warped by a lifetime's indulgence in self pity, which sometimes takes the aggressive, assertive form of vindictive or resentful attitudes, cloaked in self righteousness, directed at the world in general and one's intimates in particular.

Whatever can be done to acquaint the children with some fragmentary peace, happiness, self-respect and hope for the future must be done by yourself, with the kindly assistance of your understanding husband. The greatest contribution you can make, I think, is to counteract the vicious influence of their home atmosphere by bringing some sunshine into their lives every time you are in their company.

Rather than chide your mother or attempt her reform when under her roof, turn your whole attention (but casually) to the youngsters there. Give them, somehow, to understand that in you and your husband they have two never-failing friends, who may be counted on always to understand their problems, sympathize with their woes, encourage their best efforts and aspirations and rejoice in their accomplishments.

If these children can find, in any other closely associated dependable person or couple, an example of social decency, spiritual integrity, mental balance, basic kindliness and happy family life, they cannot but be inspired (in some small measure) to copy that pattern, and to hope that some day they may possess all these attributes in themselves and in their lives. And if, moreover, such a person or such a couple makes every effort cordially to share with them all possible happiness that can be shared, their young spirits will have been fed—from day to day and week to week and year to year—with reassuring evidence of never-failing love and friendship so necessary to any soul's salvation.

In view of the fact that you have won through, from the same cruel environment, to your present really remarkable degree of happiness, contentment and security, it seems to me that you are uniquely implemented to unfurl the banner of hope and courage for these wretchedly deprived youngsters. It seems to me that you have the experience, understanding and equipment to solace their griefs, quiet their fears and lift their hearts as few others could.

Bulla Qualifies, Little Out of British Open Final Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

With apologies to H. I. Phillips

Philadelphia, July 6.

Scene—A night ball game in the big leagues.

Umpire-in-chief (to the two managers as they walk to the plate and present their lineups)—all right now, you two. Listen to me. I want a good, clean fight. No hitting in the clinches, no back-handing, no heeling. And don't forget, anything below the belt is a foul.

First Manager—But listen, Umps, this——.

POVICH

Second Manager — Hey! Umps! This a baseball game, not a——.

Batter—No!

Umpire—Yes!

Batter—It was low.

Umpire—No.

Batter—It was high.

Umpire—No.

Batter—It was inside.

Umpire—No.

Batter—It was outside.

Umpire—No.

Batter—Let me look at that ball. It acted funny.

Catcher—What ball?

Umpire—The on the pitcher just threw.

Catcher—He hasn't thrown it yet.

Umpire—Well, then, let's get this game started. Shake it up!

Manager (to centerfielder as the inning ends)—You played that last hit like a busher.

Centerfielder—Well, you see, it was——

Manager—Never mind the alibis. My 4-year-old boy would have stuck that measly fly oall in his hip pocket, and you let it drop safe for three bases.

Centerfielder—It's tough out there. I'd a-had it, but——

Manager—No buts.

Centerfielder—But the moon got in my eyes.

Manager—Well, that settles it. You're through. Hereafter, Glutz is gonna play the moon field in this park.

Pinchhitter—Joey Doques.

Pinchhitter—I'm batting for Smith.

Umpire—How old are you, young fellow?

Pinchhitter—I'm 18, why?

Umpire—Well, then, you ain't batting for Smith.

Pinchhitter—Why not?

Umpire—You ain't batting for anybody at this hour, young man. Not without a note from your mother.

Press Box Occupant (to a colleague—Where's Joe Drizzlepuss? Why isn't he playing first base tonight?

Second reporter — He's been fined and suspended.

First reporter—For what?

Second reporter—For breaking training.

First reporter—what did he do, stay out all night?

Second reporter—No; he stayed out all day when he should have been sleeping.

Umpire in chief (at the end of sixteenth inning with the score tied)—Game called!

Both managers (rushing up excitedly)—Why? What's the idea?

Umpire in chief (turning his back and walking toward the dressing room)—Game called on account of daylight!

IN SHORT—The Athletics will show more of a financial profit this season than any year since the pennant-winning season of 1931 . . . because of the night games at Shibe Park. . . . The five games played under the lights drew an average of 18,014 customers. . . . An attendance figure that would have covered all five games if played in the daytime. . . . Installation of lights in Griffith Stadium will be the most costly undertaking in maor league lighting . . . due to the wide expanse and shape of the Washington park . . . which, unlike high-walled Briggs Stadium, Yankee Stadium and Shibe Park, offers no natural ceiling. . . . Players claim that night ball is tougher on the infielders than the outfielders . . . because ground balls cannot be seen as easily as fly balls. . . . Night games have forced the ball players to change their dinner hour from 6 p. m. to 4 p. m. . . . because of daylight saving. pregame batting practice for both teams in Shibe Park games scheduled at night is held during the final hour of daylight and is useless as far as adjusting batting eyes to the lights is concerned. . . . But night ball may yet be the salvation of the American League. . . . It will give the Washington, Philadelphia and St. Louis clubs the kind of profits they need to compete with such as the Yankees in the purchase of expensive talent. . . . Connie Mack's light bill for each night game at Shibe Park is $750.

Rideout Defeats Cunningham in Mile Run Before Game; 29,105 Fans Attend

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 6.—Paul Derringer won his eleventh game tonight as the Cincinnati Reds took a free hitting contest from the St. Louis Cards, 7 to 4. Lombardi and Mize hit homers before 29,105 fans, the largest night crowd and the second largest attendance of the season.

Blaine Rideout, of Elberon, N. J., staved off a last lap rush by Glenn Cunningham tonight to win the mile run of the annual Cincinnati A. A. U. track meet, a preliminary to the game.

Wayne Rideout, twin brother of the national mile champion, was third. Cunningham trailed for three laps, then moved up to second place. He tried to pass but Blaine wouldn't be passed.

Burton Sets Pace With Card of 142

Lawson Eliminated After Shabby Play; Johnny's Sub-par 71 Gives Him 148

By Drew Middleton.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 6.—Richard Burton, seasoned son of golfing folk, tacked a decisive 72 onto his previous 70 today and snatched the halfway lead in the British Open golf championship, with only jovial Johnny Bulla standing in the way of the end of the United States tradition in this tournament, once regarded as strictly American territory.

Lawson Little, moody and slipshod in his golf, tossed away his slight chances of entering tomorrow's final 36 holes with 2½ hours of shoddy play in which he took an 80. This lamentable round gave him 159 for the first 36 holes—far above the stroke minimum of 159 which qualified 34 golfers, including such British Empire greats as Henry Cotton, Bobby Locke, Jim Bruen and Defending Champion Reggie Whitcombe, for tomorrow's final two rounds.

Sub Par 71

Bulla added a neat two-under par 71 to his previous 77 for 148 to slide in two strokes under the qualifying minimum and six off the pace.

A stroke behind Burton, at 143, stood Martin Pose, the diligent Argentine, who posted scores of 71 and 72, and who is by all odds the steadiest player in the field.

Jock Fallon, another virtual unknown, was third with 144 after a round of 73 today, while half a dozen other British Empire shotmakers were bracketed at 145. They were Locke, the fiery South African, who blew up on the fourteenth and seventeenth, just when the leadership appeared in sight, and took a 75; Alf Perry, champion in 1935; Jim Busson, the one-time New Hampshire and Florida pro; Dave Rees, a little Welshman; Syd Easterbrook, veteran internationalist, and W. Shankland.

Cotton Four Strokes Back

A stroke back of this sextet, and four off Burton's faultless pace, was a quartet topped by Henry Cotton, winner of this crown in 1934 and 1937, and Whitcombe, who took it a year ago. Cotton saw his place as Britain's "ideal golfer" usurped by Burton today when he took a seven on the same seventeenth that caused Locke's downfall. He needed only two pars at that point to turn in a 70, which would have tied him with John Busson, Jim's brother, for the day's best round.

Farther back in the field were Bruen, the 19-year-old Irish amateur, who played conventially good golf for a 2-over-par 75 and a 147 total, and Jack Adams, another Irish native, with the same aggregate. Back of them came Bulla, the Veteran Len Crawley and Percy Alliss at 148; Robert Sweeney, former Californian, at 149, and Alex Kyle, amateur titlist, just under the wire, at 150.

Little's Plays Shabby

The sun shone brightly on the "auld gray toon" today, and, as a result, the golfers made merry at the expense of the course that rebuffed them coldly during the two qualifying days and yesterday's first round. A few top notchers failed to make the grade, but scores, generally, were lower.

There just wasn't any excuse for Little, however. He looked tired and downright uninterested after he had strung five 5's together in the first nine. He didn't have his old authority behind his drives and his putting—even though the greens had not fully dried—was shabby and unplanned.

Bulla, on the other hand, responded magnificently to the challenge of his first day's 77. Somehow he mastered the use of his new putter, which was made here, and his confidence in that club, plus a painstaking survey of the layout before every shot, brought dividends. He has the stuff inside to play great golf, and many a Scot murmured gravely not to "count that Yank out."

Cotton and Locke both had domination of the tourney in their hands and tossed it away—Cotton because he elected to play a high spoon into the wind on his second shot on the seventeenth and then drove it out of bounds; Locke because he simply was too sure of himself when he faced the fourteenth and seventeenth. As usual, the holes struck back and before Bobby could regain control of his game he used 13 strokes.

Derringer Suit In N. Y. Settled Out of Court

Cincinnati, July 6 (AP).—Warren Giles, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds announced settlement, out of court, of an $8,000 judgment awarded Robert J. Condon, New York, against Paul Derringer, Reds' hurler.

Amount of the settlement, which Giles said was reached during a telephone conference, was not disclosed.

Settlement paves the way for Derringer's appearance in the all-star game in New York July 11. A body judgment, calling for the pitcher's arrest should he enter New York State, was issued shortly after trial of the case, which arose upon Condon's charge that Derringer assaulted him during a hotel "party" in Philadelphia in 1936.

An Imposing Grid Line-up at East Potomac—Or Is It?

Near-Complete Football Team Guards East Potomac Bathers

By Bill Burnett.

Though it has water, pretty girls, and a place to get the most painful sunburn in your career—much the same as any swimming pool in the country—East Potomac has one distinction that sets it off like a prairie shack. It has a near-complete football team on the premises all the time.

The boys, as you might have guessed, are life guards. A huskier bunch of life savers you never saw.

Under the eye of Bill Reinhart, the quiet little man who manages the pool in his spare time, and hopes to put George Washington back on the gridiron map, they're either conditioning themselves for another season of college campaigning or looking forward to their first taste of grid activity at the G-street institute.

There may be better line prospects among them, but the young man who immediately attracts your attention is John Clarey. He's attired in the same scant costume, sun glasses and whistle cord—but he has gray hair.

Behind the dark glasses, Clarey hides an eye through which he was able to see for the first time in four years only last week. Let Clarey tell it:

"In prep school," he says," the muscle in that right eye was damaged so the darn thing was pointed rather uselessly at the tip of my nose. Some opposing football player stuck his cleat in it during a pile-up.

"Like a sap I played with it like that all through prep school and my freshman year at St. Victor College, in Bourbonnais, Ill. Guess I was alright at the tackle job, but without sight in that eye, the opposing end often came around and sloughed me before I saw him."

"I was ineligible for the team at G. W. last year, but I got in the game with University of Virginia at Easter time. There's a good chance of my playing regular this year, now, because of the operation I had on the eye two weeks ago. Let me tell you, operations are wonderful. That Dr. Davis who fixed this glimmer at Episcopal really knew his stuff.

"I can see now," Clarey wound up. "I gotta wear these glasses for a while, but you can be sure that end won't spill me so unexpected-like in the future."

Oh, yes, the grey hair! Clarey says it turned gray when he was 14 years old. It's just now turning back to brown, its original color. "We do things backward like that in my family," he says.

Alice Marble Plays Kay Stammers in Final

Coast Girl Beats Mrs. Sperling in Love Sets; English Girl Wins 4½-Hour Match in Wimbledon Tennis Tournament

By Scotty Reston.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Wimbledon, England, July 6.—Playing wonderful tennis for 20 minutes, Alice Marble, of San Francisco, routed Mrs. Hilda Krahwinkle Sperling, of Denmark, 6—0, 6—0, in the semifinals of the All-England championships today and qualified to meet England's beautiful Kay Stammers for the women's title.

Miss Stammers eliminated Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Cambridge, Mass., 7—5, 2—6, 6—3, in a match that took 4½ hours to complete, largely because it was interrupted three times by rain.

Miss Marble, United States champion and seeded No. 1, walked out on the windy center court with Mrs. Sperling, former German star who beat Helen Wills Moody, in the finals of the London championships a year ago. Ten minutes later she still had her lucky pink sweater on and she had won the set with the loss of only 9 points.

Crowd Stunned

In another ten minutes it was all over and when Mrs. Sperling got only 5 points in the second set, the capacity crowd of 17,000, including American Ambassador Kennedy and three of his children, was too stunned to realize what had happened.

The American titleholder was merciless. She battered back Mrs. Sperling's service to win the first game, served four "kickers" to take the second to love and then followed the ball so relentlessly and put it away so fast that the Danish woman just ran back and forth across the baseline and waved at them going past.

This was the first love match in Wimbledon semifinal history and it was in almost comical contrast to the other between Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Stammers. It's to Miss Stammers' credit that she managed to win after the rain broke into one of the finest streaks she had ever produced in eight years of international competition.

Great Backhand Shots

This streak came at the very start of the match when the English girl, helped by Mrs. Fabyan's errors at the net, ran away to a 4—0 lead. At 5—1 the rain started and when play was resumed Mrs. Fabyan pulled up to 5—5 and appeared well on her way to victory.

But in the eleventh game Katy produced three great backhand passing shots to break Mrs. Fabyan's service and she won the next game with service to take the set.

Mrs. Fabyan seemed to stop worrying then about the wind and rain and commanded the second set all the way. A netcord helped Miss Stammers break Sarah's service at the outset of the final set but after she shot off to a 3—1 lead, the American girl put on another great rally and won two straight only to ruin her chances by dropping her service to love in the seventh game and again in the ninth.

The women's finals will be played Saturday.

Pastor, Louis To Sign Today For Title Bout

By the United Press.

New York, July 6.—Bob Pastor, New York heavyweight, will sign tomorrow for a world title fight with Champion Joe Louis at Detroit on September 21.

It is understood that this return bount between "Bicycle Bob" and the "Brown Bomber" will be slated for 20 rounds, although the exact distance may not be specified in tomorrow's signing ceremony at Twentieth Century Club headquarters.

This will be the first heavyweight championship bout staged in the State of Michigan since Jack Dempsey knocked out Billy Miske in three rounds at Benton Harbor, Mich., September 6, 1920.

Louis and his managers will not be at the signing, as they are now in the Midwest, and Louis already is under contract with Promoter Mike Jacobs to fulfill any engagements he may make. Jacobs will promote the bout, probably with the cooperation of Young Jim Norris.

Exact site of the bout has not been agreed upon definitely, but it is expected to be held at Briggs Stadium, home of the Detroit Tigers. Walter O. Briggs, jr., vice president and treasurer of the Tigers, will come to New York soon and confer with Jacobs about use of the stadium for the fight.

Caster Gives 2 Hits After 2d Inning

Harris, Players Not In Favor of Flood Light Sport; Nats Dissipate 3-0 Lead

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, July 6.—The Nats took a fling at night life in the big leagues, but it was a gay evening only for the Athletics. For the Nats, their debut in the spook circuit was a bitter experience. They were licked by the lowly A's, 9 to 3, and are hanging on to sixth place only by the margin of a gnat's eyelash.

By moon light and flood light, they were the same Nats who have been losing games in the same manner by sun light. In the soft, yellowish brilliance of 780 flood lamps beaming down upon the playing field from eight 150-foot towers, two Washington pitchers were knocked out of the box and three Washington errors found their way into the summary.

Those veteran night prowlers, the A's, who have played six of this season's games under the lights, stole upon the Nats from behind, relieved them of a 3-0 lead, and then made away with the ball game against only feeble resistance. George Caster held the Nats to eight hits.

Only 8,000 on Hand

Eight thousand seven hundred and thirty-two customrs, the smallest crowd of the night season here, saw the game. It was a shirt-sleeved throng for the most part, seeking comfort in a sultry evening. But there was no comfort for the Nats.

Manager Bucky Harris, after the game, declared of night baseball:

"I don't like it. I wouldn't have liked it tonight, even if the score had been reversed."

Despite playing conditions that appared evehy bit as favorable as daylight, veteran members of the Nats looked down their noses at said:

"Ground balls are tough for the infielders to judge, and the game losos those niceties around the plate. A batter cant' see the curve ball spin and adjust his swing to it. The ball is too white in the light.

A's Do All Right

The A's, however, managed to do very well. They didn't boot a single ball, and they massaged Joe Haynes, Pete Appleton and Alex Alexandra for 12 hits. They knocked Haynes out of the box in the fifth and Appleton lasted only two innings.

The Washington club's first impression of night ball were doubtless very good ones, but they weren't lasting. George Case hit the first pitch of the game for a single, and in the second inning the Nats

'Yankees Are In,' Says Jack Doyle

Broadway's Betting Commissioner Refuses Bets on Champions

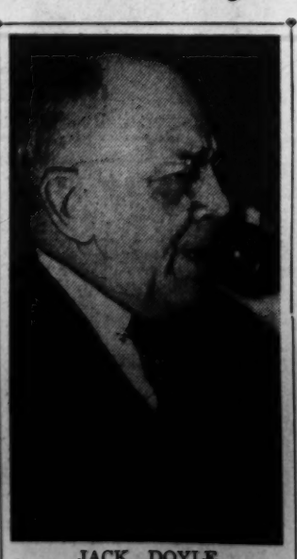
By the United Press.

New York, July 6.—The Yankees are in. This is the first time in years that Jack Doyle, Broadway's betting commissioner, has refused to lay some kind of a wager against the leading club in either league on the basis of their fourth of July standing.

But with the Yanks leading by virtually 12 games on Independence Day—the half-season mark—Jack Doyle says, "They're in—as far as I'm concerned—and I'll lay no money against them."

Accordingly the venerable, bespectacled Irishman is quoting only against second place in the American League standing. And he's offering four bucks against your five that the Boston Red Sox do not finish in second berth. And his other odds against any team in the American League finishing second are as follows:

Seven to five against Detroit; 2-1 against Cleveland; 7-1 against Chicago's White Sox; 20-1 against Washington; 50-1 against Philadelphia's Athletics, and 100-1 against St. Louis' Browns. Remember, these quotations are against a club finishing second—not against an outfit winning the American League Pennant. It is probably the goodest listing of prices in major league history.



JACK DOYLE

But ancient Jack Doyle makes no such evaluation in the National League, where he regards the pennant race as the closest since 1914 when the Boston Braves—in last place on July 4—went on to win the flag.

Nats 20-1 to Finish Second, While 50-1 Is Quoted Against A's

Doyle quotes the leading Cincinnati Reds as 4-5 favorites to finish first—to win the pennant. And he'll lay 7-2 against the New York Giants winning the flag, despite their recent bunting threat.

Doyle's other National League prices against the clubs may be listed as follows: 6-1 against the Chicago Cubs; 6-1 against St. Louis; 10-1 against Pittsburgh, and the same 10-1 against Brooklyn; 15-1 against Boston's Bees, and 100-1 against the lowly Phillies.

Doyle says, "The Yankees are in. Why should I try to arrange bets against them? But the second place in the American League belongs to anybody—just like the pennant winner in the National circuit. And that National race looks like the most exciting in the history of the league. If I were smart, I'd keep my money in my pocket. But I'm not smart. That's why I'm still trying to make sinkers and coffee off baseball bets when I'm old enough to be retired to a nice quiet pasture."

Incidentally, concludes Jack, the American League is the betting favorite in the all-star game on July 11 at 9-20, while the National Leaguers are under dogs at 8-5.

Welsh Wins Tough Match From Mitchell to Gain Net Finals

Barney Tops Game Rival, 6-4 and 8-6

Defending Champion Extended in Unusual Duel of Drop Shots, But Is Impressive

By Jack Munhall.

In one of the cagiest and most exciting matches of their long rivalry, Barney Welsh defeated third-seeded Dooly Mitchell, 6—4, 8—6, yesterday at Columbia to move into the final round of the District Men's tennis championships and get in position to win his seventh straight title.

The other scheduled semifinal, between Hugh Lynch and Davie Johnsen, was postponed until 4 o'clock this afternoon because Davie is still troubled by a sore back.

The Welsh-Mitchell match, one of the most unusual seen here in many years, further bore out the general opinion that Welsh will continue to rule the local roost as long as he can lift his racquet.

Stubbornly Fought Match

Handicapped by the cut he sustained on the index finger of his playing had last Saturday and facing in Mitchell a determined and able opponent who came from behind in each set to make the result doubtful until the final games, Welsh rose to brilliant heights.

In the ninth and tenth games of the first set and throughout the stubbornly fought second set which produced more drop shots by both players than are generally seen in an entire tournament, Welsh was something to see. And he had to be, for the veteran Mitchell has seldom showed to better advantage.

Having perceived at once that he couldn't match Barney's power, Mitchell mixed up his game cleverly, using half-lobs and frequent drop shots that had Welsh tearing from one side of the court to the other.

Knew the Answers

But all Mitchell's strategy and his tenacious battling availed nothing, for Welsh knew all the answers, even how to combat the deadly drop shot, of which Dooly is a master. He did it with a drop shot of his own, an effective weapon many did not know he possessed.

In each set Welsh built what seemed prohibitive leads only to see the desperate Mitchell buckle down and pull up to a threatening position. Barney held 4—2 and 5—3 advantages in the first set, but was hard pressed to break Mitchell's service in the tenth game for the victory. The game went to deuce and Mitchell fought off a match point before Welsh met drop shot with drop shot for the deciding tally.

The second set was nearly a repetition, except that Mitchell was even more dangerous. Welsh took the first three games easily, dropped the fourth, and won the fifth for a 4—1 lead. This generous advantage quickly melted before a barrage of Mitchell placements and Dooly evened the score at 4—4. Games then went to service until the fourteenth when Welsh broke through, registering his 4 points on two driving placements, a drop shot and Mitchell's netting of his last service.

Gain in Doubles

Mitchell and Welsh, seeking their fourth doubles title in succession later, gained the semifinal round together with Frank Shore and Lieut. H. C. Russell and Hugh Lynch and Davie Johnsen.

Alphonso Smith and Dick Murphy are the fourth semifinalists, having made that bracket Wednesday.

Lynch and Johnsen were extended in turning back Ray Stocklinski and Harry Brinkerhoff, 4—6, 6—2, 8—6, due partly to Johnsen's injury, but mostly to an unexpectedly good showing by the losers who were teaming for the first time in any tournament.

Scheduled to meet in singles at 4 and then play doubles almost immediately afterward, Lynch and Johnsen could easily be the victims of the first team upset, for they face Smith and Murphy who have been playing well.

SINGLES

Semifinal round—Welsh defeated Mitchell, 6—4, 8—6.

DOUBLES

Quarter-final round—Welsh and Mitchell defeated Baker and Deck, 6—4, 6—0; Lynch and Johnsen defeated Stocklinski and Brinkerhoff, 4—6, 6—2, 8—6; Shore and Russell defeated Ritzenberg and Turner, 6—3, 6—2.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

Semifinal round—3 p. m., Lynch and Johnsen vs. Smith and Murphy; Shore and Russell vs. Mitchell and Welsh.

Jack Dempsey Still Improving

New York City, July 6 (INS).—Jack Dempsey tonight was reported still improving slowly from the emergency operation for peritonitis a week ago, but will be allowed no more visitors until Saturday or Sunday.

Although all danger appears to have passed, his wife, the former Hannah Williams, continues to be with him constantly.

Dempsey is allowed to read daily a few of the thousands of telegrams that arrived for him at Polyclinic Hospital when the world learned that his life was in danger. One of his jobs during convalescence will be to answer personally all the messages.

H. Dettweiler In Exhibition Match Today

Helen Detweiler will play the first of three scheduled exhibition matches in the next five days this morning at Army and Navy, pairing with Mrs. David H. Clark against Mrs. Hume Peabody and Host Professional Allan Burton.

Miss Dettweiler, the businesswoman golfer of some two months, will be shooting at her own course record of 78, set in the one-day Invitation tournament last fall. Her partner, Mrs. Clark, is club champion and former Middle Atlantic titleholder, while Mrs. Peabody was semifinalist in the recent District Women's championship.

One of three Baltimore public links pros, Johnny Bass, Bill Schreiber or Frank Invernizzi, will take Miss Dettweiler for a partner Sunday at Mount Pleasant, against the other two. The match is one of a series in promoting the National Public Links championship at Mount Pleasant July 24 to 29.

Miss Dettweiler has been successfull in recent matches in Baltimore, her most outstanding feat a 35 on the first nine at Suburban.

Double Eagle By Partner Wins For Sarazen

By the Associated Press

Port Washington, Long Island, July 6.—Competing in the first annual all-star pro-amateur tournament at the Sands Point Club, James Baldwin, amateur from the Piping Rock Club, shot a double eagle on the fourteenth hole that enabled him and his partner, Gene Sarazen, Connecticut pro, to win top honors, worth about $500 to Gene and glory to Baldwin.

Gene holed a 3 on the seventeenth and Baldwin registered a birdie on the last green to give the side a 62, nine strokes under par.

Fourteen of the leading pros in America, including Byron Nelson, the current holder of the open championship; Paul Runyan, the P. G. A. king; Sam Snead and Ralph Guldahl competed. None was able to come within two strokes of the figure made by Sarazen and Baldwin.

Nelson and Howell Van Gerbig, Westbury, N. Y., tallied 34, 35—69.

Dick Metz, Lake Forest, Ill., and Allston Flagg, Piping Rock, had 33, 37—70, and Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and A. C. Giles, Briar Hills, N. Y., turned in 35, 37—72.

Wayne Sabin Rallies to Win In Cup Tennis

By the Associated Press.

North Conway, N. H., July 6.—Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., invincible in Eastern tennis circles this season, had a close call today in moving into the quarter-finals of the Eastern Slope Gold Racquet tournament.

The top-seeded Northwesterner was 2 points away from defeat when his eager second-round rival, burly Henry Prusoff, from Seattle, Wash., suddenly went to pieces after losing control of his booming backhand.

Prusoff, who had to play superb tennis on the clay courts to carry the opening set against his steady opponent, led five games to four and stood 30—15 in the tenth game of the second when he suffered his sudden blow-up. He was so upset by his long series of miscues that he won only two of the last ten games as Sabin ran out a 4—6, 7—5, 6—2 victory.

Accompanying the first-seeder in the round of eight were the three over favored stars, Hal Surface, of Kansas City; Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, and Johnny Doeg.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 6.—Everett Scott, the round little man who played 1,307 consecutive games of baseball, believes that Lou Gehrig made a bad mistake in continuing his own streak.

"If he had been content to break my record, then piled up a hundred more games or so, and taken things easier after that, he would have lasted a lot longer," Scott said today. "Gehrig only lasted 14 years, but he played 25 years of baseball in those 14 years. What he should have done, after he cracked my record, was play about a 125 games a year."

CONSIDINE

Gehrig's probably never-to-be-equaled string of 2,130 consecutive games commenced June 1, 1925 at the Yankee Stadium when he batted for Pee-Wee Wanninger in the ninth inning of a game against the Red Sox. The next day Huggins put him on first base, and there he played without interruption until April 30, this year, in a game against the Senators.

Huggins broke Scott's streak by benching him on May 6, 1925 in a series with the Athletics. Scott had started his streak on June 30, 1916, while a member of the Red Sox. Joe Sewell, another former Yank, stands third in this iron man league. He played 1,103 games in a row, starting September 13, 1922, while playing for Cleveland against Washington, and ending April 30, 1930, against the Browns. The longest National League span is Gus Suhr's 823 games—broken last year by the death of his mother.

Maybe McPhail Was in Ernest

This time there seems to be a little more to the current Brooklyn-New York feud than the fact that the teams open a three-day series tomorrow. Ford Frick, president of the National League, and a person who doesn't ordinarily lend himself to the ballyhooed animosity between the two firms, commented briskly on the fact that Leo Durocher has said that he will not pay the $25 fine imposed upon him by the Frick office for punching Zeke Bonura in the nose. "He'll pay," Frick snapped, "or he won't play until he does."

Frick also pointed out that Larry MacPhail, irate president of the Dodgers, had neglected to send him a copy of the tart pronouncement he issued to the press, concerning Bill Terry's alleged henpecking of National League umpires and the threat to go over Frick's head to the league's board of directors, to seek justice for Brooklyn's sweaty artists. "If I had any answer to that I doubt if I'd make it to reporters." Frick, a reformed sports columnist, told us. "I don't think the newspapers are quite the right place in which to conduct a baseball fight. And as for MacPhail's appeal to the board of directors, that's out of the question. The board has no power to rule on complaints of this nature."

Thus is written another chapter in the long siege of professional or civic jealousy that has existed between Brooklyn and New York since that day in 1867 when negotiations for a national championship game between the Brooklyn Atlantics and George Wright's New York Unions collapsed when Brooklyn refused to permit the Unions to bring along their own police, for protection.

Players Prove to Be Poor Fans

Though they were the most publicized ball players of all time, the old Yanks who came back to New York this week to honor Lou Gehrig now see very few baseball games. Everett Scott, who saw and played in so many of them in a row, has seen only two games since retiring from the game a decade ago. Bob Meusel has seen only a few. For the greater part they are like Ty Cobb, who too finds it hard to sit in the stands and watch the game he played so well.

Jumping Joe Dugan, sitting in a circle of old Yanks in the stadium taproom the other day, breathed happily in his beer and said, "I don't know whether these new Yanks are better than we were, or not. But I guarantee we had more fun." He looked up at Mark Koenig, who was the rookie shortstop for that garrulous, hard-drinking, hard-living 1927 Yankee team.

"I remember taking Koenig aside one day," Dugan recalled, "and asking him what he was going to do with the $5,000 world series check he was about to get. Well, he thought it over a while, and remembering how some of our guys were living about that time, he said, 'Joe, I'm going to put it all into stocks—White Rock and ginger ale stocks.'"

Mrs. Meckley Wins Play-Off With an 83

Mrs. Walter Stokes Bows by 2 Strokes For Low Gross Prize

Mrs. Betty Meckley won the postponed playoff for the low gross prize in the Star Cup Tournament yesterday at Indian Spring, taking a three-stroke lead over Mrs. Walter Stokes at the end of the fourth hole, and holding a two-shot margin at the finish, 83 to 85.

They tied with 81s in the tournament won by Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg, who had low score of the day, an 80, but elected to take her net total. It was the second gross prize of the season for Mrs. Meckley, who broke a course record at Woodmont, while Mrs. Stokes was also a previous gross winner, in the Duffer's Play at Manor.

A par 4 on the second hole where Mrs. Stokes took 5; another on the fourth, where Mrs. Stokes trapped her tee shot and took 6, gave Mrs. Meckley a three-stroke lead. The eventual winner made it 4 on the eighth, and she turned with a three stroke margin, out in 39, as Mrs. Stokes won the ninth with a 3 for a 42.

Mrs. Stokes cut another stroke off on the eleventh, but three three-putt greens in a row left her trailing by four strokes with three holes to play. Mrs. Meckley took 7 on the long sixteenth, flubbing three straight shots, and lost half her lead, but they halved the next two for the 83 and 85.

The playoff, the third in the last three tournaments, concluded the first-half schedule of the Women's District Golf Association. The second half of the card will begin with the Corby Cup, September 12. Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president, presented Mrs. Meckley with the trophy.

All-Star Game To Start at 2 P. M.

Chicago, July 6 (AP).—The All-Star baseball game between picked teams of the National and American leagues at New York next Tuesday will start at 2 p. m. Eastern Standard Time, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, said today.

If rain forces postponement, the game will be played Wednesday, with the starting time at 11 a. m. Eastern Daylight Saving Time.

Press Routs Congressmen in Benefit Softball Game, 15-7

Gene Tunney Umpires Tilt At Stadium

Only 2,500 Witness Annual Game for Benefit of Blind; Johnson at 'Mike'

By Al Hailey

The Gentlemen of the Press nosed out a team of intrepid Congressmen, 15 to 7, here last night in a contest that was described in an unverified report as softball.

Although the game looked at times something like cricket and then again like badminton, it was for the benefit of the National Library for the Blind, so everything was all right.

Only 2,500 turned out to witness the epochal clash between the men who make the speeches and the Nation's laws and the members of the Fourth Estate.

With Gentleman Gene Tunney, former world's heavyweight champion, calling balls and strikes, the game finally got under way after preliminary skirmishes that included band concerts and attempted speeches by the men of Congress.

45-Minute Concert

After the Washington Gas Light Band did its bit with a 45-minute concert, 11 beautfiul young things walked out on the field and immediately stole the show from the Congress fellows and the Fourth Estate gentlemen.

The Congressmen and newspapermen brightened visibly and tore themselves away from the harried cameramen to rush over and pick a mascot.

Dorothy Parker, "Miss Washington" of 1938, was the newspapermen's choice. The Congressmen chose Nadine Petrey. Personally, this corner liked the number in white, third from the left.

The weather was clear and the track fast as the Congressional fellows and the Press team trotted on the field. Umpire Tunney was missing at the start until he was called to the field by Announcer Walter Johnson, who handled the public address system for the benefit of blind persons who were guests of the park for the night.

Forced at Second

The Congressmen went to bat first, but were retired in rapid order by Pitcher Eric Friedheim, of the International News Service. Representative Karl Mundt, of South Dakota, did get a single but was forced out at second by South Dakota Representative Francis Case's grounder to Second Baseman Sam O'Neal, of the St. Louis Star-Times.

The Press boys came in and immediately began their field day—or night. Leon Schloss, of the I. N. S., hit a long fly over Representative Bill Lambertson, of Kansas, in rightfield, bringing in Friedheim.

Their appetites whetted by this little display, the Fourth Estate gentlemen reeled off two more runs that inning. After that they scored at will, piling up ten more runs before the sixth inning, when the Congressmen tightened up and held them scoreless.

$35,000 Guarantee

Chicago, July 6 (AP).—Henry Armstrong, world's lightweight champion, was offered $35,000 with a percentage privilege today to defend his title against Davey Day, Chicago challenger, in one of Chicago's major league ball parks in September.

Navy Sports Teams Report For Practice

Crew, Track, Lacrosse And Tennis Teams Begin Summer Drills

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., July 6.—Navy's campus was probably the busiest of any college playground today, as candidates for crew, baseball, track, Lacrosse and tennis teams of the second and fourth classes reported for work. About half of the full student body are available for athletics and schedules have been arranged in all branches for the coming summer.

The squad of plebes that reported to Buck Walsh, head rowing coach, was considerable larger than that of last season, and included some very promising candidates. Two eights of plebes were on the water this afternoon, something almost unprecedented in Navy rowing and another eight was formed from members of the Varsity squad belonging to the second class.

Baseball was under the direction of Max Bishop, varsity coach. His candidates included four left-handed pitchers, Howie Schoenbaum, Tom Turner, Jim Henry and Paul Backus. Schoenbaum, however, will go to the hospital tomorrow for treatment.

Track was under the direction of Tommy Thompson, varsity coach in that branch, while Arthur Hendricks, tennis mentor, took charge of the courtmen.

Mack Worries About A's, But—Nation Worries About Connie

Veteran Manager's Office and Home Flooded With Fan Mail; Connie's Condition Improved

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 6.—Ailing Connie Mack worried about his team today as the Nation worried about Connie and sent so much fan mail that his home and office looked like branch postoffices.

Baseball's grand old man wishes he had a pitcher for every message of encouragement since a recurrence of a serious gall bladder infection felled him on the way to Boston a week ago. And his sons believe a victory would aid his recovery.

"He wants to know the details of every game," said Earl Mack, team coach and son of the 76-year-old manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

"We try to keep him quiet. It's no use. He worries because we've been having a string of tough luck."

Weak though he is, Connie is impatient to leave his sickbed. He wants to get back in the dugout and wave directions to his players with a scorecard—a familiar gesture in American League parks.

Earl and another son, Roy, don't know when their father will be back with the team.

"He's a lot better, but he must regain his strength," they said in their father's trophy-lined office in Shibe Park grandstand.

Everyone from Postmaster General James Farley to sandlot players is inquiring about Mack's condition and wishing him a speedy return to health.

David A. Moir, of Los Angeles, writing best wishes, recalled he was bat boy "for your first team in your first game in the old National Legaue."

Earl Mack said they are getting as many as 20 long-distance telephone calls daily.

Galento to Referee Hagerstown Bout

Hagerstown, July 6.—Tony Galento, who recently was knocked out by Champion Joe Louis, will be the third man in the ring here Wednesday, July 12, when Jimmy Lancaster, Wilmington, Del., meets Irish Jackie Carter, Washington, in the main bout, Matchmaker Jack Laken announced today. The winner of the bout will be matched with Mexican Joey Silva, who defeated Lancaster by a decision here several weeks ago.

Carroll Reappointed To Redskin Staff

Sid Carroll, a member of the executive staff of the Washington Redskins professional football team last year, has been reappointed for the 1939 season, Jack Espey, general manager, announced yesterday.

The new appointment will go into effect Monday. Carroll has been affiliated with the National Stamp News, meanwhile. The Redskins will leave for Spokane, Wash., for the early training period August 2.

Knott Gives 5 Hits as Chisox Beat Tribe, 8-1

Walker Hits Homer And Triple to Help Bring Chicago Victory

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 6.—With Jack Knott pitching five-hit ball and Gee Walker contributing his ninth homer an dtriple to a 12-hit attack, the Chicago White Sox ran their winning streak to fiev games today by defeating Cleveland again, 8 to 1.

Breaking a fourth-place tie between the eams, the game tumbled the Indians itno fifth place.

Six Chicago players chipped in two hits apiece against a quartet of Cleveland pitchers—Johnny Allen, Joe Dobson, Bill Zuber and Paul Sullivan. Allen, who shut out the Sox with three hits the last time he faced them, was relieved with none out in the second inning after a pass and singles by Eric McNair, Mike Tresh and Knott had one run in and bases filled.

McNair's pair of singles increased his batting splurges to 15 hits in his last 20 times at bat.

Diz Dean Batted Out, Pirates Beat Cubs, 7-2

Veteran With 'Nothing Ball' Suffers First Defeat of Season; Pittsburgh Reaches 5th Place; Klinger Wins

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 6.—The Pittsburgh Pirates punctured theillusion of Dizzy Dean today, forcing him out in the fourth inning as they crushed the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 2, and climbed into fifth place in the National League.

It was the first defeat of the season for Dean after four victories. Where once he had mowed down the Pirates with his streaking fast ball, Dean sought to slide by today on curves and a change of pace and they pelted him with three runs and eight hits during the short period he worked.

The Cubs gave him a lead in the third when Stan Hack singled two runs across, but the Pirates teed off for three tallies in the last half of the same inning.

An error by Dick Bartell on Johnny Rizzo's grounder following two singles let in the first Pittsburgh run. Chuck Klein sacrificed another home and Elbie Fletcher tripled for the third.

Two singles at the start of the fourth caused Larry French to come rushing to Dean's relief and the southpaw held his former teammates scoreless until the eighth, when they burst out with four runs.

Bob Klinger, who pitched a careful seven-hit game for his seventh victory, got the third of three singles in this inning to bring in one run and Fern Bell tripled for two more and then scored himself when Carl Reynolds mussed up the relay from center field.

It was Chicago's fourth loss in five games, during which they dropped from third to sixth place.

Huffman's .462 Sets Pace

Harrisonburg, Va., July 6.—A southpaw batter who teaches school when he isn't playing baseball, Warren Huffman, is setting a stiff pace for the hitters in the Virginia League with an average of .462.

Huffman, star centerfielder for the league-leading Staunton Presidents, has the top record for 61 hits for 92 bases out of 132 itmes at bat.

Closely pushing Huffman, a school teacher in the winter months, is Steve Sloboda, a teammate, with an average of .444. Their hitting, plus the pitching record of Walter (Lefty) Poland, who has lost one in ten starts, explain Staunton's 4½-game lead in the league.

Scott, Lynchburg shortstop, is third in the league's hitters with .390. Others, in order, include Nick Rhabe, Harrisonburg, fourth, with .363; Manager Henry Schenz, of Salem-Roanoke, fifth, with .350; McAndrews, Salem-Roanoke, .346; Cipalla, Lynchburg, .340; Moore, Salem-Roanoke, .337; Brelich, Salem-Roanoke, .336, and Mincy, Salem-Roanoke, .336.

Tigers Defeat Browns After 2½ Hours, 9-5

Detroit's Four-Run Cluster in Eighth Breaks 5-to-5 Tie

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 6.—The Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns battled 2½ hours in sweltering temperatures today before the Tigers won, 9 to 5.

There was more bad baseball than should show up in a major league game, but perhaps much of it could be blamed on the heat. It was no kind of day for any exertion.

Detroit's winning 4-run cluster came in the eighth to break a 5-to-5 tie.

Cullenbine doubled to start the inning. Earl Averill beat out a hit to McQuinn, sending Cullenbine to third. Pinky Higgins forced Averill, but Cullenbine scored on the play.

Señor Mario Merendi of Havana, Cuba, says

"Surely your new WHITE OWL must be an expensive cigar. It has a distinctive Havana taste. I am proud to see that you have made such a noble cigar blend."

Mario Merendi

A brand new Blended-with-Havana cigar —approved by Havana itself

HERE, gentlemen, is a brand-new cigar. A 5¢ cigar that has a real Havana taste. Who says so? Prominent smokers of Havana make that statement—and who is better qualified to judge the taste of Havana tobacco?

Why does this new cigar have such a rich Havana taste? That's a fair question and there are two good answers. First, because the Havana tobacco used in this cigar is really good. It's the same type of Havana that is used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more.

Second, because there's a big, generous portion of Havana in each cigar. Just a touch of Havana makes any cigar "Blended-with-Havana" in name... but it takes more rich Cuban tobacco than that to make it Havana in taste. Let your taste confirm the judgment of Havana smokers. Try a new White Owl.

Your choice of 2 shapes

Another "10¢" feature—now yours for 5¢ . . . a choice of shapes to suit your smoking taste. A long, trim, new Invincible. And a rich, full-bodied, new Club House shape. You get the same amount of tobacco—the same mild blend in either size—only the shape varies.

Happy Road, Palumbo Up, Wins Feature at Charles Town

Victor Beats Vendor's Lien By ½ Length

Ladys Favor Third In Test Over Route Of Six Furlongs; Double Pays $35

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 6.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo put up one of his better rides on Happy Road, owned by Mrs. W. Ashbridge, to account for a smashing victory in the Martinsburg Elks Purse, named in honor of visiting members of the fraternal order from the nearby city.

The Brooklyn (N. Y.) boy, leading the riders here by a wide margin, drove the 5-year-old son of Sun Flag to the wire a half length in front of Jane Waugh's Vendor's Lien with H. M. Simpson's Ladys Favor third in the test over the 6½ furlong course.

Happy Road, in winning his second purse of the meeting, carried top weight of 118-pounds and operated in the role of a $6.60 favorite. Racing over a drying track that was in slow condition, Happy Road turned in time of 1:21 4/5.

Palumbo turned in a well-judged ride. He allowed Happy Road to settle into stride and to race on his own courage to the back stretch. Along that straightaway Palumbo began to work on his mount and the gelding moved up gradually as Waugh Pop and Ladys Favor fought it out for the lead.

At the far turn, Vendor's Lien moved into contention with Happy Road close up. Entering the stretch, Palumbo swung to the outside and began booting in earnest. Happy Road responded gamely and wore down the leaders to win going away.

The Fred Boehm Purse, fifth on the program, went to J. Bishop's Prairie Man, ridden by Apprentice C. Walters, the Cambridge, (Md.) lad. Royal Fox was second and Beaufast was third. Prairie Man paid $20.60.

A good portion of the crowd of 6,000 participated in the $35 pay-off in the daily double. Tell It took the second race at $12.60 and Blind Talk scored at $6.60 in the third race.

CHILLEEVALLEE	(E. Snyder)	118	2	7	5½	5½	8	8	6.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SATIN ROYCE, $30.80, $8.60, $5.20; ESPINO GOLD, $3.30, $2.60; CANWYN, $3.60.

SATIN ROYCE took command in opening 20 yards, drew clear and held away thereafter under drive. ESPINO GOLD was hard ridden and had no excuses. CANWYN saved ground and weakened in closing stages. DARK PONY was taken up directly after break and made up some ground. CHILLEEVALLEE was off slowly and raced greenly.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:08. Off 3:11½. Winner, G. L. Borne's ch. g. (8), by Runantel—Star of Thule. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TELL IT, $12.60, $5.40, $3.80; SKYE LASSIE, $4.00, $3.00; PLAIN ACE, $5.80.

TELL IT, steadied along in early stages, came to serious contention on inside, saved ground entering stretch and won under drive. SKYE LASSIE, slow to begin, saved ground and came through between horses with rush in midstretch to be going gamely at end. PLAIN ACE, off forwardly, closed full of run. TODY WEST was used up racing with ESTHER O. and weakened. ESTHER O. came over on horses at first turn, gained brief lead and tired after forcing pace. BURSTING could not keep up.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36½. Off 3:43½. Winner, Mrs. M. Knierim's b. g. (6), by Blind Play—Chatterly. Trained by G. Ashby. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:20.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLIND TALK, $6.60, $4.00, $3.20; DUCHESS DEL, $5.20, $2.80; PASSBROOM, $4.60.

BLIND TALK, close up from start, rallied gamely when placed to drive to take command and was kept to drive to end. DUCHESS DEL, within striking distance from start, came willingly when shaken up, but wasn't good enough. PASSBROOM closed gamely. DOLLED UP, fractious at post and started outside gates, was sent to front under hustling tactics and weakened when caught. PROTEUS had early speed and stopped. The others were outrun.

Daily Double, Tell It and Blind Talk, Paid $35.00.

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:09½. Off 4:11. Winner, L. E. Crowell's ch. f. (4), by Happy Time—Green Stripe. Trained by W. J. Hughes. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:29.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREEN WATER, $13.40, $6.60, $4.00; CHESSIE, $5.20, $3.60; DUNSANY, $7.20.

GREEN WATER blocked on inside while making bold move along backstretch, was taken to outside for racing room and responded to pressure to win going away. CHESSIE set good pace and held on willingly, but could not resist the winner. DUNSANY was in thick of contention from start and closed gamely. LYCONNA went very wide at first turn, was in close quarters most of way and showed excellent effort. TROSTAR, close up in early stages, dropped back sharply while on outside on backstretch, and failed to rally. SHORTS had early speed, JUSTA JIMMIE raced along in worst going.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:35. Off 4:41. Winner, J. Bishop's ch. g. (3), by Rockman-Prairie Girl. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:28 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRAIRIE MAN, $20.60, $7.80, $4.00; ROYAL FOX, $3.80, $2.80; BEAUFAST, $2.80.

PRAIRIE MAN, slow to begin, worked way to contention on outside, rallied when shaken up and won going away. ROYAL FOX, fractious at post, was off in tangle, went to top on outside approaching backstretch, but could not stay and pulled up lame. BEAUFAST, allowed to settle into stride, moved up boldly and closed gamely. MONOLOGUE had speed in spots. CIRCUS LIGHTS took command early and stopped badly when caught.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:05. Off 5:07½. Winner, Mrs. W. Ashbridge's b. g. (5), by Sun Flag—Gay Way. Trained by W. Ashbridge. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:21 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY ROAD, $6.40, $3.20, $2.80; VENDOR'S LIEN, $4.40, $3.00; LADY'S FAVOR, $3.00.

HAPPY ROAD, not hurried in early stages, was sent to outside when ready, came around leaders with good energy and responded to good handling to win going away. VENDOR'S LIEN moved up boldly approaching backstretch, shook off LADY'S FAVOR, but could not resist winner. LADY'S FAVOR followed close to pace of WAUGH POP to get to front and closed gamely. She pulled up lame. WAUGH POP set good early pace and stopped. CLEVER GIRL could not reach contention. SUN BELLE stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:32½. Winner, Mrs. F. Dove's b. m. Lew Worsham Gets Private Pro Golf Post

Chevy Chase Assistant To Be Private Pro At Honesdale, Pa.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A position as private olf professional to Byron Miller, jr., wealthy Honesdale, Pa., sportsman, was virtually assured Lewis Worsham, jr., assistant professional at Chevy Chase, yesterday, and Worsham is expected to leave for his new post early next week.

The 21-year-old youngster, who has had many sensational rounds of golf here during the past three years, will act as teaching and playing pro to Miller, his wife, mother, and guests over the private nine-hole course on the Strongman estate.

Worsham's plans for the present also include making the entire winter tour with the country's top-notch golf pros, including the Florida, Texas and California tournaments. His new job will end around the first of October, enabling him to play in the first event.

Worsham has been working with Robert T. Barnett at Chevy Chase and Indian Creek, in Miami, Fla., for over three years. Previously he worked in proshops at Newport News and at Kenwood here. Barnett has sponsored him in several tournaments, and he has been a frequent money winner in the local proaffairs, and has had several creditable performances in National events.

Barnett was instrumental in landing the post for his assistant, who now will have more time to work on his game. Several of the "name" pros have been impressed with Worsham's plays while competing in the various tournaments. If it goes through, along with the tour prospects, it will be a wonderful break for him.

Worsham will live on the estate, that is located about 15 miles from Scranton. He has developed into a good clubmaker while working under Barnett and Billy Hardy, and also has had experience giving lessons. He won a proamateur tourney worth $600 last winter in Florida, and also scored a 68 in the '38 National Open, and like rounds in the Lancaster and Scranton events.

Nats Defeated In Night Game

slugged three runs across the plate with five hits. But then the A's took charge and in the last seven innings Caster pitched two-hit ball.

All the fun the Nats had tonight, they packed into the second inning. Cecil Travis commenced it with a single through the box, and Buddy Myer, looking at night pitching for the first time in his life, whacked a three-bagger against the rightfield wall, only inches shy of a home run. Rick Ferrell followed with a two-bagger high against the leftfield wall, and Joe Haynes singled to center.

By that time the Nats had three runs and only one was out. And when George Case banged a double against the leftfield wall to move Haynes to third, and Sammy West drew a walk to fill the bases, it looked like a highly satisfactory inning for the Nats. But Charley Gelbert struck out and Wright grounded out, and three Nats were left on bases.

That was Washington's last stand. They didn't get another hit until Wright singled with two out in the fifth, and they didn't get a hit after that off Caster until Myer singled with two out in the eighth. They were pretty futile.

Those three runs by the Nats in the second inning must have given the A's the tip, because they scored three runs in the same inning. With two out, and two on base, Miles drove in a pair of his pals with a cheap broken-bat double to left, but there was nothing tainted about Ambler's single to right which later scored Miles.

In the fourth inning, the A's went to the front, 4-3, thanks to a pair of singles by Nagel and Lodigiani, and Haynes' wild-pitch that scored Nagel from third. But in the fifth, they made away with the ball game conclusively.

They packed five runs into that inning. A wild throw by Charley Gelbert on Siebert's bunt inspired the uprising, and Johnson and Brucker followed with singles. Chapman drew a walk, Nagel hit a long sacrifice fly, and Lodigiani beat out an infield hit. At that point, with two runs across, and the bases full, Haynes was lifted in favor of Appleton.

Appleton completed the carnage. He struck out Caster but then he walked Miles to force in a run. And the fourth and fifth runs of the inning scored when Case was unable to hang on to Ambler's drive to left field in an attempt for a shoestring catch.

For a time it appeared as if the A's were out to make one run for each watt of power in the lighting system (1,354,000 watts), but somehow Appleton got 'em out and the score remained at 9-3.

Singh Loses To Jack Hader On Arena Mat

Fans Boo Referee After Victor Is Awarded Decision

Nanjo Singh, the unpopular Hindu wrestler, lost to Jack Hader after the former was disqualified for using illegible holds against his opponent outside the ring of Turner's Arena last night. The end came after 30 minutes of their scheduled 1½-hour match elapsed.

To the delight of the 1,400 fans, their favored Jack Hader took everything the Hindu had to offer, including his Cobra hold, which proved unsuccessful against the Kansan, and came back for more but finally yielded to the referee's decision when Singh refused to release the hold he had on him outside the ring.

Although Nanjo Singh was unable to successfully use his famous cobra hold against Hader, he did, however, make Walter Gray, a spectator who was offered $500 if he could release himself from the hold, give up his attempt to break the hold after the ambitious fan was thrown to the mat and nearly choked. He remained with the wrestler for about two minutes.

In the third match Bibber McCoy won over Jim Clinstock when the latter's foot caught in the rope and was unable to defend himself.

The fans disapproved of the verdict and refused to stop clapping and throwing things into the ring. This continued for several minutes and although it ceased temporarily when the semifinal bout went on it started up again when the next final bout proved too tame for the fans' approval. This ended up with Laverne Baxter throwing Hank Metheny in 23 minutes.

The opening event which brought together Pete Managoff and Tom Mahoney ended in a draw. Red Ryan pinned Angelo Leoni in 19½ minutes.

C. Mott Woolley, Polo Star, Dies

By International News Service.

New York, July 6.—C. Mott Woolley, brilliant 22-year-old captain of the championship Yale University polo team, died in Presbyterian Hospital today of a concussion of the brain suffered in a polo game at Westbury.

Young Woolley, son of Clarence M. Woolley, retired president of the American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation, never regained consciousness after a severe fall, which occurred yesterday when his pony tripped over that ridden by Winston Guest.

Both Guest and Woolley's mounts were traveling at high speed when the mix-up happened in the third chukker of a game between Broadhollow and East Williston, and after the tumble Woolley was dragged along the field for yards. Dr. Robert S. Millen, who was one of the spectators, made an examination on the field and ordered the injured player removed to North Country Community Hospital, at Glen Cove, Long Island. He was later taken to Presbyterian.

Woolley was born in New York in 1917, and attended Phillips Andover before going to Yale. He had been playing polo about five years and captained the Yale team which won the intercollegiate championship last month. After the accident, his father flew here from Santa Fe, N. Mex.

Lou Blue's Beats Indianhead, 9 to 1

Lou Blue's nine scored an outstanding victory at Arlington Youth Stadium last night when it defeated the powerful Indianhead, Md., club, 9 to 1.

Blue's routed Lefty Drinkard, pitcher, and followed up on two Indianhead's previously undefeated successors while Otis Printz was scattering nine hits and striking out 11.

Bill Ackerman's Column On Fishing

Bass waters, since the opening of the season on July 1, have been running so muddy that there is little use in even thinking about fishing them. The Shenandoah is like so much coffee, while the Monocacy is running from bank to bank with red mud. Both must clear considerably before the Potomac above Great Falls will be worth trying.

ACKERMAN

The Potomac above the dam at Harpers Ferry, usually clear enought to fish in spite of squalls and normal rains above, is also slightly muddy. With no further rains, it should be worth trying in four or five days.

Down the Virginia shore of the lower bay the hardheads are more numerous and larger than boatmen have seen them in many years, many of them weighing six pounds and more. The number of trout being caught is increasing almost daily, and the same is true of the big cobia.

Catches Have Fallen Off

In southern Maryland catches of the croakers have fallen off a little, which is to be expected at this time. Yet there are enough being taken for the most avid anglers. At Solomons daily catches are running up to 100 and more per boat, with some rock for those fishing for them. At Ridge, near Point Lookout, the catches of hardheads continue to hold up, but that is true also of Kenwood, Breezy Point and North Beach, these boats fishing the middle ground in the mouth of the Choptank River, commonly called the "Gooses."

For striped bass, the oyster beds off Tall Timbers are producing fairly consistent catches. Capt. Rogers, at Piney Point, has reported more than a few weighing better than the maximum weight limit of 15 pounds.

The best of this fishing is still in Eastern Bay, and that was not so good during the past week as it has been. A few of the boats are taking them late in the evening on trolled "Bugeye Feathalures," but the real sport is in those catches made by chumming with green shrimp. With the price of this shrimp chum fairly stable at $2 a gallon, it is not as expensive as it has been. Remember that a half dozen or more anglers can fish the same "chum line" just as well as two or three.

Tuna Now Running

Some reports persist as to the run of channel bass along the beaches. We haven't a single one on which we would care to make a recommendation. The run at Fox Hill Levels stopped off short with the roiled water, and there is little hope of its starting again until several days of settled weather.

For large catches of bottom fish—seabass, porgies, trout and hardheads—go anywhere along the coast from Jersey on down, although now the most consideration is being given the large top-striking game fish. School tuna, running from 60 to 80 pounds, are being caught off Brielle and Beach Haven, N. J., and the blue marlin are off the North Carolina coast.

Hugo Rutherford, who pioneered this fishing last year, is back at it again with his new sportfisherman Mako Bark. Her maiden voyage met with a success that would satisfy any marlin man, for Marshall Dana, of Cincinnati, a guest, caught a blue marlin weighing 593 pounds. It was 13 feet 2 inches in length, had a girth of 62 inches and a tailspread of 52. This great fish was taken in the Gulf Stream only 17 miles off Hatteras Inlet. A local boatman, Capt. Lloyd Styron, was guide, and is available, along with several others, for any of the many local anglers planning vacations in this area.

Top Marlin Port

Our hopes, however, and we have the idea that the same is true for many others, are in the white marlin fishing off Ocean City; possibly this year we can all make the grade, for theyare there, in fact, have been for several weeks, and in numbers comparable to the season of 1938, when this summer resort became top marlin port of the whole world, with a catch of 910 in 73 days—no time out for bad weather.

The count already is around a half hundred, and it was not until today a year ago that the record run got under way, so it would surprise us but little to see a total caught this year that would be hard to beat.

Many anglers are holding off, some with the idea that more fish are caught in mid-July and August, and others because that is the only time they are free. For the latter there is but little choice, but for those who can go when they will, there will never be a better time than right now. And don't forget, anglers from every section of the East are following this great fishing that is almost in their front yards, and reservations are necessary, for week-ends, particularly, a week or more ahead. We know of many making them through Milton Gordon, at the Atlas Sport, for August.

$10 Deposit

Regardless of where you make them, the usual procedure is a deposit of $10, which in the event of bad weather will be returned or apply on another date, but which in the meantime holds the boat for that date. Telegraphed, you have a receipt and acceptance of record.

Washington anglers are following this fishing not as much as we think they should, but still in good proportion to those from other places.

On the Fourth, C. P. Given and Dr. W. B. Burch fished with Capt. Jim Whaley on his Em-Priss II. The latter hooked, fought and landed a nice fish in the usual orthodox manner, but when Given got one on he had the ill-luck to have his reel freeze with more than 200 yards of line out.

Capt. Whaley, who was watching him closely, noticed the mishap and quickly cut and transferred the line to another rod and reel, but without reckoning on the amount of line out, for the second reel was soon full and the fish still a hundred yards or more from the boat. From then on it was handline or lose the fish, and that is just what Given wasn't in the mood to do. For more than 40 minutes he hauled and held, as well as possible, the hottest fishline he had ever touched in his life; but he landed the marlin and said the joy of the battle was well worth his cut and burned hands.

Weighed 55 Lbs.

L. K. Dorman, of Chevy Chase, and Arthur Meyers, of Silver Spring, Md., fished the same day with Capt. Crawford Savage on the Hilda II and each landed his marlin. Harry Wheeler, fishing with Capt. Talbut Bunting, landed one, but his companion, R. B. Scarf, wasn't so lucky. Wheeler's fish weighed 55 pounds and took 20 minutes to boat.

Senator Wilmer Steele, on his Lure, had the good luck not only to land a fish himself, but to see each one of his three guests do likewise. Fred T. Rooks, president of U. S. Oil Co. of Providence, landed a fine marlin from his 75-foot Chocataw, which will lie at Trimper's for much of the summer.

Guest aboard Paul Townsend's Jacpau was Maj. Ralph Scott, of Los Angeles, captain of the champion Gilmore Red Lions of the skeet world, who landed a 78-pound marlin in 33 minutes. Jack Townsend's 65-pounder required 30 minutes to boat. A third was taken later, but we don't have the record of who caught it.

On Wednesday, Capt. Crawford Savage took two marlin that more than merit mention. One weighed but 38 pounds, while the other, caught by Carl Weber, of Philadelphia, weighed 105½ pounds. Capt. Chester Gray, on the Hilda, caught one weighing 103½. Both of these fish were larger than all of the 910 caught last year with the single exception of the one taking top honors and weighing 118 pounds.

Another Washington angler making the grade is Campbell A. Brown, who just received a gold button for an 8-foot 1 inch sailfish caught fishing out of Palm Beach with Capt. George Sheaf on his Tomahawk. And just in case you don't know it, gold-button sails are few and far between. The average is about one in every hundred caught.

Bud Wilson, inventor of the "Farcast" Ocean City reel, will be on hand during the casting tournament of the National Capital Casting Club on July 15 and 16 at the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool to give several exhibitions of this new departure in reel manufacture that is a real boon to the angler who can't or will not practice enough to get past the "birdsnest" stage. It is possible to cast with this reel without thumbing, or for that matter, even touching the reel.

Robert Donat Achieves Triumph as Mr. Chips

'Goodbye, Mr. Chips' Is Exceptional Picture; Greer Garson Also Stars in Palace Film; Brief Notes on Local Amusements

"GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the story by James Hilton, adapted to the screen by R. C. Sheriff, Claude West and Eric Maschwitz, starring Robert Donat, with Greer Garson, Terry Kilburn, John Mills, Paul Van Hernried, Judith Furse, Lyn Harding, Milton Rosmer, Frederick Liester, Louise Hampton, Austin Trevor, David Tree, Edmund Breon, Jill Furse and Scott Sunderland. Directed in England by Sam Wood. Previewed Saturday night, July 1. At Loew's Palace Theater.

WHILE THIS widely discussed and much publicized subject conforms to few of America's specifications of what should constitute a successful motion picture, it will be recognized by Washington's discriminating theatergoers, as it has been in every other city where it has been shown, as one of the cinema's finest achievements.

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips" is not an "action picture" in the usual sense, but a delicately wrought, sensitive and intensely realistic study of a segment of British life that is little known in this country. It is the story of the life's work of an instructor who devoted the full span of his graduate days to the ideals of Brookfield College, an institution of learning dating back to the fifteenth century and priding itself on its record for building character into English youth. We meet the central character first at the age of 83, after 63 years of service to Brookfield. The action then reverts to his first day as a teacher, at the age of 20, and traces the vicissitudes of his life from that point to the incident with which the picture opens.

BELL

Young Mr. Chips, at first, seems not the ideal choice for his post. His pupils get a little the better of him at their first class session and their master thereupon becomes a too strict disciplinarian. The boys just don't like him. As time goes on, by reason of this too rigid adherence to the code, Mr. Chips sees his fellows promoted over his head and undergoes other humiliations he cannot quite understand. He is a very lonely man.

Then comes the vacation tramping tour through Austria with one of his associate teachers and the meeting with Katherine Ellis, when Mr. Chips attempts a hazardous and totally unnecessary "rescue" of a young woman who is a better mountain climber than he, but whom he deems to be in danger. For the first time in his life, the shy and diffident Mr. Chips encounters an understanding spirit from whom he derives great inspiration and an outlook upon the world he had never had before. They are married and return to the school together. It is here that the new Mrs. Chips guides her husband into an immense and almost immediate popularity. Then their idyllic romance is brought to a tragic end and Mr. Chips carries on alone, exercising those qualities of kindliness, humor and camaraderie his wife had so gently and sympathetically taught him.

Finally Achieves Ambition

Retired as an honored emeritus of Brookfield, Mr. Chips is recalled to act as headmaster of the school when the Great War breaks out and all of the able-modied instructors of fighting age have been called to the colors. It is the realization of his life's ambition. Then the end and the simple final line of the play, spoken by Master Terry Kilburn, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

The drama's entire pith and substance and its greatest measure of forcefulness are bound up in the character of Mr. Chips, played with consummate artistry and complete conviction by Robert Donat. Mr. Donat portrays each period of his increasing maturity and old age with a remarkably realistic assumption of all of the attributes as well as the physical appearance of a man of the given age. His characterization is one of the most completely rounded and most perfectly executed ever seen on any screen. Stern, repentant, whimsical, slyly humorous, romantic, crushed and triumphant, by turns, Mr. Chips, in the hands of Mr. Donat, becomes as real a person as a member of one's own family.

Greer Garson Scores

In the much more circumscribed role of Katherine, Greer Garson, a new face to American audiences, matches the skill of Mr. Donat's work in the romantic passages of the play, lending them a graciousness and charm that could not but have won Brookfield completely over. Her personal triumph is as notable, say, as that of Wendy Hiller in "Pygmalion," although the two roles have nothing in common but the excellence of their performance.

The supporting cast, excellent in every department, contains few names that will greet American picturegoers as old friends. Terry Kilburn, as several youthful generations of the Colley family who attend Brookfield, is foremost among the hordes of adolescents who people the picture. Paul von Hernried, Lyn Harding, Louise Hampton and Milton Rosmer are among those of greatest prominence in the company that is always subordinated to Robert Donat's superb impersonation of the title role.

Foremost among the supplementary attractions on the new bill at the Palace is a short-reel subject bearing the title of "Yankee Doodle Goes to Town," dedicated to the spirit of America and its ability to survive any crisis. On the lighter side is Pete Smith's "Culinary Carving," a topic with which he has a deal of fun, as usual. The "News of the Day" is the final auxiliary of a feature, which, with its star, seems destined for Academy awards.

"Juarez," the Warner Brothers' historical drama of Mexico's fight for freedom, with Paul Muni, Bette Davis and Brian Aherne in the principal roles, will be held over for a second week of its repeat engagement at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning today. This will mark "Juarez" fourth downtown week. "The Kid From Kokomo," originally announced for today, will open its engagement at the Met. next Friday.

Speaking of holdovers, the official picture of the Joe Louis-Tony Galento fight will be continued at the State Theater, Bethesda, Md., through Sunday, July 9. They are shown in addition to the regular bill of feature and short subjects.

I cover the waterfront.

Red Nichols and His Pennies will stop off in Washington long enough on Saturday to play for two moonlight cruises aboard the S. S. Potomac. The first will leave the wharf at 8:45 p. m.; the second, at 12:30 a. m.

Having broken all records for river passenger traffic on Monday, July 3, the Wilson Line's S. S. City of Washington announces as its next major attraction the "Miss Washington" contest to select an entrant in the "Miss America" contest held in Atlantic City in September. The "finals" will be held aboard ship the night of Friday, July 14, with the drama desks of the local press among the judges.

Oh-Major-Brown Note

Is Shy Mr. Chips' Inspiration

GREER GARSON,
the gifted young actress, new to American audiences, who appears opposite Robert Donat in the romantic sequences of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the James Hilton story opened on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater yesterday

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 6.

TROUBLE: Seymour Weiss, the Louisiana political leader who was associated with Huey Long, visited the Hotel New Yorker last week. A reporter approached his table, and asked Weiss for some comments regarding the elevation of Huey's brother to the Governorship, the flight of Dr. James Monroe Smith, president of Louisiana State University, the Liquiry about Gov. Leche and the WPA, etc. . . . Weiss, who had been quite gay, seemed suddenly pained. "Ask me about those things tomorrow morning," he pleaded. "I'm going to have a headache then anyway."

VOW: Marshall Neilan, the veteran Hollywood director who was arrested last week for issuing worthless checks in cafes, was the only person who ever induced the late Wilson Mizner to refrain from drinking . . . Mizner had promised to go on the wagon, but Neilan insisted upon exacting an oath . . . "Swear you'll stop drinking," the director said, "and take an oath on my mother's life" . . . Mizner took that oath . . . Fourth weeks later Neilan saw Mizner fondling a bottle of Napoleon brandy . . . "You took an oath, on my mother's life," Neilan berated. "And I always thought you were fond of my mother." . . . "I'm more fond of her now than ever," Mizner explained. "She gave me this bottle."

ENTERPRISE: Lee Bristol, vice president of Bristol-Myers Co., broadcast recently on the Fred Allen program . . . Mr. Bristol's voice sounds like Warden Lawes', and his appearance is not unlike that of the Warden of Sing Sing . . . Al Rosen, who is producing "David From Goliath"—a story based upon the career of Alabama Pitts, the Sing Sing athlete—submitted an offer for Bristol to portray the Warden role in that movie . . . Mr. Bristol has accepted.

DEFEAT: For the last 15 years Jack Dempsey has owned two pieces of property which he has been anxious to sell . . . The first is a ranch in Nevada. Dempsey finally sold that a short time ago—and two months later the new owner struck oil there . . . The second piece of property is a hotel in California. After long negotiations, Dempsey finally located a purchaser. He was to go to California to close the deal last week—the day before he was stricken.

CELEBRATION: Peggy Joyce was at the Stork Club the other night celebrating Independence Day . . . In honor of the occasion Peggy wore a unique and costly decoration—an American flag made of diamonds, rubies and sapphires . . . It was made for her by Cartier's—in Berlin.

PROGRESS: Joe Frisco went to the Brown Derby in Hollywood and exhibited a batch of pamphlets concerning television . . . "Why the sudden interest in television?" he was asked . . . "Well, I've been a layoff in vaudeville, movies and radio," Frisco explained, "and now I want to go the whole hog."

CHANCE: Chico Marx, who is an inveterate bridge player, was disheartened at the playing of his bridge partner, Charles Lederer . . . "Charlie," Chico finally stated, "you play bridge as though a Chinese parrot were on your shoulder—picking out your cards."

CHARM: Marc Connelly explained movie technique to a group of his friends—who asked him to describe just what was meant by "the Lubitsch touch" . . . "Here's what it is," Connelly replied. "An ordinary director would have his tough leading man tell the leading lady: 'Aw, nuts—gahdamit' . . . Lubitsch—ahh, Lubitsch would have him say: 'Aw, nuts, gahdamit—Madame.'"

REVENGE: Charles Laughton is very much disturbed at the editors of Time magazine, who, in referring to his personal traits, were not very much impressed by his manliness . . . Laughton took one of his guests into an upper room of his house—a room equipped with a sandbag, bicycle and weights . . . "I'm practicing," the star insisted. "I'll show those editors when I face them" . . . "You're practicing what?" the puzzled guest asked . . . Laughton struck his captain pose . . . "I," he shouted, "am practicing—boxing."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 6 (1935).—Thirty-five years ago, "Man of the Hour" was a smash Broadway play. I don't expect many of my readers to remember the play, but even the younger generation has heard of the author, George Broadhurst, who, in his day, was one of the most successful playwrights, having written such hits as "Bought and Paid For," "Rich Man, Poor Man," "What Happened to Jones?" "Innocent" and countless others. In fact, Broadhurst is still writing, although not as prolifically as he did in his younger days.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The play just bought by Warner Brothers, interestingly enough, fits into modern affairs nicely, for it deals with a young man who runs for mayor, beats the corrupt machine and then falls in love with the opposing candidate's daughter. Edward G. Robinson, who goes to Europe on a holiday before he does anything else, will play the "man of the hour," while Brenda Marshall, new on the Warner lot, has been chosen to play the daughter. "The Gusher," of course, comes first for Eddie.

Is M.-G.-M. gradually breaking up the Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy team, with Ilona Massey stepping in as Nelson's co-star? I couldn't help wondering about this when I heard the news that the blond Ilona, who is rating raves in "Balalaika," may get the equally blond Nelson in her next, which is to be "The Vagabond King." Yes, this is the famous operetta for which M.-G.-M. planked out $25,000 to Para. Miss Massey's career has been one of the strangest on record. Almost forgotten after her first picture, told to diet and get her "figger" down, she's suddenly become the fair-haired child, getting plenty of attention from the Culver City biggies.

Too many pictures for any actress, Darryl Zanuck very wisely believes, is as fatal as too few. That's why Nancy Kelly today was taken out of the cast of "Here I Am a Stranger," opposite Richard Greene. Nancy has two pictures, ready and waiting for the public, "Frontier Marshal" and "Stanley and Livingstone," so Brenda Joyce, the U. C. L. A. co-ed who won the coveted role of Fern in "The Rains Came," will do her next screen love-making with Greene in the much postponed "Here I Am a Stranger." P. S. —Postponed because of Dick's recent accident.

Chatter in Hollywood: Do you remember when I told you, at least six weeks ago, that Cary Grant was so lonesome for Phyllis Brooks, he would join her in England and they will be married there? Well, it will all come true, just as I prophesied. A letter came today, saying that within the next few days Phyllis will become Mrs. Cary Grant and that the ceremony will be performed in Cary's home town where, as Archie Leach, he started on the road to fame. Funny how much Phyllis looks like the first Mrs. Grant, Virginia Cherrill, now the Countess of Jersey.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Conrad Nagel's latest heart-beat is Clare Olmstead. They were a devoted twosome the other eve at the Brown Derby; Fieldsy and Walter Lang (he is Shirley Temple's director and she was formerly Carole Lombard's secretary and manager), expect their baby in 10 days; Carole and Clark Gable left for a motor trip up North, early this morning, but will telephone every day for progress on the expected arrival; Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon feted by William Haines, with a dinner party at which Bill really went to town. The pink and white flowers on the table were effectively arranged in garlands. Constance Talmadge, who leaves Tuesday for home, said au revoir to her many friends. She came with Lloyd Pantages and they talked much about the San Francisco Fair.

Sally Eilers rushed in from the studio and only remained long enough for dinner. Norma Talmadge, as slim as any débutante, wore smart, black velvet pajamas, the admiration of all the girls; Joan Blondell and Dick Powell, Millicent Jaeckel and her nephew, Tracy Jaeckel, of New York, were among the other 15 or 20 guests; Joan Bennett, who is continuing to play the field, out stepping last night with Lee Bowman; Tom Neal, who is getting favorable attention in "They All Come Out," was driving a truck not so long ago; Henry Travers, signed today to play Candy in "Of Mice and Men," is a selection that even John Steinbeck will approve; Wesley Ruggles is being kidded about Lady Furness, Mrs. Vanderbilt's twin sister. He saw much of her in Europe, even though he won't admit Winchell's story on his engagement. Lots of stories come true, however, that are denied.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Joan's Niece in Dancing Debut

Little Joan LeSueur, tiny niece of Joan Crawford, has taken her first step toward following in the footsteps of her famous aunt. She made her initial "professional appearance" at the annual recital given by her dancing school in North Hollywood. She performed a combination tap and acrobatic dance and wore an authentic Dutch costume.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

(For another day off, my pal, Bob Montgomery, has done me one—I mean, done me in—he's sometimes called our bad boy, but always good company.)

By Bob Montgomery.

Hedda, you asked for it! And you shall have it. Your request came at a propitious moment. Propitious, because it always seemed desirable to take a long trip after composing a column. [Editor's note: Mr. Montgomery's just left for England.] Then you can return cheerfully in six months when all is forgotten and forgiven.

Possibly you've felt the same way about it. I have in mind certain predictions, which my present editorial capacity forces me reluctantly to comment upon. (Editor's note: Oh, yeah!) The one, and positive, too, that Alexander Korda and Merle Oberon would never amalgamate romantically. What a blow to read later that the two were wed on the Riviera. Also your hope that "Marie Antoinette" wouldn't bankrupt Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as it did a nation.

The exclusive scoop that Edgar Bergen was to produce his own pictures, only to have Charlie McCarthy talk him out of it.

But credit where credit is due. We doff the topper to Hopper—alliteration accidental—for not patting herself on the back, at least not too obviously, when a hazardous prophesy comes true. Such gossipy gambles will, according to the law of averages, and nobody cares very much, except the columnist's ego, make dullest of dull reading. [Editor's note: Thank you, Bob.]

Now for a bit on the news and confession side. Just ran into Bob Montgomery, who couldn't escape me. I saw him first. He's off for Jolly Old England in a week, you know—as I announced exclusively a year ago—to star in "Busman's Honeymoon" and "The Earl of Chicago," and simply thrilled to pieces about it. I spied him while he was buying a divine trunk, all leather and studded with big brass nails. He insisted that I dash around with him in his swanky English car, while he did a few last-minute errands. Poor boy, he did look a little peaked.

He told me, quite confidentially, that he dotes on travel. Who doesn't? The English were darling to him the last time he was over, absolutely wonderful. He's looking forward to that part of it. But would you believe it, walking on a sound stage at Denham positively terrifies him. After 10 years in Hollywood, with all the friendly faces, where it's "Hi, Bob," and "Greetings Gates," it will be so different in England. Just one big happy family we are in Hollywood. While Denham will be so strange and tea and crumpety like. An awful ordeal, really. (Editor's note: This isn't cricket!)

This isn't fair to a guest columnist. Hedda has limited me to 800 words. Why, she'd used thousands on this one topic alone—without getting anywhere.

But seriously, nothing that can't be remedied. Good pictures. And how we need them! How to get them? Better stories. Let's not kid ourselves. No actor can rise above the material he has to work with. The sculptor can't create a lasting monument from sand. It takes marble. (Editor's note: You said it. Marble, say you? The kind we have in our gizzards?)

Trust Company Declares $2 Dividend

Washington Loan Payment Is Payable August 1

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A quarterly dividend of $2 a share on its capital stock was declared by directors of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. at the regular monthly meeting of the board yesterday. President Harry G. Meem stated that the dividend would be payable on August 1, to stockholders of record July 22, and that books would be closed to transfers of stock on July 24, until after the end of the month.

Harry R. Smith Heads A. I. B.

Harry R. Smith, recently elected president of the American Institute of Banking, is a personal friend of numerous members of Washington Chapter of the institute. Although born in Philadelphia, he is now a resident of San Francisco, where he is assistant vice president of the Bank of America, N. T. & S. A.

His initial banking experience came in 1918 as a messenger in a New York bank. He went to Denver, to Los Angeles, and then to San Francisco. He holds a standard certificate from the American Institute of Banking, and is a past president of the San Francisco chapter.

At the institute's national convention in Washington in 1934 he was elected a member of the executive council, and was named vice president at the Louisville convention last year. In 1937 he received a diploma from the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University, and his latest honor was received at the Grand Rapids convention.

"Banking" Polls Bankers

Banking, official publication of the American Bankers' Association, in its July review, states that its index of the general trend of business, obtained from a poll of 3,000 bank directors and bank presidents in all sections of the country, compared with the previous month, reflects an even trend. Thirty-six per cent of those polled said business was improving; 42 per cent stated conditions were the same, and 22 per cent found a decline. The previous month had found 35 per cent reporting an upward trend, 35 per cent found conditions static and 30 per cent had reported an unfavorable trend.

Banking reported that "the movement toward lower interest rates paid by banks on time deposits is rapidly turning into a general downward trend." It found a widespread shifting toward lower interest rates throughout the country, but the downward trend was not so marked in the West and South, "where the pressure of unemployed funds is less urgent."

Senator Harrison to Speak

Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, will talk on Federal fiscal policies at the annual convention of the American Bankers Association at Seattle, September 25-28, President Philip A. Benson, of the association, announces. Other speakers will include Dr. Bruce R. Baxter, president of Willamette University, Salem, Oreg., who will speak on "Courage for Tomorrow;" H. Donald Campbell, president, Chase National Bank, New York, who will discuss "The Future of the Metropolitan Bank," and E. L. Pearce, executive vice president, Union National Bank, Marquette, Mich., whose subject is "The Future of the Country Bank."

Banking Notes

Vice President Edward L. Hillyer, of Union Trust Co., and a former president of Washington Stock Exchange, was a recent visitor at the New York World's Fair.

Vice President Howard Moran, of American Security & Trust Co., has concluded his annual vacation.

Irving Zirpel, secretary of Union Trust Co., is passing a month's vacation at Tall Timbers, Md.

Assistant Vice President F. G. Burrough, of Riggs National Bank, and J. Byron Brooks, an assistant cashier of that institution, are taking their annual vacations.

Associated Gas Output

New York, July 6.—For the week ended July 30, Associated Gas & Eleceric System reports net electric output of 93,500,631 units. This is an increase of 11,084,610 units or 13.4 per cent above production of 82,416,021 units for a year ago. Gross output, including sales to other utilities, amounted to 104,488,513 units for the current week.

Lack of NewsHolds Cotton Futures in Narrow Range

New York, July 6 (AP).—Cotton brokers eyed Washington and Europe for fresh news today and in the meantime kept commitments in the futures market to a minimum. The closing range was 2 points up to 2 lower.

Scarcity of contracts was again a highlight of operations. But hedging seemed lighter than in previous sessions and there was less liquidation from the South. The Government's weekly weather summary, about as expected by traders, was a standoff as far as influencing the market was concerned.

Chase National Sets Deposit Total High

New York, July 6 (AP).—Chase National Bank today reported deposits as of June 30 totaled $2,696,486,000, the highest in the bank's history, compared with $2,152,228,000 on June 30, 1938. Total resources June 30 were $2,983,435,000, also a new high, against $2,888,271,000 three months earlier and $2,449,267,000 a year ago.

National City Bank of New York

The National City Bank of New York reported in its statement of conditions as of June 30 the highest total resources and deposits in its history. Total resources were $2,232,773,791, up from $2,138,607,494 at the end of the first quarter.

Brokers' Loans Drop $1,000,000 for Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $495,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $1,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $537,000,000.

Excess Funds Rise $50,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Idle money in Federal Reserve banks increased $50,000,000 in the week ended July 5.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that these excess reserves totaled $4,290,000,000 on that date.

Wheat Prices Decline After Early Advance

Reports of Poor Weather Fails to Attract Buyers

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 6.—Wheat prices rose almost a cent a bushel during the first hour of trading today but then backed down, losing all the gains and at times dipping slightly below yesterday's close. Except for early concentrated buying credited to milling interests and some speculators, the market was a routine affair.

Reports of hot weather in the spring wheat belt and of rust in Manitoba Province attracted attention but led to little fresh buying. The forecast was for cooler and unsettled weather while a ¼-½ cent lower close at Liverpool and lagging export trade resulted in some profit taking. Wheat closed unchanged to ¼ lower compared with yesterday's finish, July 68¾-68⅝, September 70-69⅞.

Nearby corn delivery contracts derived some strength from prospects of continuation of the country holding policy but other grains were unsettled. Corn closed unchanged to ⅜ higher, July 47⅝, September 49¼-49⅛, while oats prices were ¼ off to ¼ up, rye ⅜-¾ lower and lard unchanged to 3 higher.

Champion Paper Co. Plan Plant Expansion

Hamilton, Ohio, July 6 (AP).—The Champion Paper and Fibre Co. announced today plans for a $3,000,000 addition to its mill in Houston, Tex., and a stock increase of which Time, Inc., magazine publishers would purchase $1,000,000, if approved.

A letter to stockholders also indicated the firm was considering retirement of $10,007,000 in outstanding 4¾ per cent debentures through loans and sale of first mortgage bonds, including bonds to "certain insurance companies." Stockholders were asked to approve an increase from 85,000 to 115,000 shares in cumulative preferred stock, and will meet August 8 to consider the proposal.

F. W. Woolworth June Net 6.5% Over Year Ago

New York, July 6 (AP).—F. W. Woolworth Co. today reported June sales of $24,662,006, a gain of 6.5 per cent over $23,149,128 in June, 1938. Turnover in the first half of the year of $138,749,343 was 4.2 per cent ahead of $133,055,591 in the comparable period last year.

McCrory Stores Corporation

June sales of McCrory Stores Corporation, operators of a national chain of variety outlets, totaled $3,420,347, or 6.8 per cent more than the $3,200,343 in June a year ago. Sales for the first six 1939 months represented a gain of 6.2 per cent over the similar 1938 stretch.

June Cotton Trading Totals 3,290,150 Bales

By the Associated Press.

The Commodity Exchange Administration reported yesterday June trading in futures contracts on the Nation's three organized cotton exchanges totaled 3,290,150 bales of cotton. This figure compared with 3,357,750 bales traded during May and 4,694,950 during June, 1938.

A total of 2,851,600 bales was traded on the New York Exchange, 436,850 on the New Orleans Exchange, and 1,700 on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Metal Shares Featured as Senate Extends Silver Purchasing Policy; Bond Trading Active and Higher

New York, July 6.—Restoration to President Roosevelt of his emergency monetary powers, including extension of both domestic and foreign silver purchases by the Treasury, provided the motive behind a brisk flurry in the metal shares today. For a time the whole list seemed on the way to another good-sized advance but quotations slipped late in the day with only silver and copper shares holding gains.

The close was ragged, and while the composite for the 100 stocks showed a rise of 0.13 point, this was due to the 1.58-point bulge in seven leaders of the metal group.

Elsewhere there was lack of interest and feature in both security and commodity dealings. Bonds jogged along a gently rising line with United States Treasuries, making substantial gains. In foreign exchange transactions the local rates were unchanged, but pressure against sterling and French francs necessitated support abroad. Cotton and wheat finished virtually unchanged from the previous day.

Attitude Is Calm On the Street

The distinctly calmer attitude of Wall Street with respect to the latest of the war scares was remarked in brokers' letters. It is pointed out that in the crises of September, 1938, and in January and March this year, selling at times developed from scared holders. While markets were weak some days ago when the European and Far Eastern pictures were most gloomy, there was no dumping of stocks. Trading, as in June, continues to be almost wholly professional, and profit-taking probably accounted for the downturn late today.

Silver Shares Hold Interest

Interest in the silver shares was disclosed through execution of overnight orders at the start of share trading. Sunshine Mining, estimated to benefit more than any other American company from the increase to 71.11 cents an ounce from 64.64 cents in the Treasury's buying price, came out at 11⅛, up ¾ point on 3,000 shares. It was the second most active stock, closing at 11½ for a net gain of 1⅛. Phelps Dodge, Anaconda, Howe Sound, American Metal and others on the big board all came in for a good deal of attention although some failed to hold their advances.

On the curb, Consolidated Mining, Hecla, Bunker Hill and Sullivan and others benefited. Foreign silvers, principally Canadian, made the sharpest advances. The United States has been buying silver from our northern neighbor at the rate of about 1,200,000 ounces a month. In Mexico there was something akin to jubilation as arrangements were made to reopen mines closed when it appeared the United States silver purchases had ended.

Copper Aids Mining Stocks

The mining shares, of course, were aided by developments in the copper as well as silver markets, accounting for the sharply higher range of companies specializing in output of the red metal. Domestic purchases of copper Wednesday were the largest for any day since July 1, 1938. Added to previous takings, this constitutes a major buying move. As usual in such periods, there were rumors of a possible advance in the domestic copper price. Supporting this possibility were improved quotations for export and ⅛ cent lift in scrap copper.

Many of the pivotals, including Chrysler, du Pont, General Electric and United States Rubber ended precisely where they started. Motors may have hung back because of the spreading trouble in General Motors tool and die plants—another case where an intra-union squabble is making it uncomfortable for the innocent bystanders, who, in this case, are the companies and the public.

Business news again was on the favorable side. Power production reached a peak since the Christmas week of 1938 and the year-to-year gain was the largest since mid-1937. Production of steel ingots in June, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute, brought tonnage for the first half to a level of 73 per cent higher than for the like 1938 period. Engineering construction, while lower for the week, was 20 per cent up in the first half from the January to June period last year.

Oils were dull and narrow. Aside from the high levels of production, of both crude and refined products, the industry is skeptical about legislative and administrative developments at Washington. One little advertised point is the proposal to consolidate five Federal agencies dealing with oil matters into a single one which would be directed by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Treasury Issues Advance

Listed bond trading remained dull today, with the trend toward slightly higher levels. United States Treasury issues continued their recovery and most domestic corporation bonds also were higher. The gains ranged to 3 points, and only a few minus signs were in evidence. Foreign dollar obligations were quiet and irregular. Turnover in all bonds was $5,070,000, which is far under normal.

Intermediate-dated Treasury bonds were inactive and motionless, but the long-dated bonds moved ahead readily on small buying orders. With their midyear statements out of the way, institutions plainly were resuming operations and gains to 17-32 point appeared. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were a little better. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds tended to improve by small fractions.

Traction Bonds Active

Local traction bonds were fairly active in the speculative section, with gains of 1 to 3 points registered in the Interborough and Manhattan Railway issues. Medium-priced carrier bonds were marked higher, but an uncertain tone prevailed in borderline and default bonds. Holding company and convertible bonds improved, along with their related equities. Changes in the special groups were mostly toward higher levels.

Building Awards Reach Record Nine-Year High

New York, July 6 (AP).—Major engineering construction awards for the first half of 1939 totaled $1,557,224,000, highest first half volume since 1930, and 24 per cent above last year's period, Engineering News-Record reported today. For the short week due to the Fourth of July holiday, awards totaled $37,549,000, or 52 per cent below the volume for the corresponding week last year.

The current week's total brought the volume for the first 27 weeks of 1935 to $1,594,773,000 an increase of 20 per cent over the total of $1,333,253,000 for the same period in 1938.

For the six months period public construction total of $1,173,076,000 was the highest on record, and 53 per cent higher than last year. Private construction for the first half totaled $384,148,000, a decrease of 21 per cent from 1938. Waterworks, sewerage, bridges, streets and roads, and public building all reached new highs during the first six months.

Holiday Sends Bank Clearings Under Year Ago

Total for 22 Cities Is Only 0.5% Under 1938 Week

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 6.—The Fourth of July holiday, plus Saturday bank closings in some cities, made for an irregular showing in bank clearings throughout the country this week. Total transactions were somewhat above those of the preceding week but declined slightly from the corresponding 1938 week.

Bank clearings for 22 leading cities for the holiday week ending July 5, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, amounted to $5,060,748,000, as compared with $5,087,520,000 for the similar five-day week last year, or a drop of 0.5 per cent.

Clearings for the latest period rose $253,941,000 above the total for the week previous. Between the two like weeks of 1938, the increase amounted to $350,816,000.

The turnover at New York, $3,207,658,000 for four days, showed a drop of 2.5 per cent from the $3,289,607,000 for the five days last year, marking the fifth successive year-to-year decline. The aggregate for the 21 cities outside of New York was $1,853,090,000, against $1,797,913,000 for the same 1938 week, giving an increase of 3.0 per cent.

Washington Clearings

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $24,390,027.32 for the week ended Wednesday which compares with $23,586,659.44 for the corresponding week a year ago, an increase of $803,367.88. Compared with a total of $24,268,843.98 for the previous week clearings increased $121,183.34.

Daily Oil Output 13.2% Over Last Year

New York, July 6 (AP).—Daily crude oil production in the United States during the week ended July 1, reported today by the American Petroleum Institute, averaged 3,468,000 barrels, up three-tenths of one per cent from the previous week and 13.2 per cent above the corresponding week a year ago.

Most producing areas showed small increases, led by Illinois, up 11,350 barrels; Wyoming, up 5,650, and Texas, up 3,300. Largest declines were California, down 12,600 barrels, and Oklahoma, down 6,800. Imports of crude and refined oils at principal ports dropped to 1,188,000 barrels for the week from 1,504,000 a week ago.

E. G. Budd Announces $6,000,000 RFC Loan

Philadelphia, July 6 (AP).—The E. G. Budd Manufacturing Co. announced today it has obtained a $6,000,000 five-year loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $2,300,000 for liquidating loans and the remainder as additional working capital.

The RFC has sold 50 per cent participation in the loan to the Philadelphia Federal Reserve and four other banks in Philadelphia.

Business Index Dips Slightly in Past Week

New York, July 6 (AP).—Time magazine's index of business conditions declined fractionally last week to 93.3, down from 93.4 the previous week, and exactly the same as a year ago.

Because Federal Reserve Board reports were delayed by the holiday, the latest figure is based on estimates from partial reports, and is subject to later revision.

July 4th Fireworks Cost $4,250,000

Chicago, July 6.—Fourth of July celebrants this year spent $4,250,000 for firecrackers, skyrockets and other pyrotechnic peace disturbers, according to the National Consumers Tax Commission.

But they paid tribute amounting to $1,416,666 to the tax collector in the form of hidden taxes, the women's tax education group says.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

NICE GOING, PEGGY! If Singer Peggy Townsend, of the Roger Smith Roof Garden, so chooses, she may appar at the Earle Theater soon in conjunction with movie star Bruce Cabot. When Bruce blew into town the other eve he went right up to the R. S. roof and asked Peggy to join his act when it plays Washington.

POPULAR REQUEST. BUT REALLY. Those tornadoes on wheels, the Reynolds' Skating Girls, have given Shoreham Terrace-ites so many thrills that they'll be held over next week "by popular request." Some skating lingo. The girls who whirl in the air are called "fliers" and the ones who support them are "lifters." The stunt where the lifter spins in one direction and the flier in another is a "swivel," and rated as the hardest of skating tricks.

HANDSOME McNUTT: Heads turned eargerly as Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner of the Philippines, strolled into the Mayflower Lounge yesterday and started to hold an informal levee. One group of sweet young things was sure as could be that the handsome McNutt was a Hollywood celebrity. Fame, it's wonderful.

NEPTUNE PREVIEW: After attending a rehearsal of the Four Girls of note (see picture above) we're sure these smart misses are going to be a fine addition to the Neptune Room. Particularly surprising is Dolice Scott, who smacks a string bass about 2 feet taller than herself, also "goes to town" on the slide trombone.

VACTIONERS. Lew Berman (Rainbow Room) is going to up-State New York for a week or so of golfing and swimming. Durward Bowersox will return to Rainbow this week-end after his hospital vacation . . . Manager Daniel Wathey, of the Roger Smith Hotel is down in North Carolina for a couple of weeks of fishing . . . Bamboo Gardens' Johnny Fichette is at the beach getting a quickie sun tan . . . Maestro Bill Strickland, of the Lotus, is doing the World's Fair up brown.

GLE. ECHO OUTLOOK: When the half-pint dynamo of swing, Little Joe Hart, leaves Glen Echo, the N. B. C. orchestra of Carl Loch will roll in on July 17. "Tiny" Hill, a wee mite of 350 pounds, and his band will arrive on July 31.

NEAT TRICKS: At Lounge Riviera: The way the orchestra shouts "Hallelujah" at the end of a dance group in the small hours. And the smaller the hour, the bigger the crowd in Riviera.

At Mayfair: The jolly, hail-fellow manners of Art Barker and his great obligingness in playing request numbers. Art and his trio have been in town for only a week, but they're already well known, well liked.

SIPPING AND SUPPING DEPARTMENT: You can get something they call a "Dervish Punch" in the Carlton cocktail lounge. Go ahead and order it—if you want to feel like the whirling dervish or his girl friend . . . There's imagination in those cold luncheons planned by the Hour Glass chef. Such refreshing items as pickled lamb's tongues and fresh shrimp in jelly . . . If you go down to Hall's outdoor garden, you'll never go wrong in getting yourself quantities of hardshell crabs, a stout hammer and some cold beer . . . The "plantation dinners" at O'Donnell's Farms are served with either plump pullets or pert ducklings as the piece de resistance . . . A popular item in the Uptown cocktail lounge is the planter's Punch. Bartender Bill makes it with Jamaica rum, floats a smidgeon of ruby port over the top of the drink . . . Madrillon is justifiedly proud of its broiled breast of guinea hen with Smithfield ham . . . There's something superlative about the fruit cocktails at Maryland Gardens. We think it's the generous amount of avocado.

PS-ST! Something exciting is going to happen at Hi Hat soon. And we don't mean Angie Rodante's anniversary party.

PIANO QUINS: Ken Foy (Metronome Room) was inevitably a pianist. He's one of five children all of whom play piano. He sleeps 12 hours a day, keeps a big scrapbook that has everything in it from match covers to baby teeth. Here y'are, Ken.

Petition Protests Rum Store in Luray

Special Dispatch to The Post

Luray, Va., July 6.—Several hundred names have been signed to a petition now being circulated in Luray against the establishment of an ABC store. Unless the petition has a counter-effect the store is expected to be opened here in August.

Slide Kills Md. Worker

Westminster, Md., July 6 (AP).—An earth slide on the Henrytown Hospital WPA sewer project today killed John G. Thomas, 28, colored workman employed by a Baltimore plumbing contractor. Rescue crews worked three hours before uncovering Thomas' body.

Rev. L. J. Flohr Rites Set Today in Thurmont

Special Dispatch to The Post

Thurmont, Md., July 6.—Funeral services for the Rev. Leonard J. Llohr, 79, pastor of the Thurmont and Rocky Ridge Church of the Brethren since his ordination in 1900, will be held here Friday.

In addition to carrying on his ministerial duties he was an employe for 51 years of the Western Maryland Railroad Co., retiring in 1932. Four sisters and two brothers survive.

Printer Hurt in Crash

ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF THREE-STORY BRICK DWELLING, TEN ROOMS, TWO BATHS, NO. 1928 SEVENTEENTH STREET NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6768, folio 75, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of parties secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on MONDAY, THE TENTH DAY OF JULY, 1939, AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 256 in Elias Heidenheimer's combination of lots in Square 151 as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 32 at folio 160; subject to and with a perpetual right of way for alley purposes over portion of Lot 248 fronting 4 feet on alley in rear by depth of 60 feet along west line of said lot and marked on subdivision as a private alley; subject to the right of redemption by the makers of the aforesaid deed of trust, their heirs and assigns, within a period of sixty days from the date of sale, not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust; subject to any and all liens created by conditional bills of sale for heating and other equipment, if any, and overdue water rentals; all other taxes and assessments to be adjusted to date of transfer of title.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one and two years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser and terms to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement, at such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Some time some one should compose a questionnaire based on the quirks of distribution in which unorthodox play succeeds. Contributor A. C. has a problem which would start it off nicely. He presents it this way:

Saturday afternoon I came in from playing golf, and was contemplating a soft drink, some crackers and cheese, when four friends of mine began playing contract at the next table. They are voracious players, but from my point of view they sometimes do queer things.

"Soon I saw North deal and heard him bid two no trump. The bidding then proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 NT.	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 NT.	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

"It sounded interesting. I turned around in my chair, and this is what I saw:

North	South
♠ A 5	♠ Q J 10 7 6
♡ A K Q 8	♡ 9 2
◇ A 5 4	◇ K Q 9 2
♣ A Q J 7	♣ 5 3

Here is the solution to the problem contributed by A. C.:

West held the king of clubs and two hearts and East the king of spades, guarded at least once. The play of the ace of clubs, followed by three rounds of hearts, loses, as West ruffs the third heart, on which South discards the losing club, and the trump king completes the set. Finessing the club queen on the first lead wins the contract.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

BLUEPRINT BIOGRAPHY: Arthur S. Flemming, new member of the Civil Service Commission (and resigning Director of the School of Public Affairs at American University) used to be a star-debater when he was a student at Ohio Wesleyan. Between his graduation from high school and his entrance into college, he worked for a year as a newspaper reporter. His main hobbies now are his two daughters, Elizabeth Ann who is 3 and Susan Harriet who is 5 months. A minor hobby of his is garden-puttering.

When the School of Public Affairs organized late afternoon courses in 1934 in in-service training, 84 Federal employes (all classifications) signed up for the courses. This past semester the registration leaped to 1,200 Federal students.

Mr. Flemming (he will not be called Prof. Flemming) has an M. A. degree from American and a law degree from George Washington University.

OUT AND IN: W. E. Crouch and F. P. Callaghan, both of the Biological Survey, are a little dizzy this morning. While they were in San Francisco attending the convention of the International Association of Game, Fish, and Conservation Comissioners, the reorganization plan rocked the Nation. When they returned yesterday, it was to find that the Biological Survey had been shifted from the Department of Agriculture to the Interior Department. The convention, by the way, lasted from June 28 to June 30. A lot can happen in two days.

Others who were present from the Survey at the Frisco parley were Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, A. M. Day, Frederick C. Lincoln, and Leo Couch.

ANOTHER TANGLE Angle: You still have to page the Survey at Agriculture, however. Tired telephone operator says they haven't "moved over yet."

IT ONLY TOOK Artist Lynn Bogue Hunt of New York two or three days to finish the original drawing for the new "duck stamp" which went on sale July 1, but a board composed of Government ornithologists had to check on the authenticity of its feathers. Mr. Hunt's picture of a family of teals passed the board without a scratch. This isn't always the case, however. On two different occasions since the series was inaugurated in 1934, the pictures had to be returned for corrections.

The current stamp is the sixth in the group. Considering there are between 25 and 30 species of ducks there won't be any duplications for a long time yet. In spite of the fact that they're called "duck stamps," a goose got on the one issued in 1936. This is cricket because any migratory water fowl can be used in the series.

SEVEN HUNDRED pairs of ears in 33 States listened to the radio series broadcast last year at Rocky Mountain National Park, and then asked for more. Tomorrow morning at 10:45 on WRC, the series will be continued with a play-by-play account of the home life of beavers. And next Saturday, by turning the dial, you can take "A Stroll Among the Trees."

You'll be listening to it from an arm-chair, of course, but Park Naturalist Howard R. Greeg will be giving you your information hot off the trail as he conducts a field party up hill and down.

IT'S EXAMINATION time again. Over at the Civil Service Commission, they're announcing a new set of competitives.

Here they go: Senior inspector, $2,600 a year; inspector, $2,000 a year (optional branches are ship construction and engineering materials); junior inspector, aircraft, $1,620 a year. Employment is in the Navy Department, for duty in the field.

Farm agent, $1,800 a year, Indian Field Service, Department of the Interior.

Meteorologist, $3,800 a year; associate meteorologist, $3,200 a year; and assistant meteorologist, $2,600 a year, Weather Bureau, Department of Agriculture.

Junior bank examiner, $2,000 a year, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Closing dates July 24 and July 27.

THE JUDGES have finally been selected for that quiz program which will be presented July 13 by the Federal Employes Playhouse at its performance July 13—in the Agriculture auditorium.

The gentlemen on the bench will be Daniel O'Flaherty and Joseph D. Cooper, of Agriculture; and Henry G. Nolda, of Veterans Administration. You may send in your own questions by writing to Room 604, 710 Fourteenth stret.

Masters of ceremonies will be Gordon Hittenmark, WRC and Lee Everett, WMAL.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XXXI

They crept from row to row. This time he saw the glowing eyes before Buck saw them. He advanced down the row as before. The shotgun was a delight to handle. It was lighter than the old muzzle-loader, not so long, and easier to sight. He shot with a feeling of confidence. Again Buck called him back and he retreated. But though they combed the rows carefully and worked around the west end of the field and flashed the light down the corn rows from the south, there were no more bright green eyes.

M. K. Rawlings

Buck said aloud, "That's the crop for tonight. Let's see what we got."

Both shots had killed. One was a dog-fox and one a vixen, fat with Baxter corn.

Buck said, "Now they got a litter off in a den some'eres, but they'll be part-growed and kin make out by theirselves. Come fall, we'll have us a fox-chase."

The foxes were gray and in good condition, with full brushes. Jody carried them in complacently.

Approaching the cabin, they heard a commotion. Ma Baxter shrieked.

Buck said, "Your Ma wouldn't romp on your Pa while he was ailin', would she?"

"She don't never romp on him with nothin' but talkin'."

"I'd a heap ruther a woman tore me down with a lighter'd knot, than speakin' sharp."

Close to the cabin, they heard Penny shout.

Buck said, "Why, boy, the woman's killin' him."

Jody said, "Somethin' after the fawn!"

The yard itself was not often disturbed by anything more dangerous than the small varmints. Buck hurdled the fence and Jody vaulted it after him. A light shone from the doorway. Penny stood there dressed only in his breeches. Ma Baxter was beside him, flapping her apron. Jody thought he saw a dark form move off into the night toward the grape arbor, followed by the dogs, baying.

Penny called, "Hit's a bear! Git him! Git him 'fore he makes the fence!"

Jody shouted, "Give me the fire-pan, Buck, and you do the shootin'."

HE FELT FRIGHTENED and incompetent. They exchanged on the run. At the fence the bear turned at bay. He lashed at the dogs. His eyes and teeth shone in the spasmodic light. Then he turned to clamber over the fence. Buck shot. The bear tumbled. The dogs broke into a tumult. Penny came running. The light showed a kill. The dogs made a pretense of having done the job, and bayed and attacked proudly. Buck was smug.

He said, "This feller'd not of come around if he'd knowed they was a Forrester on the place."

Penny said, "He smelt things set him so wild, he'd not of noticed the hull tribe of you."

"What was that?"

"Jody's fawn and the new honey."

"Did you git to the fawn, Pa? Oh Pa, the fawn ain't hurt?"

"He never got to him. The door by luck was closed. Then he must of winded the honey and come traipsin' around by the stoop. I figgered it was you-all comin' back and I didn't pay no mind until he knocked the cover offen the honey. I could of shot him down right at the door, but here I was and no gun. All me and Ory could do was holler, but I reckon it was the fiercest hollerin' he'd ever run into, and he lit out."

Jody was weak at thought of what might have happened to the fawn. He ran to the shed to comfort it, and found it drowsy and unconcerned. He stroked it gratefully, then returned to the men and the bear. It was a 2-year-old male, in good condition. Penny insisted on helping with the dressing. They dragged the carcass to the back yard and skinned it out by the light of the fire-pan; quartered it and hung the meat in the smokehouse.

Buck said, "Now I will beg a pail o' the fat for Ma, to make her some bear grease and cracklin's. There's things she jest won't fry without bear grease, and the old soul says bear cracklin's and sweet pertaters rests so easy on her gums. Why, them four teeth o' hers could chomp on 'em all day."

Ma Baxter developed generosity with the plenitude.

She said, "And a big piece o' the liver goes to pore leetle Fodderwing. Hit'll give him strength."

Penny said, "I'm only sad this ain't old Slewfoot. My, wouldn't I love to draw the knife down his thievin' backbone."

The foxes could wait to be skinned until morning, for the meat would be used only to cook for the chickens, with pepper for a tonic.

Buck said, "Did old man Easy Ozell ever ask you to come eat one o' his fox pilaus?"

Penny said, "He done so. And I said, 'No, thank you, Easy, I'll jest wait until you cook one o' your dogs.'"

Penny was thriving on the excitement. He sat on his heels beside Buck and exchanged tales of foxes and dogs, of strange foods and the stranger people who ate them. The yarns for once failed to hold Jody's interest. He was anxious for every one to go to bed. At last Penny's new-found energy failed him, and he washed his hands and cleaned his skinning knife and joined his wife in the bed. Buck was wound up to talk half the night. Jody knew the signs and pretended to go to sleep on his pallet on the floor of his small room. Buck had been occupying his bed, his long hairy legs hanging unsupported a quarter of its length. Buck sat on the edge of the bed and talked until the lack of an audience discouraged him. Jody heard him yawn and pull off his trousers and lie down on the corn shucks mattress on the creaking slats.

He waited until a deep rumbling snore sounded. Then he slipped from the house and groped his way to the shed. The fawn stood up at the sound. He felt his way to it and threw his arms around its neck. It nuzzled his cheek. He picked it up and carried it to the door. It had grown so fast in the brief time he had had it, that it was all he could do to carry it. He tiptoed into the yard with it and set it down. It followed him willingly. He crept into the house, keeping one hand on its smooth, hard head to guide it. Its sharp heels clicked on the wooden floor. He lifted it again and stepped cautiously past his mother's bedroom and into his own.

He lay down on his pallet and drew the fawn down beside him. He often lay so with it in the shed, or under the live oaks in the heat of the day. He lay with his head against its side. Its ribs lifted and fell with its breathing. It rested its chin on his hand. It had a few short hairs there that prickled him. He had been cudgeling his wits for an excuse to bring the fawn inside at night to sleep with him, and now he had one that could not be disputed. He would smuggle it in and out as long as possible, in the name of peace. On the inevitable day when he should be discovered, what better reason was there than the menace—the constant danger, he would point out—of bears?

There was not a field of sweet potatoes, but an endless sea. Judy looked behind him at the rows he had finished hoeing. They were beginning to make a respectable showing, but the rows unfinished seemed to stretch to the horizon. The July heat simmered on the earth. The sand was scalding to his bare feet. The leaves of the sweet potato vines curled upward, as though the dry soil, and not the sun, were burning them. He pushed back his palmetto hat and wiped his face with his sleeve. By the sun, it must be nearly 10 o'clock. His father had said that if the sweet potatoes were hoed by noon, he might go in the afternoon to see Fodder-wing, and get a name for the fawn.

The fawn lay in the hedge-row in the shade of an elderberry bush. It had been almost a nuisance when he began his work. It had galloped up and down the sweet potato beds, trampling the vines, and knocking down the edges of the beds. It had come and stood in front of him in the direct path of his hoeing, refusing to move, to force him to play with it. The wide-eyed, wondering expression of its first weeks with him had given way to an alert awareness. It had as wise a look as old Julia. Jody had almost decided that he would have to lead it back and shut it up in the shed, when of its own accord it sought the shade and lay down.

IT LAY WATCHING HIM from the corner of one big eye, its head in its favorite position, twisted back against its own shoulder. Its small white tail flicked now and then and its spotted hide rippled, shaking off flies. If it would stay quiet, he could make better time at the hoeing. He liked to work with it near. It gave him a comfortable feeling that he had never had before in the company of a hoe. He attacked the weeds again lustily, and was pleased with himself to see his own progress. The rows fell away behind him. He whistled tunelessly.

He had thought of many names for the fawn, had called it by each in turn, but not one pleased him. All the names by which the dogs of his acquaintance had been called, Joe and Grab, Rover and Rob, on down the line, all were inadequate. It had such a light way of walking, "tippy-toed" as Penny put it, that he would have named it Twinkletoes and called it "Twink" for short, but that reminded him of Twink Weatherby and spoiled the name. "Tip" itself would not do, because Penny had once had an ugly and vicious bull-dog by the name. Fodder-wing would not fail him. He had a great gift for naming his own pets. He had Racket the racoon, Push the 'possum, Sqeak the squirrel, and Preacher, the lame red-bird, who sang from his perch, "Preacher, preacher, preacher!" Fodder-wing said the other red-birds came to him from the forest to be married, but Jody had heard other red-birds sing the same words. At any rate it was a good name.

He had done a great deal of work in the two weeks since Buck had gone home. Penny's strength was returning, but every now and then he became faint and dizzy and his heart pounded. Penny was sure it was the lingering effect of the rattlesnake venom, but Ma Baxter believed it was the fever, and dosed him with lemon-leaf tea. It was good to have him up and about again, with the cold fear gone. Jody tried to remember to spare him. It was so good to have the fawn, to be relieved of the dull lonely ache that had overtaken him so often, that he was filled with gratitude for his mother's tolerance of its presence.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Army Ready For Anything, Woodring Says

Billion-Dollar Program Will Meet Eventualities, He Holds

Secretary of War Woodring said yesterday the near one billion dollars which Congress has appropriated for the War Department this year, will place the Army in "a position of readiness for any eventuality."

In a statement analyzing the financial status of the defence program, Woodring declared that a total of $961,000,000 has been made available to the War Department for expenditure in the current fiscal year, and said an "anticipated" $25,000,000 more will be provided for acquiring reserve stocks of critical war materials.

Meanwhile, Congress acted on several measures designed to round out the defense program. The Senate passed and sent to the House legislation authorizing the Secretary of War to purchase additional land at 14 Army posts. Five million dollars would be spent under the bill to provide additional bombing and target ranges and areas needed for training. Fort George G. Meade, Md., would be enlarged by 10,000 acres under the bill.

The House passed and sent to the White House a bill to enlarge the War Department general staff from 88 to 102 members. It would provide general officer rank for all assistant chiefs of staff, permitting the director of military intelligence to be a general in recognition of its increased importance.
